Cannon Range of Paris Revealed as Main German Objective, Says Simonds

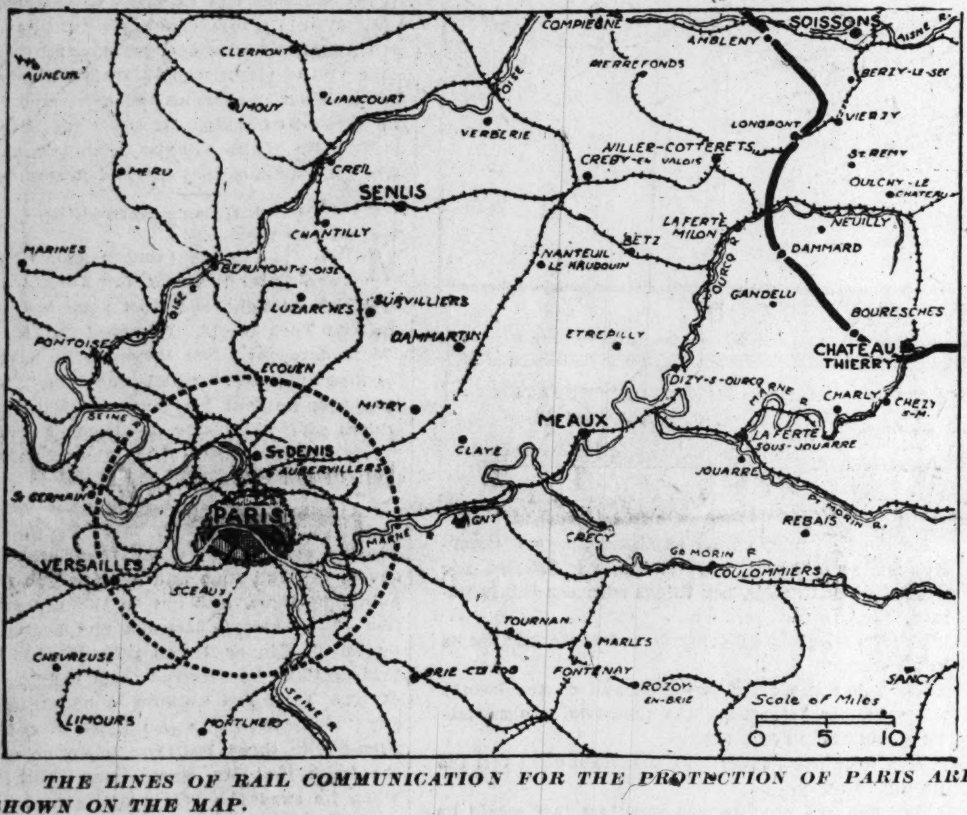
The Post-Dispatch's Military Critic Holds That Attack During the Past Week on Oise-Mont Didier Front Shows Teuton Plan Now Is to Get Big Guns Trained on City and Force French to Make Peace to Avoid Destruction of Their Capital.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,
Author of "The Great War" and "They Shall Not Pass."

LAST Sunday the Germans opened on the front west of the Oise and between that river and Montdidier, their third operation directed toward Paris of the present campaign. The first was included in their greatest attack, that of March 21; the second led to the passage of the Aisne, and the arrival at the Marne, following the assault of May 27. Two weeks separate the last two, while the March stroke was followed after a little longer delay by their attack in Flanders.

It is the view of French military writers, now accepted in the allied world generally that the ultimate objective of the German offensive for 1918 is Paris. Some time before the end of the present campaign it is assumed to be the expectation and the plan of the German high command to reach the walls of the French capital, and, as a final threat to enforce their peace terms, give the French the choice between the destruction of their capital and a surrender on such conditions as Germany may then choose to offer.

Such an objective presupposes the decisive defeat of the French military establishment between Paris and the present front, the permanent immobilization of the British on their line between the Somme and the sea, and the failure of the Americans to arrive in numbers, and in condition to change the situation by restoring to the allies that superiority in numbers possessed by them up to the moment the collapse of Russia gave Germany a free hand in the west.



THE LINES OF RAIL COMMUNICATION FOR THE PROTECTION OF PARIS ARE SHOWN ON THE MAP.

Hope to Bombard Paris.

But, recognizing the apparent soundness of the French appraisal of German purpose, it is essential to point out at the outset that it is hardly likely that the Germans will henceforth occupy all their time and effort upon the front, which we may now call the Prussian front; on the contrary, we are almost certain to see others blows, like that which was struck in Flanders on April 9, designed to hold allied forces away from the main field of action and to achieve local successes which might contribute materially to the general weakening of allied morale.

Now, roughly speaking, the situation as it existed when the German attacked last Sunday was this: His immediate objective was the high ground just in front of him, south of Noyon and Lassigny, the last considerable elevation between himself and Paris. But his ultimate objective was the bank of the Oise, where the northern roads cross that stream north and south of Compeigne. If he could force a crossingk of the Oise between Compeigny and Creil, then the French center would have to retire, not merely out of all the high ground between the Oise and the Aisne, but out of the wooded ground about Compeigne, south of the Aisne, which extends along the north bank of the Nonette about Senlis and offers the last, but one, of the natural obstacles to an invader approaching Paris from the north. The last is the great forest south of the Nonette, but from the north bank of the Nonette the Germans would be within range of Paris with their siege guns and the city could be destroyed at will.

Plan of Enemy Strategy.

Once the German right wing, west of the Oise, had passed the river, south of the Aisne, that is about Compeigne, it would be possible for the center to advance and play its part, while at the proper moment the left flank, between Soissons and Chateau-Thierry, profiting by the retirement of the French center out of the high ground and woods from Villers Cotterets south of Soissons to the Oise, could push on over the level, open country, which saw the great battle of the Ourcq in September, 1914. As they stood on June 5, when their main advance was checked on the Soissons-Chateau-Thierry line, the Germans were hardly a dozen miles away from the northern corner of this battlefield, where Maunory defended Paris, and to which taxicabs brought French reserves in a critical hour.

You have, then, in brief, the situation. The first German attack, that of March 21, cleared the British and French out of the high ground west of the Oise and most, but not quite all of the good positions covering the western roads that come down from Belgium to Paris through Amiens and St. Quentin. The German attack of May 27 cleared the eastern roads which come down from Belgium, concentrate at Laon and then continue to Paris through Soissons, following the gap between Rheims and Soissons. At the close of these two attacks the French wings had been thrust wholly off the second line of defense of the French capital, and only the French center, between Soissons onto the Oise below Noyon, still held onto a small but vital fraction of this position. And with this attack begun last Sunday, the Germans undertook to turn the French center out of its position by advancing down the main roads to Paris west of the Oise and endeavoring to force the crossings of the Oise in the rear of the French center. Meantime the German forces which had made the drive across the Aisne from Laon contented themselves with holding their gains and organizing their strength for a new thrust, when their comrades west of the Oise had temporarily shot their bolt.

Whole Conception Is Revealed.

But with the attack of last Sunday the whole German conception began to be revealed in unmistakable clarity. Other blows to the north were conceivable, a sideshow toward Verdun might be looked for as an effort to draw French reserves eastward from the environs of Paris. But, unless they were prepared to surrender their major purpose, namely, to get Paris, or at least to advance near enough to the French capital to destroy it, the Germans could not be expected to spend many more divisions in minor enterprises.

We may say, then, that any persistence of the Germans in their drive west of the Oise will abolish the element of surprise and put the allied high command in complete possession of the necessary facts on which to base their answer to German strategy. This could not be the case as long as it remained open to question whether the German objective was the channel or the French capital. The moment when the assailants' true and full purpose is disclosed is the moment when the defender really begins his operations.

Originally the French high command expected an attack where the blow of May 27 fell, namely, between Rheims and Soissons, and against this it

The Problem of Ireland and the Way to Get Her Back Into the War Discussed

By T. P. O'CONNOR.

Why the Irish, Who Went Into the Struggle With No Less Enthusiasm Than England, Have Quit Cold Explained in a Way That Americans Can Understand by Noted Publicist and Writer.

Kitchener and Carson, Two Inveterate Foes of Home Rule, Dominated the British Cabinet on This Issue, and So Discouraged the Irish Fighting Spirit That It Gradually Died Down.

This is the first of two articles on this subject that Mr. O'Connor has written for the Post-Dispatch and the New York World. Mr. O'Connor is a member of the British Parliament, and is widely known as a publicist and writer. He has always been an ardent advocate of Home Rule, and the Post-Dispatch presents his statement because his knowledge of the Home Rule view point is indisputable.

Religious Discriminations Were Made Against Irish Regiments, Says O'Connor

TAKE for instance the treatment of the 16th Division—the division for the creation of which Redmond and Devlin had the main responsibility; 98 per cent of the rank and file were Nationalist and Catholic. Application after application was made for the appointment of Nationalists and Catholics as officers. They were refused and yet again refused until it worked out that, in a division 98 per cent Nationalist and Catholic, 85 per cent of the officers were Protestants and Unionists. Some even were Orangemen; some were men who had gone up and down England as the paid agents and orators of the Orange party, reviling the country of their birth and attempting to poison the English mind against giving her liberty.—T. P. O'CONNOR.

By T. P. O'CONNOR.

TO get Ireland back into the war; to get some more of her gallant sons to join in fighting for the freedom of the world; that is the problem which confronts today the statesmanship of the allied countries. Let me see if I can find a way out of this now difficult and complicated problem.

And, first, let us see why it is that Ireland is out of the war; for if we discover the reason we may find the way for solving the problem. Ireland was not always out of the war. This is a central fact of the situation which is constantly lost sight of; and perhaps in some circles in America almost as much as in England. Mr. Redmond was the very first man, following on the speech of Sir Edward Grey, in August, 1914, to pledge the adhesion of Ireland to England in this war, on the ground that England was fighting the battle of freedom and that Ireland could not take any other side but that of freedom. That declaration of Mr. Redmond, coming suddenly, made without consulting Irish opinon, without consultation even with Mr. Redmond's chief colleagues, who were absent in Ireland, was, nevertheless, accepted by Ireland with enthusiasm; and the enthusiasm translated itself into acts as rapidly as in England. Thousands of our young men rushed to the training camps—and they went there accompanied by their local leaders, by their priests, by crowds, by bands, by processions. The Irish in Great Britain—an important section of the Irish race often forgotten, though they number nearly two millions and a half of people and are fourth of the entire population in the two great cities of Liverpool and Glasgow—acted with even greater promptitude, and, long before conscription was enacted in Great Britain, had sent 100,000 men to the army. With Ireland's 175,000 men, this made a total of 275,000 Irishmen from the British Isles.

Why the Irish Recruited.

A further and even more astonishing symptom of Ireland's change of heart was that "God Save the King"—banished from every Irish Nationalist gathering for more than a century because it was regarded as a sign of submission to the denial to Ireland of her right of self-government—was sung at Irish Nationalist gatherings; I myself presided at a meeting of Irish Nationalists in London where it was sung for the first time in the history of the race.

Why did the Irish thus rally to the army? There was, first, the sense that England was on the side of freedom; then came the horrors of Belgium; then sympathy with France; then the instinctive hatred of everything like German militarism in Irish hearts. I may give as an amusing instance of that later feeling that several shops were broken into, mobbed and destroyed in Dublin, in the belief that they belonged to Germans; as a matter of fact, they were run by Russian Jews. But the overmastering motive undoubtedly was that in fighting for the freedom of Europe they might have felt they were fighting for the freedom of Ireland.

Beginnings of the Disillusion.

When did this spirit receive its first blow? Undoubtedly in the six weeks that were allowed by the Asquith administration to intervene between the passage of the home rule bill through all its stages in the Legislature and its final placing on the statute book by the signature of the King. Those, like myself, who went through those hateful and fatal six weeks are unlikely to forget the sorrowful experience. Day after day Redmond pleaded that this last small, almost formal step, should be taken, so that Ireland might be assured of its character of freedom; he pleaded in vain. Sir Edward Carson, the Orange leader, who had made all the preparations for the Orange rebellion, was appealed to from many quarters—from the King, who called a conference at Buckingham Palace, where again Carson refused to budge an inch; by the Speaker of the House of Commons, who called Redmond and Carson into his room to seek compromise, and who was answered by Carson in loud curses and passionate declarations never to yield to home rule. The Cabinet had admitted Lord Kitchener into its ranks at the beginning of the war, and that obstinate pipeclay Tory soldier opposed home rule, and so, weeks stretched on and on, until, at the end of the sixth week, the bill received the royal signature. I have always held that the Constitutional Party never quite caught up with the six weeks of fatal delay.

The Factors of the Rebellion.

For during these six weeks all the extremists, both in Ireland and in this country, had been at work in a soil made fruitful for them again by Sir Edward Carson. The spectacle of rebellion, organized for years in Ulster, openly, defiantly, without any hindrance, with arms brought in from Germany, against the law, with officers recruited from the British army aweing Parliament, had produced the profound and natural conviction in Ireland that the gun, after all, was the most trustworthy weapon for deciding the wavering mind of England. The Nationalist volunteer movement, springing, as it were, from the ground in a night, burst into full life, and more than 100,000 national volunteers were organized to defend the threatened liberties of Ireland. Thus, for the first time since 1867, the old gospel of the revolutionary instead of the constitutional methods began to haunt the Irish mind; the work of O'Connell, of Butt, of Parnell, of Redmond—and equally, it must be added, the work of Gladstone, Morley and the other leaders of liberal thought in England—was largely undone, and rebellion became the obsession of many of the young minds of the country. This delay of six weeks in giving to Ireland the victory she had won after nearly 50 years of constitutional effort thus fell on ground already well prepared for other than constitutional methods. One further factor acted like a spark on this powder magazine of resentment and disappointment. A number of officers in the Curragh Camp, Ireland's great military center—led by Gen. Gough, a name painfully familiar in the last few weeks—organized a mutiny against home rule; and this audacious attempt to reduce orderly, law-abiding and constitutional England to the level of the old Spanish republic and the pronunciamento—created as intense resentment in England among the working classes and all Liberals as in Ireland; but the rebellious officers were allowed to retire not only without punishment, but with the honors of war. It is scarcely necessary to say that the officers were adherents of Sir Edward Carson. It is no wonder, under the influence of such events, that the Irish youths whispered under their breath, "The gun! The gun!"

The Chapter of Blunders.

And yet, curiously enough, in spite of these precautions and in spite of the active work of the extremists in Ireland and in America, there was little apparent sign of any change of heart in Ireland. Recruiting still went on; the Irish regiments were undergoing rapid training in the different camps, and they were being turned into robust and skilful soldiers. But with stupidity even the gods fight in vain—and stupidity, though it may be removed from some of the high places in England, always lurks and jumps out from its dark recesses whenever any popular movement has to be stabbed. While Ministers change, the bureaucrat remains; and in no place was bureacracy so proudly and powerfully enthroned as in the War Office. Unfortunately, too, the War Office had then at its head one of the most stubborn and most powerful reactionaries in the British empire—Lord Kitchener. He was surrounded by officers of the army whose spirit was the same as his own and who embodied all the arrogance, narrowness, hatred of popular causes and suspicion of Ireland which constitute the same kind of menace to the security of the British empire as junkers who threaten the future of Germany. Lord Kitchener did not take long to give notice of the spirit in which Ireland was to be received. Redmond, Dillon and Devlin went to him a day or two after the declaration of war, offered to him 100,000 of the Nationalist volunteers and asked him to equip and train them. They were first to be used for home defense only; but who can doubt that, once these men had donned the khaki, 70 per cent of them would have gone to the war? Lord Kitchener blankly refused. He, indeed, made an answer which deserves to take foremost place in the greatest stupidities of the world's history.

"Give me 3000 from Ireland," said Lord Kitchener, "and I will say 'Thank you!' Give me 5000, and I will say, 'Well done!'"

I may add as a pendant to this memorable saying that when Mr. Dillon, who has been 50 years in Irish political life, ventured to say that he knew Ireland better than Lord Kitchener, that distinguished soldier turned on him his basilisk eye and said that he knew Ireland very well.

The Last Provocation.

Not the most active, the most venomous sergeant of the Clan-na-Gael ever proved so tremendous a recruiting sergeant for the rebellion as the head of the English War Office. The rebellion in Ireland was the work of Lord Kitchener far more than of poor Pearse and the other men who died for it, unless, indeed, one allow Sir Edward Carson's claim for the supreme position.

I am only at the beginning of the long story, and I have not time to tell the whole at the moment. Take, for instance, the treatment of the Sixteenth Division—the division for the creation of which Redmond and Devlin had the main responsibility; 98 per cent of the rank and file were Nationalist and Catholic. Application after application was made for the appointment of Nationalists and Catholics as officers; they were refused, and yet again refused, until it finally worked out that in a division 98 per cent Nationalist and Catholic, 85 per cent of the officers were Protestant and Unionist. Some even were Orangemen; some were men who had gone up and down England as the paid agents and orators of the Orange party, reviling the country of their birth and attempting to poison the English mind against giving her liberty. One young Nationalist hung around for months trying to get a commission. Devlin, one of the creators of the Sixteenth Division, backed the application, but was refused. It will be no surprise to my readers that this young man became one of the most active and violent of the leaders in the rebellion, and only escaped with his life by the intervention of Devlin. Take another instance: when the Irish regiments went into battle and distinguished themselves by their conspicuous bravery, their names were deliberately omitted from the bulletins by the Orange gang in the War Office that ran the army.

Then came the climax to this long chapter of criminal blunders. Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Ulster rebellion, was admitted to the Cabinet. By unconscious humor the rebellious leader, as Attorney-General for England, was created the chief custodian of the law. Even a worse outrage was attempted in Ireland. If there were one man in Ireland who could be described as an even narrower and more virulent Orangeman than Carson, it was James Campbell. It was proposed to get rid of the excellent Lord Chancellor then in office, Sir Igantius O'Brien, a Catholic and a Nationalist, and to put Campbell in his place. The Lord Chancellor in Ireland is not merely the head of the judiciary, but he is one of the chief members of the executive; with force of character he may be the most potent member of the executive. This was too much even for the long-suffering English Liberals; they joined the Irish in a protest and a threat, and the appointment was withdrawn. Compensation was, however, found for the ex-rebel, for he became Attorney-General for Ireland, with handsome emoluments amounting to something like $30,000 a year.

The Rewards from Rebellion.

Thus doth rebellion—but on the right side—prosper in Ireland. One rebel Attorney-General for England; the other rebel Attorney-General for Ireland. The reader will now understand the conditions which produced the rebellion. There were other factors, of course—German intrigue, propaganda and money from America, the soreness left in Dublin by the defeat of a great strike, and the visions which had begun to haunt many Irish minds, especially among the young, with the rebirth of the Irish nation, through the restoration of the land to the people and the expulsion, after so many centuries, of the feudal landlords. The rebellion was not in itself very serious as a military proposition; only 2000 joined in Dublin, and it was put down, of course, as soon as England was able to bring her troops across the channel. By this time the whole unfortunate affair might have been partially at least forgotten but for the cruel incidents by which its defeat was followed. Tried in secret, in prison and by the summary method of a courtmartial, 15 men, mostly poetic youths, were executed, also in secret. Several people were murdered by an officer afterward declared to be insane, and now, I believe, already at liberty; among them a well-known publicist, Sheehy Skeffington, who was not in the rebellion and was known as a pacifist.

The whole soul of Ireland was stirred to its depths, as the soul of man has always been touched by the execution of an enthusiast for an idea. In a night a nation that had ben friendly—indeed, the friendliness to the war and to the policy of Redmond, was still so strong that the rebellion was condemned by a large maporty of Irish Nationalists—a nation that backed the war with something of the old enthusiasm, in spite of all the rebuffs—in a night this nation was transformed from friendliness to hate, burning, reckless, blind to everything—to the war, to the future interests of Ireland, to the scaffold—in the desire to strike back the cruel blow that had been inflicted on her.

Ireland, in short, saw red; and thus, in an hour, all the work of reconciliation between the two people which had been going on steadily for 40 years was undone.

The Next Blunder Marked the Climax.

Looking on aghast and for a moment helpless before this ruin of her hopes, the Irish constitutional leaders set themselves promptly to the task of trying to restore the fabric again. They found an equal readiness on the part of the British Ministers to make another attempt to settle the question of home rule, so negotiations were started for a compromise between Orange Ulster and the rest of Ireland. Mr. Lloyd George was chosen by the Ministry to conduct the negotiations. He drew up a scheme of compromise, the main principles of which were that home rule should be immediately set up, but that for the period of the war six of the counties of Ulster should be excluded from the jurisdiction of the Parliament in Dublin and should remain under the Imperial Parliament.

Much controversy has arisen since the proposal as to whether it was or was not a surrender of the rights of Ireland as a united nation; into that question it is not now necessary to enter. At the time, too, there was considerable dissatisfaction, and naturally, for of all the Nationalists of Ireland, those of Ulster stand foremost. The only minority in Ireland that is really persecuted for religious opinion are the Catholics of Ulster; in

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Marriage of Drafted Men.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your issue of June 4 you quote a Mr. George Logan on the subject of "Bridegrooms Here Denied Exemption," in which he states that some 700 men who were married since the declaration of war had been denied exemption in much the same manner as though they had been caught in the act of rifling the safe and had been punished accordingly.

Everyone seems to find it popular to take a fling at the men of draft age. They are ordered into military service, are told what occupations they may engage in and the ones they may not, and as regards marriage, it is practically denied them, as most of those who would marry in the ordinary course of events are restrained by the example made of some of those who did marry, for excellent personal reasons, I judge, and were forced to go to the cantonment in spite of wife and child, either existent or expected.

There is no uniformity for governing the classification of these men, some boards allowing deferred classification if affidavits are produced to show engagement prior to the declaration of war are produced or other evidence that shows it was not a "slacker marriage;" while some boards scoff at the same evidence, saying as one board member was heard to say, "Oh, anyone can get those," meaning the affidavits, mentioned previously, regarding engagements to marry; while still others request that you show the announcement card relative to engagement to marry, apparently forgetting that poor people do not bother with such nonsense. As a result a good many of these men who married in good faith and were entitled to every consideration shown to a married man of family have been sent to camp or are held in Class 1.

If marriage is to remain an institution in this country and kept at somewhere near normal to help restore the population lost in war more consideration should be shown to men of draft age who in the ordinary course of events see fit to marry and especially when they have or expect a child as by far the greater part of the marriages contracted are by men between 21 and 31.

They undoubtedly have as much right to contract marriage in the draft age as has anyone at any age. Of course this is not denied them, but they are entitled to the same classification as any married man irrespective of when married.

In a newspaper quotation of a letter written by Secretary of War Baker to Mr. Charles Everett Hughes (Jan. 30, 1918) of the New York Draft Appeal Board, the Secretary of War is quoted as follows: "That the effect of the selective draft law was not to suspend the institution of marriage among men of draft age." However, this is the effect it is having on most men of draft age, who, knowing they will not receive the same consideration as men who happened to be married at an earlier period, are refraining from marriage, while the few who for private reasons find it expedient to marry do so with heavy heart.

Some ironclad ruling should be made to cover this point so that any man of draft age in the United States who could read English would know just where he stood in this respect and would not have to wait for individual rulings from thousands of draft boards, each giving their own interpretation to this phase of a most vital task.

Work of Red Cross Knitters.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Some time ago Mrs. Reitz of 2618 Potomac street, who is doing quite a bit of knitting for the Red Cross, put in a pair of socks she made, her name and address. On the 24th of May last she received a postal card as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Reitz—I thought you might be interested to know the lucky fellow who received the pair of socks you made. We will be leaving soon, and expect to be in France in June. Respectfully,

"JAMES M. SULLIVAN,
"Company E, 353d Infantry, Camp Mills, N. Y."

I am sure this ought to convince some of the doubtful Thomases that belittle the work of the Red Cross, claiming that the boys at the front do not receive things intended for them. I surely think the work this society is doing merits praise and should be encouraged by all loyal Americans, and I know it is by the majority of them. Especially those have boys at the front and read some of their letters they write home and hear what they have to say. Every one we have received yet from our boys have only a good word for the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. and K. C.

GEO. L. GERBER.

TO DIRECTOR-GENERAL McADOO

A delegation of representative men of the Mississippi Valley is now in Washington to offer you all the resources of the valley states for the winning of the war.

These valley representatives are not seeking special benefits for any state or any community of the valley. They are not trying to promote any special commercial or industrial interest. Their object is to harness the productive capacity of the valley for war work.

As a means of utilizing the vast resources of this rich and resourceful section of the country they urge you to put its great waterways to work.

No one knows better than you the necessity of maintaining maximum production and prompt delivery in order that the maximum strength of the United States may be put in the war at the earliest possible time. No one knows better than you that the putting in of the maximum strength of this energetic and resourceful people at the earliest possible time will mean not only the winning but the shortening of the war, with inestimable saving of blood and treasure. In this desperate struggle we cannot afford to neglect one resource which would contribute to victory or shorten the war one hour.

No one knows better than you, Mr. McAdoo, that the condition essential to maximum production and prompt delivery of war supplies is adequate transportation.

No one knows better than you that our present transportation resources are inadequate to maintain maximum production. Under the stress of war production the railroad system of the country cannot be made adequate. With all the money and the productive capacity that can be devoted to the construction of railroad equipment, the railroad system alone will not be adequate during the war. As a matter of fact, the railroads alone can never catch up with the ordinary transportation needs of this country. We cannot expect to do more under the best conditions than approach our war needs.

Before the war, under private control, railroad transportation was never adequate to the needs of industry and commerce. Through their enormous financial resources and their powerful influence the railroads have crushed competitive river traffic. Their object was wholly selfish. They wanted a monopoly of transportation. They did not want the rate-regulating competition of river traffic. They wanted to control business and rates in their own interest. Wherever river traffic came in competition with railroad traffic the railroad rates were reduced to a ruinous basis to put the rivers out of business.

Through railroad extravagance and high financiering, followed by resentful legislation, our railroad system and its equipment were woefully inadequate to the needs of the country when we entered the war.

No one knows better than you the conditions that confronted the Government when it had to meet the transportation demands of war production. There was a shortage of cars; there was a shortage of motive power; there was inefficiency and gross waste, on account of the exploitation of the railroads for private interests and on account of competition. The result was a transportation crisis, causing an industrial paralysis at a time when maximum productive activity was necessary.

On account of the shortage of cars and motive power, there was a shortage of coal when a maximum of coal supply was necessary. When every hour of productive activity was of immeasurable value in the desperate race to construct ships, manufacture munitions of war and to get them to the front, the factories were idle, the railroad yards were congested; war work waited for the inadequate railroads to catch up with war business.

Under the persistent and consistent policy of the private interests that controlled the railroads, there was built up a system of transportation which tended to move all the freight in one direction to a few favored destinations. The transportation system was like a huge bottle with a small neck, all of the lines converging to a narrow strip of coast line in the northeastern part of the country. Trunk lines were paralleled to the Northeast, because traffic was forced in that direction. Other utilities, river and rail, were largely neglected.

The result of this policy was that, when the pressing demand of war industry came, there was a congestion of industries, a congestion of transportation in the Northeast. The war industries in the East suffered from lack of coal, lack of labor, lack of raw material, lack of housing accommodation, because the railroads were unable to deliver the goods through the neck of the bottle.

This condition of transportation congestion and industrial interruption continues. Another crisis caused by car shortage, and coal shortage is threatened. The warning signals are out. What can be done to avert or mitigate the crisis?

The Mississippi Valley asks you to utilize the great system of waterways that nature has provided. The people of the Valley urge you to develop the vast possibilities of the rivers and the territory they drain.

The Mississippi River and its tributaries sweep by limitless coal fields. They pass the greatest grain fields in the world. They reach vast ore deposits. They reach forests of lumber; they tap industrial districts in the heart of coal fields which can be developed indefinitely.

The Fuel Administration has recognized the urgent requirement of the situation by prohibiting further industrial development in the East and Northeast except absolutely essential extensions. It is diverting industries to the West, where there is an abundance of coal and raw material and other unused resources. Diverting industries to the West, however, will not solve the transportation problem.

Unless a mode of transportation other than the railroads, utilizing other than congested Eastern harbors and terminals, is found and utilized, there must be an increased shortage of cars, an increased congestion of transportation on the lines now open to traffic. The other mode of transportation lies ready to your hand in the waterways of the Mississippi Valley. If these waterways are developed and utilized, they will take the coal to the industries and the product of the factories to the seaboard.

Can the waterways be utilized to advantage?

You have two answers to this question. One is the answer of men who, from long years of study, practical experience and operation, know all the conditions of river traffic. Their verdict is an unqualified endorsement of the plan to utilize the waterways.

On the other hand, you have the opinion of railroad managers and experts who know nothing about river traffic, and who by reason of their opposition as railroad men are prejudiced against any use of the rivers in competition or co-operation with the railroads.

The Inland and Coastwise Waterways Committee which you created to investigate the subject of the use of waterways unqualifiedly approves of the plan to use the Mississippi River. That committee is composed, as you know, of men of expert knowledge of the conditions of the rivers and of the essentials of successful waterways traffic. It includes Government engineers and practical river men who recommend and urge the creation of a barge service between St. Louis and New Orleans. On the authority of two Government engineers, Major-General W. M. Black and Brigadier-General Charles Keller, it guarantees an eight-foot channel during most of the year. Interruptions of traffic are slight—slighter as we will show by competent authority, than those of railroad traffic.

The barge service it recommends, which can be provided at an expenditure of $7,350,000, would carry 1,080,000 dead weight tons of freight and would return net earnings of $1,526,000, or 18 per cent on the investment. This would release about 20,000 freight cars.

In conjunction with the recommendation for the use of the Mississippi River, the committee urged the expenditure of $6,000,000 to provide for the use of the New York State Barge Canal, which has been done.

The railroad men who surround you by reason of your Director-Generalship of Railroads, have smothered the recommendation with regard to barge service on the Mississippi River.

The report of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Committee was referred by your railroad assistants to a committee of three railroad men. These men were John Howe Peyton, president of the N. C. & St. L. R. R., an avowed opponent of waterways traffic; Frank P. Bowes, vice president of the Illinois Central, one of the principal railroad competitors of the Mississippi River, and F. C. Reilly, freight manager of the Frisco, the business of whose road is seriously affected by the development of river traffic. This committee of railroad experts approved the recommendation for the use of the New York State Barge Canal, but rejected the recommendation for the use of the Mississippi River. Why?

Read their reasons. They consist of a series of "ifs," so ingeniously constructed that it would damn any transportation project that did not conform absolutely to the standard of perfection. It hints of obstructions which are common to all kinds of traffic, and grossly misrepresents the conditions of the channel between St. Louis and New Orleans.

In support of the statements of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Committee, Brigadier-General W. H. Bixby, president of the Mississippi River Commission and division engineer of the Western Division of the United States River and Harbor Works, directly and completely refutes the assertion of the railroad committee with regard to the channel. He proves from the records that the aggregate time between the reports of deficiency depth and the securing of over eight feet between St. Louis and Cairo has averaged less than 30 days a year; and of securing over 7 feet has averaged less than 12 days a year for five consecutive years. This means at the worst an eight-foot channel for more than 11 months a year and over 7 feet for all of the year except 12 days.

He proves from the records that in 14 years there have been only eight occasions when an 8-foot continuous channel was lacking, and only 21 days when the channel was less than 9 feet between Cairo and New Orleans. Gen. Bixby's statement ends with this pertinent paragraph:

> The above statement of facts shows that an 8-foot channel from St. Louis to Cairo and 9 feet from Cairo to New Orleans is practically dependent only upon the continuance of appropriations; and its continuous maintenance is as certain and regular as that of land travel. Moreover, it is much more difficult to sidetrack steamboats than it is to sidetrack railway cars, so that quick delivery of freight by water is much more probable than quick delivery of freight by rails.

With this damning evidence of misrepresentation of river traffic conditions, how can you accept the opinion of your railroad experts on the subject? Would you accept as conclusive the opinion of an expert on horses with regard to the efficiency of a gasoline motor in preference to the opinion of a motor expert?

We do not believe that you will accept the discredited opinion of railroad experts on the use of waterways.

We ask you, in view of the urgent need of the Government and of the overwhelming testimony of men that know as to the potential value of the waterways, to give the question your unbiased examination.

The War Department has recognized the value of the valley waterways to relieve car shortage, transportation congestion and coal shortage. It has ordered the dredging and improvement of the Illinois and Michigan Canal to six feet depth, for barge traffic. The purpose of this order is to connect the lakes and the industries of the North with the Mississippi River and the resources of the Mississippi Valley.

Of what avail will it be to improve the Illinois and Michigan Canal for the purpose of tapping the resources of the Mississippi Valley and giving an outlet for Northern products to the Gulf, if the Mississippi River itself is not utilized?

We do not hesitate to say that an impartial investigation of the subject will demonstrate beyond doubt that the development of the valley waterways with modern equipment and with rail and river connections will add tremendously to the productive capacity and the transportation facilities of the country.

If we cannot get to Berlin by rail, let us get there by river.

GREAT SILENCES.

WHAT is the silence of the dead for?

The dead are, for the most part, silent.

It is said that sometimes they speak to us. In dreams and visions, or in open communication, some few, to a few in the flesh have spoken.

But to the millions who would fain hear comes no word.

The great silence of the dead seems to mock them.

They have left off listening for voices that never come.

And what is the silence of God for?

The sages tell us that God has spoken.

In revelation, say they, behold His word.

Hear ye the voice of the Lord! they cry.

And in His works, they assure us, He is speaking loudly.

The heavens declare his glory, and He speaks in thunder, wind and storm. Also, the "still, small voice" is his continuous utterance

But to the most of men is He not silent?

They are so weak that His thunders pass them by because of their very loudness.

Or the "still, small voice" is drowned in their daily cares and earth noises.

Or His symbols and parables fall into minds that are deserts.

And the Voice fails to be heard by the sons of men.

Thus is the silence of God to men a verity.

For he that hears not is in the midst of a silence though sound be never so loud.

The silence of the dead and of God is to help thee, Oh man.

For couldst thou hear daily the wisdom of the dead and the all-wise counsels of deity, thou wouldst grow weak, as a child that is ever depending upon teacher or parent.

And it is necessary that even thy prayer should seem to remain unanswered.

And that out of the cloud and the darkness no light should shine and no word of encouragement come.

One by one thy friends, even the dearest, pass over into the silence.

And all thy wailing and yearning bring back no answer from them.

Or, if answer comes, it is vague, or fragmentary, or at long intervals, or under adverse conditions.

The great, stern rule is silence.

And when thou criest unto the Infinite Love and Intelligence, the skies are dumb. No hand is stretched forth to uphold thee. No whisper bids thee be of good cheer.

And even as thou prayest, temptation comes and the blackness of despair.

But fear not, and doubt not. God, and Nature, and the Dead will have thee be a man.

And nothing but their silence can make for manliness in thee.

Thou are to lean on none—not on mother, nor husband, nor wife, nor father, nor strong son, nor on the living dead, nor on the omnipresent God as one outside and apart.

The Great God is within, and man is of His very soul and substance.

Stand, then, alone, on the pinnacle and in the singleness and solitude.

Say thou, to the universe, or to the void, I stand, though all fall, I survive, though all die, I triumph, though all be conquered; I am, though all cease to exist.

And in so standing thou wilt find that all created and uncreated stand with thee.

For God loveth that which is steadfast, and in becoming steadfast thou takest hold on God.

Lean not on religion, nor on Nature, nor on humanity, nor on altruism, nor on kin, nor friends, nor wealth, or knowledge, nor things seen nor things unseen.

For the silence shall confront and confound thee as to all these.

The great silence of the dead and of the living; the void, the forgetting, the desertion, the separation, and the sifting out.

Sooner or later, everything that leans shall feel the prop give away.

For the soul must become steadfast that would be saved.

Naked, alone, and without support must thou hold thyself, dependent upon none.

And thou must learn not to pray, ere thy prayers shall be heard.

Face, then, the silence without awe and without misgiving.

For in the silence is strength inconceivable and greatness illimitable.

And when the last voice is cheerfully resigned by thee, thou hast attained thy true manhood and shalt hear the voice of God and all the lost voices.

ON LYING AND BEING FOUND OUT.

IT puzzles one to make out the purpose of the German Government in deceiving the German people in things which are bound to come out. Thus, there is no such thing as the Foch reserve on Tuesday, and on Wednesday it falls on the German advance at an exposed front and squashes it flat. There are some things in this life in which the degrees of evil are so finely shaded that only Satan himself could say which is the greater. Lying and being found out has always impressed us as a serious competitor for first place. There is, we think, something to be said for lying; but for lying and being found out we have never been able to make out the slightest justification. It defeats its own end. One day the great war we are in shall be regarded merely as a mental phenomenon. That is, why did the Germans will it? They could have prevented it. To arrive at the answer to that, we shall have first to determine why the German believes in lying and being found out. He does believe in it. If he did not, Gen Von Stein would not have said before the Reichstag the other day that there is no Foch reserves. He thought that would in some way serve. They all do. It is a mental characteristic. It has been the policy of the German Government throughout the war. The whole thing has been a lie. It originated in lying, and so shall it end. Lying, too, of the sort that is always found out. Gen. Von Stein will not get away with this lie about the Foch reserve. It will fool the Germans for a day. Then the people will be mad, and there will have to be another drive—so on to the certain end of lying being found out.

British View of America's Delay.

From the London Observer.

SOME pessimistic conclusions have been erroneously indulged in on this side. They were caused by reports of speeches in Congress which put the position at its worst in order to stimulate the American effort. They had that effect. America is in several ways late and knows it—knows it and hates it. America is late as we were late at a similar phase of our organization and for similar causes. All democracies at war are always sanguine and always late until they are roused as we were soon after the end of the first year, and as America is roused now. But let us remember where America has been both quick and great. In the last 12 months or so she has lent nearly £1,000,000,000 to Britain and the Allies. She linked up her navy in brotherhood with ours from the first weeks of intervention. And let us never forget that President Wilson has allowed American troops to be brigaded with ours on the present battlefield. • • •

The United States is speeding up the transport of men; coping surely at last with the great and vital problem of shipbuilding. The recent stoppages in the expected production of aircraft will probably be the last. As Mr. Bell shows, they were partly caused by concerted arrangements for the better advantage of the Allies. If America's airplanes on this side of the Atlantic are yet few, her airmen are numerous. Every day and night the unparalleled effort of a 100,000,000 of people is now lifting higher and higher a vast superstructure of war-organization above the foundations which have been laid. Within a few months America will provide all the aid that was expected to be ready now. Within a measurable time thereafter a mightier and a decisive strength will come into play, when Germany's most formidable war-energies are exhausted in the present campaign. It is for the Allies on this side of the Atlantic to hold on and fight on, knowing that the end is sure.

Mayor Hylan's Retreat.

From the New Republic.

MORE than seven months ago, when running for Mayor of New York, John F. Hylan brought two libel suits against the New York World. He asked for $525,000 in damages. Not long ago he asked for a postponement, which was denied. On May 31st he sent his lawyer a letter in which, after criticising the Court for denying this request, he made this explanation: "I am compelled, therefore, to ask you to discontinue the actions, as it seems to me that my first duty is to the public in these critical times, and that I should devote my full time and attention to the public business, and not to the prosecution of my private lawsuits and personal matters." Mayor Hylan adds that the "vindication" he received from the voters of New York last autumn is better than any "vindication" he could get in court. Fine words, these, but they do not conceal the truth that Mr. Hylan was bluffing when he sued the World and that he is now afraid of a showdown. He has quit cold. None of the poor public appearances that Mr. Hylan has made is quite so poor as this his latest. It exposes to New York a crude circumstance of its choice of Mr. Hylan for Mayor, the more serious circumstances being the progressive deterioration of a city government which had almost been redeemed.

Anti-Social Blindness.

From the Springfield Republican.

IN the defense of Rose Pastor Stokes these words catch the eye: "I am not conscious of committing any crime, your honor, unless an ardent desire to serve the ends of social and economic justice, claimed as of the highest value in time of peace, becomes an antisocial thing and a crime in time of war." In this rhetorical antithesis is to be seen both the fallacy of the defense and the root of the delusions of many good people. It is charitable to suppose that they have programs which in normal times are laudable or at worst harmless that they are incapable of adjusting their minds to the new duties, the new prohibitions and the new fellowship which a desperate war brings. They cannot catch step, cannot understand or realize the mighty social forces pulsing about them; their activities precisely because of this lack of sympathy are in fact in danger of becoming "antisocial" just as this offender says. What disaster this blindness due to a monomania may bring the Russia of the bolsheviki tragically shows. America is resolved to protect itself, and if honest fanatics are punished it is in no vindictive spirit but as an exemplary lesson in the strange new duties that war sternly imposes on us all.

St. Louisans Begin Departing for Summer Resorts—Many Will Continue War Work—Weddings of Miss Georgia Zeibig and Miss Nancy Scott Were Surprise Events Last Week.

THE time has come for the summer flights and already many have started on their way and others have their trips and vacations in prospect, although some will remain in the city until later. One need not fear that war relief work will be neglected at the different summer resorts for various branches of it will be carried on with the same intensity that has been the case in the cities this winter. Instead of golf and tennis, dancing and bridge playing, war work will be the thing of greatest importance. Summer resorts this year will be a "No-Man's Land" for the girls and so in self-defense as well as our country's defense they will be more interested than ever in war work.

A WEDDING which caused a great deal of surprise, as the engagement had not even been announced was that of Miss Georgia Zeibig to Charles Powell Whitehead, which took place Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents. Taylor, Sam McCluney, Thomas H. McKittrick, Charles H. Rice, John Fowler, and the Italian consul, Mr. A. Broletti, and Messrs. G. Guiseffi and Peppino Guiseffi.

Cigars and cigarettes will be sold under the services of Miss Grace Taylor, assisted by Misses Mathilda Overton, Eleanor Stanard, Cornelia McNair, Julia and Caroline Tyler. The roof garden will be decorated to represent an Italian garden, of which there are no more beautiful ones in the world, and an interesting feature of the evening will be the auctioning of an autographed photograph of Enrico Caruso. Mr. Worthington Eddy will act as auctioneer and no doubt the competition will be spirited and the sale attended with much enthusiasm. There are still a few good tables which may yet be reserved and applications should be made to Mrs. Daniel G. Taylor, 4907 Berlin avenue, phone Forest 2406.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Kohn of 5729 Von Versen avenue will be at home informally this evening from 8 to 11 o'clock, in honor of the graduation of their daughter, Miss Evelyn.

ALMOST every day one hears of some form of sacrifice or some work undertaken by women as a means of helping in the work that the great war has brought upon us. Mrs. Homer R. Hisey of Webster is one who is doing much toward bringing pleasure and recreation to some of the men at Scott Field, near Belleville. Last Saturday and Sunday five of them were her week-end guests and were some who have just finished the course at Princeton. They were Bob Duthie, who is known as the "boy ace" of the squadron; Messrs. McClees, Blistain, Longgood and Albert Smith. Assisting Mrs. Hisey in the entertainment of her guests were Misses Eda Lincoln, Eleanor Robinson, Isabel Weir, Katherine and Emily Beck. Mrs. Hisey expects to entertain others each week end.

A prominent woman of Kirkwood who is devoting her time to war work in a most practical and absorbing way is Miss Rowena Clarke of "Seven Gables." She is acting as administration secretary in co-operation with George R. Robinson, who is U. S. Food Administrator for St. Louis County. Miss Clarke was spending the winter in California when she learned of Mr. Robinson's appointment and immediately volunteered her services upon her return. She studied typewriting and stenography while away and is now devoting the greater part of every day to service in Mr. Robinson's office, at his residence in Kirkwood and during his absence on administration work is in control of all branches of food work for the county.

From Ferguson comes word of an unique way adopted by one of the prominent matrons of that suburb to help in her war relief work. Mrs. R. Graham Frost raffled off a silver ice cream set consisting of a dozen handsome silver spoons and a server which was one of her wedding gifts 44 years ago. The sum from this she turned over to the Red Cross, and a surprisingly large amount resulted. It was won by Miss Katherine Flynn of 1340 Belt avenue.

A VERY necessary and important war work to which a number of women are devoting their time and energy is the work at the Hostess Houses located at the different army camps, which cares for all women who are called to camp to visit the sick boys and often means caring for women in trouble and bereavement. At these hostess houses the boys may meet their women friends, mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts instead of asking them to go through company [illegible]. They are homelike places for [illegible] to go for recreation [illegible] woman's sympathy and as most of the large camps are several miles from the towns, this is the only touch of home life that most of the boys have. A tea room is run in connection with most of them, where dainty dishes of home cooking are served at a nominal sum. Miss Carrie B. Jackson of St. Louis is one of the women in charge of the Hostess House at Camp Shelby and her associates are two young women whose husbands are in France, and six workers whose husbands are officers stationed at the camp. Miss Jackson has recently been here on a short visit and was a guest at the Bonair Hotel.

A number of belles who are devoting their time to the Red Cross, foregoing teas, garden parties and other rounds of pleasure, are now busily engaged in dressing 500 American-made dolls which will be sold at the Red Cross Day fete at Sunset Hill Country Club on Saturday, June 29.

These dolls will be dressed in the uniform of the Red Cross nurse.

Mrs. William Dee Becker is chairman of the doll booth and Miss Clabaugh, vice chairman, assisted by Misses Esther Wheeler, Frances Carleton, Annie Laurie Warmack, Helen Watts, Marion Banister, Grace Gettys, Clara Frothingham, Ruth Burlingame, Lorraine Livingston, Doris Johnston, Mildred Donnell, Jeanette Klein, Eleanor Klein, Leonore Strassburger, Evelyn Stoneman, Jean Allison and Mildred Sloan.

A meeting was held Thursday morning at the Mercantile Club to form an organization of mothers and friends of the U. S. Marines for the purpose of providing a meeting place for the marines who are stationed here or who are passing through the city, and to render such services as may arise on different occasions. Mrs. Lionel Bel Moses was elected chairman, Mrs. James A. Waterworth, vice chairman, and Miss Harriette Price, secretary. Sergt. Percy Gordon of the U. S. Marines gave an interesting talk.

Miss Thelma D. Wiles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. L. Wiles of 2 Hampton Park, was the valedictorian of the graduating class at Hosmer Hall this year.

Mrs. Joseph Meehan, 5144 Kensington avenue, entertained with a luncheon and miscellaneous shower at the Wayside Tea House, Friday, in honor of her niece, Miss Alice Affolter, who will become the bride of Clarence Stolz on June 26. There were 18 guests, the table decorations were in rainbow colors and carried out in flowers and tulle. A shower of vari-colored ribbons fell over the gifts and extended to a miniature bride at each guest's place.

French Red Cross Hospital No. 106 will sponsor the third and last week of the Hiawatha production at Delmar Garden, the executive board of the hospital finding the Indian production most helpful in its work of keeping in operation Madame Prevot's hospital located at Millau, Aveyron, France. The various ticket selling committees under Mrs. Taylor Bernard, Mrs. F. V. Dubrouillet, Mrs. C. P. Headley, Mrs. Charles L. Allen and Miss Ruth Menard have had good results during the past two weeks and will bend their efforts in making the third week of the production the most successful.

The B' Nai El Temple Sisterhood has arranged a card party to be given at Caffarata's on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Half of the proceeds of the affair will be devoted to war relief.

Miss Virginia Sinclair Dakin, daughter of Mrs. Elmire J. Dakin of 319 Rosedale avenue, has returned from Smith College, where she was a student.

Miss Helen Dunn of 5973 Maple avenue has gone to Parsons, Kan., where she will be the guest of her sister.

The Relatives' Auxiliary of the St. Louis National Guard will give a "get-together" picnic for members and their friends Thursday afternoon and evening at Ramona Park. All sorts of contests and games have been arranged by the committee in charge, and there is to be a register of all who attend, which later will be a part of the St. Louis National Guard archives at the Missouri Historical Society. Mrs. Carl O. Houseman is general chairman of the Arrangements Committee, and Mrs. Charles M. Marshall is vice chairman. Everybody interested in the St. Louis National Guardsmen is expected to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. John Schaefer of 4816 Greer avenue have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elsie Schaefer, to Otto Keppler, son of Mrs. H. Keppler of 3856 Labadie avenue, which took place on April 1.

The wedding of Miss Maude Frolichstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ike Frolichstein of 4231 McPherson avenue, to Julius Frank will take place at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, with the Rev. Dr. Sale officiating. The couple will depart for a Northern honeymoon trip and will be at home after July 15. Mr. Frank resides at the Marquette Hotel.

A quiet wedding of the week was that of Miss Violet F. Greis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greis of 3040 Rolla place to Lawrence L. Albert of 4446 Greer avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. A. Hunt of Webster. The bride was attended by Miss Hilda Wiese and the best man was Ed Peel. The young couple will be at home at 3132 Rolla place after June 17.

Miss Carolyn Mohorter of 5926 Ridge avenue returned last week from Hiram College, where she received the highest honors for the entire course.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos E. Betts of St. Joseph, Mo., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carrie Belle Betts, to Alan Zook Van Natta of that city. Miss Betts will be remembered here, as she has frequently visited her aunt, Mrs. Ben Pearson of the Buckingham Annex.

The members of the Kroeger School of Music Alumni Association will hold their annual election of officers, followed by a supper, at the Musical Art Building on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. This closes the fourth year of the organization's existence.

A surprise linen shower was given on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Owen J. McCaughey of 5036 Wells avenue, by the girls of the Rose de Luer Club, for Miss Alice Mae Affolter of 4605 Page boulevard, whose marriage to Clarence F. Stolz of Walnut Park will take place on Wednesday evening, June 26, at the Salem M. E. Church. Little Louise Higgins, dressed as Cupid, presented the bride-elect with a pink parasol from which the gifts hung on tiny white ribbons. The decorations were carried out in Cupids, hearts and roses. Those present included Misses Helen Davis, Helen Kling, Catherine Rob-

Famous in a Day for Her Beautiful Complexion, Oatmeal Combination Does It

A Free Prescription Does Its Work Overnight. You Can Prepare It at Your Home.

New York: It is my own discovery and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results, says Mae Edna Wilder, when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. You can do the same thing if you follow my advice, she says. I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it, All this change in a single night. I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which you can prepare at your own home, is as follows: Go to any grocery and get 10 cents' worth of ordinary oatmeal, and from any drug store a bottle of derwillo. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of derwillo and apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and velvety. I especially recommend it for freckles, tan, sun spots, coarse pores, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and, in fact, every blemish the face, hands and arms are heirs to. If your neck or chest is discolored from exposure, apply this combination there and the objectionable defect will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this oatmeal-derwillo combination will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most. Thousands who have used it have had the same results I have had.

Note: To get the best effect, be sure to follow the complete directions contained in every package of derwillo. You have only to get derwillo and oatmeal. You need nothing else, and it is so simple that anyone can use it, and is so inexpensive that any girl or woman can afford it. The manufacturers and druggists guarantee that there will be a noticeable improvement after the first application or they will refund the money. It is sold in this city under a money-refund guarantee by all department stores and druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Enderle, Pauley and Johnson Bros.—ADVERTISEMENT.

UNION ELECTRIC AND WORKERS IN LABOR AGREEMENT

Wage Schedule to Be Drawn Up, and Eight-Hour Day to Be Granted When Finances Justify It.

EMPLOYES' SOCIETY JOINS IN MOVE

700 to 1100 Workers Said to Have Signed Agreement—Effort Has Been Made to Unionize Employes.

An agreement has been signed by the Union Electric Light and Power Co. and an organization of its employes known as the Employes' Mutual Benefit Association, the purposes of which, in its own words, is to give the employes "a voice in the determination of working conditions, wages and their social welfare, so far as these matters lie within control of the company."

It contains a promise by the company to establish the eight-hour day for employes as soon as it has funds and can obtain sufficient employes, to raise wages to conform with the increased cost of living as soon as the company obtains the funds, to employ only men and women who signify their intention of joining the Employes' Association and to continue its present financial support of the health and insurance activities of the association.

The agreement provides for the framing of a wage schedule by employes, the scale to be approved by the board of directors of the association, submitted to the company, and if not approved by the company after discussion with the association, to be settled by a board of arbitration to be composed of one member of the association, one executive of the company and the president of the Missouri Public Utilities Commission.

The agreement is to run indeterminately and may be abrogated only by six months' notice on the part of either party. The company agrees to discharge no association member without just cause and the association undertakes to furnish employes upon need of the company.

It is known that union agents recently have been at work among Union Electric Co. employes. Charles S. Ruffner, vice president and general manager of the company, stated that in his opinion the new agreement carries more benefits to employes than a labor union would give them.

Signers to the agreement were Ruffner, S. H. Wallace, president, and E. W. Nelson, secretary of the Employes' Mutual Benefit Association. Nelson said about 700 of the 1100 employes now are members of the association.

The agreement is similar to one which was in force between the United Railways Co. and its carmen and which did not forestall dissatisfaction that caused the recent strike of carmen. Both the Union Electric and the United Railways are controlled by the North American Co.

CANNON RANGE OF PARIS IS THE REAL GERMAN OBJECTIVE

was prepared. When the blow fell west of St. Quentin it had to transfer its reserves from Champagne to Picardy. Then the German struck in Champagne, but he cannot continue to mystify his opponent and the moment his plan is disclosed Foch can keep pace with each German concentration. He can calculate within a narrow range exactly where the next blow is to fall and have his reserves ready.

French Have Best Communications.

As the situation stood last Sunday the French possess all the best of the communications. Paris is surrounded by a series of circular railroads, built with the defense of the city in view, and these lines remained substantially intact while the Germans were divided by the French center and the flank between Chateau-Thierry and Soissons was practically without road or railway communications. On the other hand, it was obvious then, when the German attack was beginning, that no material advance could prove anything but serious, and the arrival of the German right flank at the Oise between Creil and Compeigne would produce a situation of utmost gravity.

Allies Accept Battle.

But the allies have put a price upon Paris. In a word, they have decided that Paris is worth so much to the allied cause that it must be defended to the limit. And this means that the allies will oppose their main strength to German advance between the present front and the French capital. They have accepted the gage of battle and obviously intend to make a supreme effort to hold the city.

This decision recalls the Verdun episode. At the outset the French had the choice between evacuating the hill east of the Meuse and accepting battle in the restricted territory between the Duaumont Plateau and the east bank of the river. They chose the latter alternative and Verdun became a decisive battle continued over six months, during which time the Germans endeavored to destroy French military power by annihilating the divisions and corps which were steadily poured into the furnace. They failed. Verdun was saved. And the German defeat was complete. Now the allies are accepting the battle once more within fixed limits, with their backs this time to Paris, not to any river. Meantime, the Germans are following the Verdun parallel, attacking first on the right wing and then on the left, as they attacked first at Dead Man's Hill and then about Fort Deveaux in the second phase of the Lorraine campaign.

The present offensive, begun on last Sunday, is the third step in the campaign for Paris. The first was the March 21 offensive from St. Quentin. The second was the May 27 attack from Laon. This third attack, on the Montdidier-Noyon front, is an effort to open the northern roads to Paris which come down from Belgium through St. Quentin and Amiens, first to the important railway and highway junction of Estres-St. Denis, and then to the crossing of the Oise at Creil, Pont Ste. Maxence and about Compeigne.

PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR IS RECOMMENDED

Mexican Delegates at St. Paul Tell of Activities of "German, Not Pro-German" Newspapers.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 15.—Recommendations that a Pan-American Federation of Labor be established to promote unity of action in labor activities in North America and charges that pro-German papers distorted their statements and inaugurated a vicious propaganda campaign against them were features of a report submitted today to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor by the Mexican labor mission. The report was unanimously adopted.

The report stated Mexican diplomats were somewhat skeptical of the possibilities of a Pan-American federation because of lack of funds. After the co-operative features of the federation were evplained, President Carranza realized that closer affiliation with other countries would be of benefit to Mexico's workers.

The report described in detail the activities of "German, not pro-German, newspapers in Mexico."

THE PROBLEM OF GETTING IRELAND BACK INTO THE WAR

Ulster a Catholic Lord Mayor of Belfast is as impossible as in Constantinople, and thus the Nationalists of Ulster are of tougher fiber than in any other part of the country.

When all the rest of Ireland was disunited, they have always remained united; they have something of the qualities, curiously enough, of the other race and the other creed with which they are constantly at war; they are resolute and very practical; very passionate in their convictions. The possibility of their being left out of the Irish Parliament, for which they had worked for generations and against such gigantic obstacles, was loathsome to everybody in the Nationalist circles, and the only justification that could be found for their temporary separation from the rest of their countrymen was that, in the nature of things the separation could only be temporary; economic and other reasons would have drawn the rest of Ulster into the common life of Ireland. However, a strong opposition was immediately started; all the Ulster Bishops joined in the hostile movement, and hundreds of priests, and many of the laymen, especially in the two counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh, where the Nationalists were in a majority, though these two counties were among the excluded six counties, were passionate in their opposition.

Failure of the Ulster Convention.

It was the intensity of the passions that raged and the vital issues that were involved which made the Belfast convention that had to do with the rejection or the acceptance of the compromise one of the most exciting and interesting assemblages ever held. There were only a few people present, outside the delegates, and some of them were from England; one of them was a Welshman, a friend and a representative of Lloyd George. Everybody who saw the famous convention agrees in describing it as one of the most impressive gatherings they had ever beheld. There was now and then some interruptions, passionate and approaching the insulting; but, taken as a whole, the proceedings were characterized by an orderliness, a sobriety and a seriousness worthy of the greatness of the occasion and of the issues. And the convention produced a man and a speech worthy of the opportunity; it was this man who ultimately turned the oft-wavering scale and who achieved, over apparently irresistible forces, one of the most notable triumphs of oratory that history records. That man was Joseph Devlin. It is difficult for anybody who has never been under the spell of this remarkable man's oratory to realize what a force he is. A small man with a massive head that seems as big as the short body—not unlike Stephen A. Douglas in physique and in gifts, of an uncertainty of mood that comes from supersensitive nervousness, but who has the courage of a lion combined with the nerves and quiver, tremble and torture in moments of anxiety, Joseph Devlin is today the man above all others who can control an Irish meeting and who can interest, amuse, entrance even the House of Commons.

And never in the course of his life had he to face a task more difficult than that of the convention. Mr. Redmond, in the chair, had spoken solemnly with his sober eloquence and impressive manner, but he had left the audience cold and hostile. Mr. Dillon did not remove the bad impression of the opening speech of Redmond, for he had no faith in the possibility of the success of the negotiations and was still under the impression of the horror of the rebellion and the executions. He had lived six days and six nights in his house in Dublin, which was not a stone's throw from the area where the bullets were filling the air and where first the battle, then the conflagration and finally a looting and wild mob threatened the lives of himself and his six children. Mr. Devlin faced the conference, and in a speech of an hour so swept the audience off its feet that there could be no doubt as to the results; and the compromise was carried by a large majority.

The Great Betrayal.

On the other side, Sir Edward Carson had his own difficulties, but he also carried his men; and so the two Irish parties presented to the Government the agreement which had been suggested to them by Mr. Lloyd George, with the approval of their constituents. It looked as if there were nothing to be done but to get the necessary legislation rushed through Parliament, and the opening of an Irish Parliament after an interval of 116 years seemed at hand. It was then there occurred one of the most flagrant breaches of faith even in the history of England and Ireland. Lord Lansdowne, and then other tories, raised the standard of revolt against all of the terms of the agreement; then Mr. Asquith weakly agreed to modify the agreement in two important particulars. What he should have done was to have told these reactionaries that his motor car was at the door of 10 Downing street and that in three minutes his resignation would be in the hands of the King. The reactionaries would have come to heel rather than face the Irish situation. But he yielded, and the negotiations were killed. Though he did not then realize it, Mr. Asquith in killing the Irish agreement, signed his own death warrant at the same time. His authority, assailed from outside and from inside, had stood the shock of attack after attack, and he seemed indispensable and unconquerable up to that hour. But his strength rested largely on the consistent support he had received from the united battalions of the Irish party. In the first big division after his abandonment of the Irish compromise the Irish voted against him. And then his enemies felt they could strike at him, and soon they did so, and brought him down.

But in the meantime Mr. Redmond also received a deadly blow. The Irish people, convinced more than ever that England could not make and could not keep a bargain, turned from the constitutional agitation and flopped over to Sinn Fein as representing the revolutionary ideas. For the second time the obstinacy of the English reactionaries and the weakness and bad faith of the British Government helped to undermine the authority of the Irish constitutional leaders. For the second time British blunders were the recruiting sergeants of the revolutionary forces.

ENOZ KILLS MOTHS
ENOZ

Enoz Kills Moths

The Only Moth Exterminator the World Has Ever Produced.
It Positively Saves Your Clothes.

If you want to make it impossible for moths to live and breed in your clothes-closets—send to your druggist at once for ENOZ, the powerful Twentieth Century invention which kills every moth in your home in an hour.

Throw away every old-fashioned "preventive"—which doesn't prevent and never did—and send for the only destroyer there is on the market—ENOZ, a chemical liquid, which is sprayed on the cloth and finds and kills every moth there may be in it.

And if you doubt the efficacy of ENOZ, ask any big clothing manufacturer in America how many millions of dollars ENOZ has saved during the past year. Ask any dealer in fine rugs, carpets, furs, feathers. They have all been using it and they are making profit out of that which used to be loss.

This year you've got to make your clothes last as long as possible. If you depend on mothballs or naphtha or camphor to do it, you are going to be badly fooled. No one of these will do the work. And all your efforts at clothes-conservation will be futile.

No one even ever pretended that these old "remedies" would kill. They only claimed they would prevent. But they have never even done that. Because they can't. More than that, they are expensive and hard to get.

ENOZ KILLS MOTHS. It utterly destroys every egg. It is a liquid chemical—evaporates quickly. It is sprayed on the goods and penetrates the uttermost recesses. It gets in the seams, under the flaps, around the stitching and instantly kills the moth without damaging or staining the cloth.

If you want to be sure that nothing is going to happen to your clothes but wear, send for ENOZ as soon as you read this advertisement.

Five minutes after you use ENOZ there won't be a live moth or a live moth egg in your home.

And they'll never come again.

Former Presidential Cabinet Official Recommends Nuxated Iron After Taking It Himself

Action of Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, Former Secretary of the Treasury, Highly Endorsed by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, Who Explains the Value of Nuxated Iron as a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder

"There are thousands of weak, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as Nuxated Iron to help build them up but who do not know what to take, and Secretary Shaw's endorsement of this remarkable product will undoubtedly be the means of giving many people the very information they desire," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "Secretary Shaw is widely known and his good faith and integrity cannot be questioned. Therefore, his recommendation of Nuxated Iron in public print should inspire the greatest confidence among the public at large and serve as convincing evidence of the genuine merit of this preparation.

Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, Former Secretary of the Treasury and Ex-Governor of Iowa.

The Formula of the composition of Nuxated Iron is now being widely published, and a careful examination of it by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that it is of great therapeutic value and one which we doctors frequently could prescribe with advantage to our patients."

Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women. For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run down," while at 40 or 50 in the absence of any organic ailment and with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with energy and force.

As proof of this take the case of Former United States Senator Charles A. Towne, who at past 58 is still a veritable mountain of tireless energy. Senator Towne says: "I have found Nuxated Iron of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it."

Then there is former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr of Chicago, who is past the three score year mark, but still vigorous, active, full of life, vim and energy. Former Health Commissioner Kerr says he believes his own personal activity today is largely due to his use of Nuxated Iron and that he believes it ought to be prescribed by every physician and used in every hospital in the country.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw says: "I have been taking Nuxated Iron for some little time and feel justified in recommending it as a very valuable tonic."

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while have increased their strength and endurance in two weeks' time while taking iron in the proper form.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. Nuxated Iron is not recommended for use in cases of acute illness, but only as a tonic, strength and blood builder. (In case of illness always consult your family physician and be guided by his advice.) If in doubt as to whether or not you need a tonic, ask your doctor, as we do not wish to sell you Nuxated Iron if you do not require it. If you should use it and it does not help you, notify us and we will return your money. It is sold in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros.' Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Stores Co., Enderle Drug Co., and by all other druggists.—ADV.

"Mother, You Look Young Enough to Be My Sweetheart"

How Do You Keep That Youthful Look in Your Face When So Many Others No Older Than You Have Such Bad Complexions and Coarse Wrinkled Skin?

Beautiful woman's own story of how she banished every Complexion Blemish and unsightly mark of age.
Translation of original French Prescription that "Mother" used "Apply night and morning: one cup of butter-milk and one teaspoonful of roseated cream." (Fully explained in this article)

Only a woman who has watched her complexion change from wrinkled, coarse, sallow ugliness to clear, soft, youthful beauty can realize the feeling of joy that came over me when first I saw my own care-worn, aged-looking skin was actually regaining its girlish freshness. Yet prior to this there was scarcely a preparation, including treatment at the highest prices, which I had not tried; only to make my face look worse. Finally a French lady gave me a beauty recipe which she had obtained from a doctor in Paris, who told her the reason most things failed was because they lacked the power to get down into the skin and renew the youthful activity of the tissues. It was only a short time after that my son showed his pride in my improved appearance by exclaiming, "Mother, you look young enough to be my sweetheart." I am certain that most any woman can successfully use the same plan, so I gladly repeat it here for the benefit of others: Merely wash your face with buttermilk and rub in a teaspoonful of roseated cream (which can be obtained from druggists); wipe the face and apply Poudre Fascination—a very fine complexion powder, prepared especially for shiny noses and bad complexions. If your face is badly wrinkled, get a box of Japanese Ice Pencils to use in connection with the roseated cream. I have seen many a wrinkled, hollow-cheeked, faded-looking woman banish every sign of wrinkles and complexion blemishes and marvelously increase her beauty, through this simple and inexpensive recipe.

Pure roseated cream—Creme Tokalon Roseated—is guaranteed by its manufacturers to banish complexion blemishes and make any woman look years younger and far more beautiful in ten days' time or the price paid will be refunded. When shown the above article, the following local merchants stated that, despite the war, they could supply Creme Tokalon Roseated and the other French-created products mentioned: Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., B. Nugent Bros. Dry Goods Co., Pauley's Drug Stores Co. and Famous-Barr Dry Goods Co.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MILK FUND SLOGAN VIRTUALLY COPIED UNINTENTIONALLY

ITS CAMPAIGN IS EDUCATIONAL ONLY

Fund Which It Raised Will Be Used to Spread Throughout State Articles by Experts on Care of Infants.

The Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, as is understood by virtually every St. Louisan, is an organization which for more than 13 years has been saving the lives of poor babies in the congested districts of the city by supplying pure milk and ice for them free.

The "Save the Baby" movement which was instituted this year at the instance of the Federal Government is a purely educational campaign, which has no connection with the "Save the Babies" work of the Milk and Ice Fund. Some slight confusion, but probably none that has been harmful, has been occasioned by the similarity of the slogans.

The Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor is sponsor of the Federal movement, which is being carried out in various states by women's committees of the State Councils of National Defense. The work in Missouri is directly in charge of Mrs. B. F. Bush, chairman of the Women's Committee in this State; Mrs. C. W. Green, its Director of Child Welfare, and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker, Director of the Bureau of Information.

The Milk and Ice Fund is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. Hocker and a personal contribution from her to the fund. The letter is printed below, both because this department is glad to give publicity to the "Save the Baby" campaign and also because the letter sets out clearly how it is distinguished from the work of the Post-Dispatch fund.

The Post-Dispatch began last Thursday the publication on the woman's page of a series of articles prepared by St. Louis experts for the "Save the Baby" campaign of the Women's Committee. Other of the articles will be printed from time to time.

Incidentally, it may be said that the Milk and Ice Fund probably has not been much affected by the women's campaign as Mrs. Hocker fears, but is lagging because of a late start and for the fact that the children have not yet had an opportunity to organize their summer's work to "save the babies."

Mrs. Hocker's Letter.

Mrs. Hocker's letter follows:

"If, as I read in last night's Post-Dispatch, the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund is lagging, I certainly hope it is in no way due to the recent successful "save the baby" drive of the Missouri Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, and to our having unconsciously appropriated almost literally the "save the babies" slogan which you have used for so many years.

"Your work has been splendid in this field—so splendid that St. Louis is deeply indebted to you for its proud record of having the lowest infant death rate in this country. Dr. Starkloff (Health Commissioner of St. Louis), told me that your valiant agitation for the pure milk bill was a tremendous factor in making it a law, and that the infant death rate, high at that time, took an immediate drop.

"The Missouri Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, tried to make it plain that our work was part of a national movement, undertaken to reduce by one-third this year the appallingly large infant mortality of the country, which is about 300,000 annually. The Missouri committee undertook to do even more than was asked of it, and to cut the annual infant mortality of 10,000 in the State in half; that is, to save 5000 babies' lives.

"Since we know that the babies in our hot St. Louis climate rarely die at Bethesda under Dr. Saunders' care, and that Dr. Lippman has the proud record of almost no deaths in his foreign clinic, where the clinic has charge of the feeding, in over five years, we realized that heat need not kill babies if they were properly fed and cared for.

"So we undertook the spreading of knowledge—to tell mothers just what to do and what not to do to have their babies withstand the heat. Many of our ablest physicians—among them Drs. Saunders, Lippman, Zahorsky, Tuttle, John Green, M. A. Goldstein, George Gellhorn, Philip Hoffman and Ehrenfest, all specialists in their particular fields—have gladly and generously given of their busy time to prepare authoritative articles touching vital points in the care of babies, and these articles will be distributed in various ways, although without signatures, since medical ethics will not permit us to attach the authors' names to them.

"We are having the articles, or lessons, made into type plates which will be shipped to all newspapers in Missouri which will print them, one a week, throughout the summer.

Give Him A Fair Start

(Mrs. Wilson is assisting at the daily rites performed before the altar of her grand-son, Master John Edward Phillips, Jr.)

MRS. WILSON: Why, Molly, you don't give that poor little tyke a cathartic every day, do you?

MOLLY PHILLIPS: This isn't a cathartic, mother. It's Nujol. It was the only thing I could use while the baby was nursing. I was terribly constipated, you know, just after he was born.

MRS. WILSON: Well, that's to be expected, I guess. I remember the trouble I had when you were born, dear.

MOLLY: Oh, mother, I was in awful shape. I tried everything. And everything failed. All the laxatives and cathartics I was taking began to affect the baby. He had colic and lost weight. My milk really seemed to poison him. Then the doctor ordered the Nujol treatment. You know the body doesn't absorb Nujol at all and consequently Nujol doesn't affect the milk,—it passes smoothly along the intestines, softening and clearing out the food waste as it goes. It was an ideal treatment for my condition.

MRS. WILSON: Does it work quickly?

MOLLY: No—it depends on the individual. It took me several days, but since then I've been regular as clockwork. That's one of the best things about it. There's no griping, no violent action—isn't it funny, mother, that some people don't feel they are getting results unless they get disturbance and rough treatment in the process! You would never know you had taken Nujol—it's so gentle. It simply softens the contents of the bowels and prevents the drying out and collecting of poison matter in the 'colon'—the large intestine. That's where almost all disease breeds you know.

MRS. WILSON: How do you feel after taking it?

MOLLY: Oh, nothing but good effects—because there are no drugs in Nujol. That's why it can be taken regularly. You don't have to set aside a day to recover from it every time.

MRS. WILSON: Do you give it to the baby regularly now?

MOLLY: Yes, indeed, he's already started. Every baby is born with a natural kink in his bowels—it has to straighten out naturally, and Nujol prevents any obstruction there. It rather helps Nature to help herself. The doctor approves, and this sample of the youngest generation is going to grow up thinking Nujol inside is just as important as his morning bath outside—which it is. And mother, look here!

MRS. WILSON: Yes, Molly?

MOLLY: See how well he takes it!

For your own protection insist that the druggist give you the genuine Nujol, in a sealed and capped bottle, bearing the Nujol trademark in red—never otherwise. Nujol is absolutely pure and harmless. Inferior substitutes may give unpleasant results. Genuine Nujol sold by all druggists in the U. S. and Canada.

Send 50 cents and we will ship new kit size bottle to U. S. soldiers and sailors anywhere. Write for attractive free booklet on the Nujol treatment: Section 5, Nujol Dept., Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), Bayonne, N. J.

MILK FUND SLOGAN VIRTUALLY COPIED UNINTENTIONALLY

Some of the more important of the lessons, such as that relating to summer complaint, will be shown on films in most of the picture theaters of the State, through the co-operation of the owners.

"This is how the Missouri Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense is using the 'Save the Baby' fund so generously given—in a statewide educational campaign.

Campaign Only Educational.

"But our campaign is only educational, and what would the poor mother do, here in the crowded districts of St. Louis, though she knew her baby needed fresh, pure milk, and ice to keep it sweet—if she had not that refuge which you have provided year after year; those depots all through the poor districts where she can go and get the milk free if she is without funds. The doctors say they rely on this splendid service in their clinic work—to maintain St. Louis' low infant death rate. We of the Women's Committee sincerely hope that the condition of your fund only needs to be called to general notice in these busy times to start it booming again, that your good work may be carried successfully on.

"Unless one has three little sons, blessed with sturdy little bodies, as mine are, one cannot appreciate the happiness of being a part in disseminating knowledge that may help other mothers to make their laddies sturdy likewise.

"So in their name let me send you this modest check to help along your wonderfully humanitarian work.

"Sincerely,
"MRS. LON O. HOCKER."

Milk and Ice Fund Now About $400 Behind Last Year.

Several cash contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund have been received since the last previous acknowledgment, and children also have given several affairs to help the poor babies. The most unique of these was a flower stand which was conducted at the corner of McPherson and Euclid avenues by six boys and girls living in that neighborhood. They went to Kirkwood and gathered the flowers, which were wild shasta daisies, and when they had disposed of them they had $4.87 for the Milk and Ice Fund. The children were: Arthur Arbutti, 7, of 390 North Euclid; Nettie Kearney, 10, of 4742 McPherson; Edmund Lynch, 12, of 4728 McPherson; Mary Spears, 11, of 4747 McPherson; Benjamin Harrison, 11, of 4746A McPherson, and Earl Frey, 10, of 401 North Euclid.

An original play, entitled "A Message to the King," by Marjorie Lippman, 10 years old, of 5655 Vernon avenue, was presented on the night of May 12 for the benefit of the fund, by the following children:

Marjorie and Dorothy Lippman, 10 and 11, respectively, of 5655 Vernon and 6 Thornby place; Elizabeth Lyman, 10, of 5651 Vernon; Emily Hurd, 9, of 5653 Vernon; Mary and Ruth Sheldon, each 9, of 5660 Vernon; Patricia Farragher, 8, of 5706 Vernon, and Pauline Case of 5657 Vernon The receipts were $4.03.

Gertrude Malorous, 12, of 2915 Thomas street; Nathan Solomon, 9, of 2917 Thomas, and Anna Lieberman, 12, of 2913 Thomas, earned $3 for the fund by conducting a lemonade stand in front of the residence of Anna Lieberman.

Nadine Holtkamp of 4341 Gibson avenue and Margaret Gibbs of 4339 Gibson avenue, each 6 years old, gave a show which netted the fund 80 cents.

The latest contributions bring the total of the fund for this year to $448.75, or about $400 behind last year's total at this time in the season.

Dr. George B. Mangold, Director of the Missouri School of Social Economy, which is conducted by the University of Missouri, announces that the Fall term will begin Sept. 23, with enlarged courses for social service workers. The school has at present 86 graduates in widely varied lines of social service. Nine are in Red Cross work, 5 are Probation Officers, two are in the National Children's Bureau, three in Board of Children's Guardians, 15 are heads or assistants in charity societies and welfare associations, two are heads of institutional churches, one is a policewoman, two are visiting and municipal nurses, three are in war community work, one is in the Big Brother movement, 16 are in hospital social service, four in the Children's Aid Society, and others in the Tuberculosis Society, settlement work, immigrant work, travelers' aid, factory welfare, Consumers' League, investigation and civic service, and the attendance department of the public schools.

There will be an evening course for those unable to attend the day classes.

How German Agents Sow Seeds of Treason in Guise of Pacifism Among Americans

Pro-German Socialists Are Used to Spread Discontent Among Certain Elements—Lies About the Red Cross and About Disaster to Naval and Land Forces Traced Back to Wilhelmstrasse.

By HARVEY O'HIGGINS,

Associate Chairman, Committee on Public Information.

This is the last of three articles by Mr. O'Higgins dealing with the propaganda of the enemy in our midst.

IN two previous articles on the German "whispering propaganda," some account was given of how the German agents are endeavoring to divide us from our allies and to arouse domestic differences among ourselves by means of various lies and rumors that arouse religious animosities and increase race problems and promote an agrarian sentiment against the war. But the attempt to divide us against ourselves does not end there.

The leaders of a section of the Socialist party here, as in Italy and in Russia, are attempting to do the Kaiser's work, and are obtaining German support in it. They are trying to divide the country in a class quarrel that would leave us as helpless to resist the German military autocracy as the Russians are. This section of Socialists was first organized as a political party in America by German exiles. They have always been led by German sympathizers. It has been a rule among them that a man is not a Socialist unless he pays dues to the party leaders, accepts all the party nominees of those leaders without question, subscribes to every plank of the party platform, and votes only a straight ticket under the party emblem. He did these things or he was expelled. That is a Prussian idea of organized servility and unquestioning obedience. It has succeeded in Germany, but it has never succeeded here.

Recalling German Methods.

At the outbreak of the war in Europe the Prussian Government, by means of false news and distorted dispatches, made the German people believe that their country had been invaded by Russia and attacked by France, and for a time all the German Socialists supported their Government's war of imperial conquest, believing that it was a war of self-defense. Since then the independent Socialists in Germany have learned that they were deceived. They are now fighting the German Government in Germany as the independent Socialists are fighting the German Government here, under the leadership of men like John Spargo and Charles Edward Russell.

Soon after the war broke out a member of the German Reichstag named David made a speech in which he said: "Germany must squeeze her enemies with a pair of pincers; namely, the military pincer and the pacifist pincer. The German armies must continue to fight vigorously whilst the German Socialists encourage and stimulate pacifism among Germany's enemies." It is upon this stimulation of pacifism in America that our Prussian Socialists have been most busily engaged. They have been recently denounced by the Social Democratic League of America and the Jewish Socialist League, under the leadership of John Spargo, J. G. Phelps Stokes, William Edlin, and Henry L. Slobodin.

The work of our pro-German Socialists has been nullified by the unjust terms of German peace forced upon the Russians and by the continued German invasion of Russia since peace was signed. The same events have greatly strengthened the loyal support of the war by American Socialists. Consequently there seems to be now no danger of a successful Bolshevist faction in this country procured by German agents. We have passed that danger point as the British have passed it. The independent Socialists in all countries are fighting the Kaiser and his commercial war of imperial conquest. And when the pro-German Socialist in this country asks, "Why do you blame German Socialists for supporting their Government and yet blame American Socialists for not supporting their Government?" the answer is, "Because in both cases they are fighting against freedom and democracy in support of military conquest and autocratic rule."

Another German Trick.

In our Western states another sort of class cleavage is being widened by German sympathizers. There, for a decade past, a political struggle has been proceeding between reformers and corruptionists. In many states the reformers have won. They have broken the political bosses and ousted their henchmen. When the Government boards at Washington called for volunteers in the work of organizing the trade and industry of the country many of the defeated political enemies of the western commonwealths volunteered for service and were accepted. The assignment of such men to war work has been used "to give the war a black eye." It is argued that the dark Powers which so long exploited the West are "running the war." It is hinted that the Government at Washington is innocently under their control. And German agents and German sympathizers are using that argument and giving that hint.

It was inevitable that some discredited politicians should find their way into the ranks of a volunteer army of war workers so hastily assembled. Such men would be eager for the chance to rehabilitate themselves. They might even be genuinely loyal to the country at large, though they have never been loyal to the best interests of their home communities. It is as absurd for anyone to turn against the war because of the participation of these men as it would be absurd for him to withdraw from the trenches if he found old political enemies serving beside him. It is his business to see that political crooks in war work are watched as carefully as suspected renegades would be watched in camp. Meanwhile, it is a work in aid of the enemy to let suspicion of such men weaken support of the Government in its prosecution of the war.

It is German agents, of course, who are most eager to arouse the feeling that this is "a rich man's war." They spread that lie in spite of the fact that the rich cannot buy exemptions from conscription in this war as they could in our Civil War; in spite of the fact that no one can hire a substitute to take his place in the trenches, as one could in the Civil War; in spite of the fact that the only exemptions are allowed to poor men with dependents or to workingmen in vital industries; in spite of the fact that the war taxes fall most heavily on the rich, and the measures of price control are designed to prevent them from exploiting the poor, and the excess-profits tax deprives them of the fruits of any such exploitation.

And it is the German agents who are encouraging the feeling that this is "a business man's war," because when the Government called for volunteers to help organize the business of the country on a war basis the business men were most free to respond and most fitted by experience to fill administrative positions. There are innumerable rumors that some of these men are taking advantage of their official knowledge in order to make fortunes for themselves. It would be the miracle of the world if no such betrayers of public faith were ever found among them. And doubtless in this country, as in other countries, congressional investigations will discover the occasional grafter and dishonest administrator. But it is none the less true here, as abroad, that the great body of business men who are serving the Government are as loyally self-sacrificing as anyone who is behind the fighting lines.

Not in War for Markets.

Recently, in the White House, President Wilson was asked by one of our most famous financiers to ap-

Personal Characteristics of the President

WOODROW WILSON AS THE MEN WHO COME INTO CONTACT WITH HIM DAILY SEE HIM

Always Master of Himself Whatever the Circumstances and Usually Knows More About Any Subject Than Those Who Call to Enlighten Him Upon It, Though He Hears Them Patiently.

By JOHN D. BARRY,

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 13.

SOME time before Woodrow Wilson was first nominated for the presidency he was brought to Washington by some of his friends and a group of men with political influence were invited to meet him. One of them, very intelligent and quick-witted, said to him: "Mr. Wilson, I have just been reading a speech that you made a short time ago on the subject of the trusts. Will you tell me what you would do about the trusts if you were President?"

Wilson replied that he would have an open mind. His exact words were: "My mind is 'To Let' on that subject."

"Aren't you afraid the Socialists will move in?" asked the caller.

"If you will tell me what Socialism is," said Wilson, "I'll know what to anticipate."

"I could define Socialism in one sentence."

"What is it?"

"The substitution of the social motive for the private property motive in all matters industrial."

Wilson smiled and let the subject drop.

It happened that the man who made that quick definition was not a Socialist.

He Defines Socialism by a Story

Some time after Wilson became President he gave an audience to a Socialist of some distinction, author of several books on Socialism. In the course of the talk he jokingly said: "I don't know much about Socialism, but I associate it with the story of the Irishman who was told by another man what a wonderful thing Socialism was.

"When I have two houses," said the man, "I give you one."

"Fine," said the Irishman.

"And when you have two pigs you give me one."

"Hold on," said the Irishman, "I won't stand for that. I've got two pigs."

Only the other day a prominent radical who was talking with the President made a passing reference to the Socialistic ideas in the reconstruction program of the British Labor party.

"You know, I'm something of a Socialist myself," said the President, with a twinkle in his eye.

Abhors Posing for Moving Pictures

The President has a dislike of being photographed for the moving pictures, though he has good naturedly submitted to the requests of moving picture men. He refers good-humoredly to the outrages perpetrated on his personal appearance by the photographs and caricatures that have been published in the newspapers. Here is a note, characteristic of many notes that he sends to his secretary by way of his stenographer, who signs for him on the typewriter:

"The White House, Washington. Dear Tumulty: This is a very interesting picture. It has great possibilities, indeed, but I hope sincerely that in completing it the artist may shorten my neck a bit and make the face a little more closely a likeness. The President."

—o—

Talking to a group of people at the end of the long-distance telephone, is another official task that the President dislikes. He says that he never knows what to say and he feels silly.

—o—

Never Talks Business at Meals

One of President Wilson's colleagues, a man often at the White House, tells about getting up from the luncheon table in order to go to Tumulty's office to ask for an appointment with the President for the next day, so that he might discuss a business matter. He knew that it would be both inconsiderate and unwise to bring that business matter up either during the meal or in the brief interval of recreation afterward.

Another colleague dropped into the White House one day and found a document that he thought had been presented to the President several days before lying on the table. When he expressed his concern about it to the head usher, he was told that if he liked the matter should be brought to the President's attention at once. But he shrewdly replied: "No. I should prefer to have it brought up in the regular order of business." He knew that, though the President would be perfectly courteous about the matter, any violation of regularity would be an indiscretion.

An Observer's Impression of President Wilson

HE made me feel that he was a man of youhtful vigor and virility and quickness of mind. When you get close to him you realize that he is very good looking. His face is uncommonly fine. He always makes you feel that he has plenty of time. He stands straight and he is master of himself, and he has a very attractive graciousness of manner.

The President does one thing at a time. He concentrates on big things and little things. This habit may explain in some degree both his memory and his insight. For him one fact can be many facts, through its implications and associations. He often astonishes those around him by his knowledge of what is going on. One of the big financiers of the country, who is now giving all his time to war work in Washington, recently said: "I go to tell the President about a matter that I think ought to be explained to him, and he tells me something about it that I didn't know before. His knowledge of detail in the State Department extends to small office holders thousands of miles away."

Capacity for Getting Information

A Princeton man, now in public life, says that when Woodrow Wilson was president at Princeton he showed the same capacity for getting information. While he was having his fight with the trustees some of the alumni believed that the position he took against the social clubs was due to his lack of information. One of them went to him in order to make the situation clear. When he came away he said: "Why, he knows more about it than I do. He told me things."

On one occasion in Princeton Wilson was complimented for being "intuitive." He said he did not form his judgments by intuition, but by knowing.

"He has changed a good deal since those days. He is a much more patient man now. He has learned to make allowances for opposition and even folly. He is just as determined as he ever was in his fighting, but much of the old anger is gone."

I was curious to hear whether, in those days, the man who is regarded as the most detached of President, succeeded in getting close to his students.

"The young Wilson really was close to his students, both in lecture room and outside," I was told. "For a while he was a member of the Athletic Committee and he used to go down to the football field and make suggestions in regard to the training. But he never was one of those intimate fellows with a fondness for slapping the students on the back or anything of the kind. He always had a certain dignity and reserve. After he became president of the university he was too absorbed in his administrative work to mingle with the students to any great extent. In his fight with the trustees, except during the first of the quarrel, the students felt that he was their friend, and he won over most of the alumni, too. At that time, ex-President Cleveland was living in Princeton. But he and Wilson were too far apart temperamentally ever to become very warm friends. Besides, Cleveland was on close terms with several faculty members who were among the leaders in the opposition to Wilson's democratic policy. Nevertheless, a year or two ago, Cleveland's son refused election to one of the aristocratic clubs on account of his sympathy with college democracy."

President and the Correspondents

Shortly after the first inauguration, President Wilson arranged to meet the newspaper correspondents twice a week in the executive offices. There were about 120 of them in Washington, a little more than half the number today.

I recently talked with a man who used to attend those meetings. When I asked him to describe them, he said:

"The President would come in and say, 'Good-morning, gentlemen.' Then he would stand at his desk and wait for a question. He would stand through the whole interview. He used to make me think of a professor talking to his students. But the students were never prepared."

"Didn't the men plan their questions in advance?"

"Apparently not. As a rule, there would be an awkward silence. Then the President would say, with a smile, 'Well, well.' Someone would venture a question and he would answer or not, as he thought best. Sometimes he would say something like, 'That is a subject for the State Department and we'd better not go into it,' or 'That's a matter in the keeping of the Congress.' Sometimes he would tell a story that might or might not answer the question. Occasionally he would answer quite frankly."

Differs From Taft and Roosevelt in His Methods of Handling Correspondents and Friends as Night Differs From Day, and Where They Were Hail-Fellows-Well-Met He Is Reserved and Detached.

"Were the questions good?"

"As a rule they were not. It isn't easy to ask a good question. Besides, the men were afraid."

"Of what?"

"Well, though the President was always perfectly genial, he made most of us feel that he was keeping us at arm's length, perhaps at rapier's length. At any rate, I used to feel that he had a genius for fencing. If he was not always outspoken he was always clever. When a question was asked that sounded as if it might be critical he was likely to give a sharp reply. The correspondent responsible for it would feel embarrassed and wouldn't be likely to ask another question at that meeting or at any meeting. If he happened to be a sensitive man he might carry away a resentment that would be lasting. After a while it was only the more thick-skinned men that would talk. However, those meetings started one thing of importance. In a moment of outspokenness the President said: 'This town is infested with lobbyists.' Then he told us that he wished us to consider the remark private.

How He Started Mulhall Exposures

"One of the men spoke up and said: 'Mr. President, don't you think it might be a good thing if you were to give us permission to print what you are saying, exactly as you say it? It might start something that would put the lobbyists out of business.' The President took some time to think the matter over. Then he said he would dictate something to Tumulty that could be used as an interview. It was the means of starting the Mulhall exposure. When Mulhall turned State's evidence he told how the lobbyists defeated Congressmen who were unsatisfactory to the big interests and how they corrupted labor leaders and spent money on propaganda, even for sending out lecturers. A half-ton of incriminating letters were used. The exposure proved to be a great weapon against the opposition to the tariff revision that Wilson was working for at the time."

"Were those meeting usually reported in full?"

"No. The correspondents were told that they were not to quote from the President directly. But they were permitted to give a general account of what was said, except, of course, where the President spoke in confidence, as he occasionally did."

"How long were the meetings kept up?"

"About eight months."

"Why did they end?"

"The reason given was the war. There were correspondents from the belligerent Governments among us."

"Did they ever ask questions?"

"Never."

"Why do you think the conferences were really ended?"

"Well, the war may have had something to do with it. But the chief reason was that they were not a success. Some of the men would come away saying that they weren't going to come any more. They felt they weren't getting much of anything. The number kept dropping off."

Wilson Differs From T. R. and Taft

This correspondent had been in Washington through the administrations of Roosevelt and Taft. "Wilson is just about as different from those two men as anyone could be. Roosevelt, if he liked you, would drape his arms about you when he saw you and he would give you his absolute confidence. He gathered around him a group of newspaper men that he felt he could trust. So far as I know, not one of them ever betrayed him in any way. If he once became your friend he would stick to you through thick and thin. Taft followed his method in dealing with the newspaper men, but the men he gave his confidence to were conservative, like himself. Wilson has no such group around him. I happen to know that one newspaper man who is supposed by some people to be his spokesman hasn't seen him for a long time. But that man is in constant touch with Tumulty, and Tumulty often acts as spokesman for the President."

"What kind of personal impression did the President make on you during those meetings?"

"Though he showed none of the high-power pressure of Roosevelt, he, nevertheless, made me feel that he was a man of youthful vigor and virility and quickness of mind. When you get close to him you realize that he is very good-looking. His face is uncommonly fine. He always

War Brings Widespread Growth in Spiritualism, Writes Dr. Conan Doyle

In "The New Revelation," Creator of "Sherlock Holmes" Tells How He Was Converted After 30 Years' Investigation and Predicts That the Longing of Those Living to Communicate With Loved Ones Fallen in Battle Will Make the World See This Heretofore Ridiculed Faith in a New Light.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S latest contribution to the literature of Spiritualism will make few converts, because the celebrated creator of Sherlock Holmes has not devoted as much space in this work to the facts that have converted him as Sherlock Holmes usually did to the untangling of his crime mysteries.

The book is entitled "The New Revelation," and a great deal of it is given up to what may be called the religious side of Spiritualism, which Dr. Doyle believes will be increasingly emphasized as an outcome of the war.

The physical and psychical experiences which Conan Doyle himself had in his 30 years' investigation, could have been summed up in a couple of pages of his book. Or, if there were others, he has not told of them here. Influenced by the writing of various authors, and by messages received through table tipping and other sources, he joined the Psychical Research Society in 1891, still merely an unconvinced investigator. Soon afterward he read what he calls "that monumental book, Myers' 'Human Personality,' a great root book from which a whole tree of knowledge will grow." In that book, Conan Doyle asserts, Frederick Myers proved the fact of telepathy, or the action of mind upon mind at a distance, working it out "so thoroughly with so many examples, that, save for those who were willfully blind to the evidence, it took its place henceforth as a scientific fact."

Dr. Doyle Says Mrs. Piper Foretold the World War

IN his preface to his book, "The New Revelation," Sir Authur Conan Doyle tells how Mrs. Piper, the well-known Boston trance medium, foretold the present war as far back as the year 1899, 15 years before the event. He says:

"A celebrated psychic, Mrs. Piper, uttered in the year 1899 words which were recorded by Dr. Hodgson at the time. She was speaking in trance upon the future of spiritual religion, and she said: 'In the next century this will be astonishingly receptible to the minds of men. I will also make a statement which you will surely see verified. Before the clear revelation of spirit communication there will be a terrible war in different parts of the world. The entire world must be purified and cleansed before mortal can see, through his spiritual vision, his friends on this side and it will take just this line of action to bring about a state of perfection. Friend, kindly think of this.'

"We have had the terrible war in different parts of the world. The second half remains to be fulfilled."

And, says Doyle, "this was an enormous advance. If mind could act upon mind at a distance, it was to that extent a thing separate from the body. Why, then, should it not exist on its own when the body is destroyed?"

A Haunted House Incident.

Not long afterwards, Dr. Doyle was one of a committee of three which went to investigate a haunted house. He says "it was one of these poltergeist cases, where noises and foolish tricks had gone on for some years, very much like the classical case of John Wesley's family at Epworth in 1726, or the case of the Fox family at Hydesville, near Rochester, in 1848, which was the starting point of modern spiritualism. * * *

* On the first night nothing occurred. On the second there were tremendous noises, sounds like someone beating a table with a stick. We had, of course, taken every precaution, and we could not explain the noises; but at the same time we could not swear that some ingenious joke had not been played upon us. There the matter ended for the time. Some years afterwards, however, I met a member of the family who occupied the house, and he told me that after our visit the bones of a child, evidently long buried, had been dug up in the garden."

Dr. Doyle reminds the reader that, in the case of the Fox sisters, bones were found and evidence of murder discovered. But, the skeptic may remark, Dr. Doyle did not see the bones, but took the word of "a member of the family' that they were found.

His next striking experience, he says, was in the case of Miss L. S., a lady who lived in his house and had developed automatic writing mediumship. Many things she wrote came true. Others were untrue, especially in the matter of time. But 'when the Lusitania was sunk and the morning papers here announced that so far as known there was no loss of life, the medium at once wrote: 'It is terrible, terrible—and will have a great influence on the war.' Since it was the first strong impulse which turned America toward the war, the message was true in both respects. Again she foretold the arrival of an important telegram upon a certain day, and even gave the name of the deliverer of it—a most unlikely person. Altogether, no one could doubt the reality of her inspiration, though the lapses were less notable. It was like getting a good message through a very imperfect telephone."

Another incident which impressed Dr. Doyle was that of a lady friend of his who died in a provincial town. She had been a chronic invalid and morphia was found by her bedside. The Coroner's verdict, however, was an open one. "Eight days later," says Dr. Doyle, "I went to have a sitting with Mr. Vout Peters. After giving me a good deal which was vague and irrelevant, he suddenly said: 'There is a lady here. She keeps on saying. Morphia, Morphia. Three times she has said it. Her mind was clouded. She did not mean it. Morphia!"

"Telepathy,' says Dr. Doyle, "was out of the question, for I had entirely other thoughts in my mind at the time and was expecting no such message." But he fails to tell us who this medium Vout Peters was, and whether or not he could have heard about the morphia by the bedside and that the case had interested Dr. Doyle.

A Prophetic Dream.

Besides these few instances with the aid of mediums, Dr. Doyle tells of a curious dream he had which had a prophetic quality. "Upon April 4 of last year (1917) I awoke with a feeling that some communication had been made to me of which I had only carried back one word which was ringing in my head. That word was PIAVE. To the best of my belief, I had never heard the word before. As it sounded like the name of a place, I went into my study the moment I had dressed and looked up the index of my Atlas. There was 'Piave,' sure enough, and I noted that it was a river in Italy, some 40 miles behind the front line, which at that time was victoriously advancing. I could imagine few more unlikely things than that the war should roll back to the Piave, and that any military event of consequence could arise there, but none the less I was so impressed that I drew up a statement that some such event would occur there, and I had it signed by my wife, with the date April 4 attached. It is a matter of

TWILIGHT BENEFIT BALL GAME FOR TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

Supper and Cabaret Will Precede Play Between Army and Navy Teams July 21.

The first twilight game of baseball in a major league ball park here is scheduled for July 21. This is the Army-Navy middle western championship game, in which the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team will play a team from one of the four middle West army cantonments, for the benefit of the special war fund of the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society.

The general plan is to begin at 5 o'clock, with a Hoover conservation supper served by the women members of the Tuberculosis Society's Board of Directors. A cabaret performance will take place during supper, a boys' marathon will be run at the same time, finishing just before the game is called, and the game will be the last event on the program.

As in former years, the Tuberculosis Society will sell popcorn and peanuts during the game, and will give away presents with every article sold.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY WASHING WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

5836 Summer Shirts, Made to Sell for $1.25, $1.50 & $2.00, Choice $1.00

We have supreme confidence that this tremendous sale will receive a greater measure of appreciation than any of our past events or any similar event that the men of St. Louis have heard of in several years.

Styles—The majority of them are soft cuff shirts, though there is a good assortment of starched cuff styles. Sizes 14 to 17.

INTIMATE PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS OF PRESIDENT WILSON

makes you feel that he has plenty of time. He stands straight and he is master of himself, and he has a very attractive graciousness of manner.

Swore When in Towering Rage.

"Once, however, he got into a towering rage before us. He even swore."

"What was the matter?"

"Something had been published in one of the newspapers that he said could have been found out only by pilfering the mails. You could hardly blame him for being mad. There was no lack of outspokenness on that occasion."

"Wouldn't it be impossible for a President to be outspoken on all occasions?"

"It probably would. At any rate it would be difficult, especially in wartime or when war is impending. Once, I remember, when the Mexican situation was very serious, one of the correspondents heard a rumor that a man named John Lund from Terre Haute, Ind., was to be sent to Mexico as a special emissary. At that time John Lind of Minneapolis had not been heard of as a national figure. When the President was asked if John Lund of Terre Haute was to be sent to Mexico, his only reply was "No." He did not let his face betray the faintest suspicion of a smile. I suspect that he often smiled to himself at those interviews."

When Woodrow Wilson settled down in the White House he looked so frail that he caused some anxiety among the leaders of his party. It was a question whether he would be able to endure the strain of his work. He was not constitutionally strong and he had not been in the habit of taking exercise. When exercise was mentioned to him by his official physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, now Admiral, he said he should not have time for any; he would have too much work to do. Grayson replied that exercise, instead of making him do less work, would enable him to do more. The argument made an impression.

Soon the President was spending at least two hours in the fresh air walking, horseback riding, automobiling and golfing, sometimes much more. When he began to play golf he was not much interested. But with practice his interest grew. He is now a good, if not a fine player. He wouldn't do at all in competition with a golf star. But nine out of ten average players he would probably beat in the long run. He plays a steady game that counts, usually in the middle of the course. Where he is least successful is in the spectacular plays, the long drives. He will drive perhaps 175 yards where the other fellow drives 200. But, unlike many a star player, he rarely drives into the rough or into some difficult position that makes him waste two or three shots. He nearly always lands where he can make the next shot count. A hole that the expert may make in four, he will make in five. He seldom wastes a shot. He excels in those plays that require nice calculation. With his mashie he can deftly land a ball on the green at a distance of 100 yards or so, and he is particularly skillful in dropping it into the hole. Since he came to Washington he has improved wonderfully in his game. Though the sensational plays are not for him, by the time the game is over he often leaves the sensational player behind.

Players and visitors at the golf course are naturally interested in observing the President. But they are too courteous to watch him as they would a professional player. On the links he is very democratic. He never stands on his rights. He often gives way to other players and joins groups and enters into golf talk. He shows an intense interest in his game. He likes it because it gives him physical exercise and complete relaxation in a mental way by enabling him to escape from the things he usually has on his mind.

One day last summer, while the President was playing with another man, a shower came up. They played on. Presently the rain fell in sheets and drove them under a tree. The President, soaking wet, golf club in hand, waited till it stopped. Then he went out again and finished the game. This companion was alarmed. But the President showed no concern and afterward was none the worse for the wetting.

It was partly through the influence of Grayson that the President got into the habit of exercising in the early morning. Besides having the advantage of privacy, Grayson knew it would find him in the right mood for exercise, it would give him energy for his work during the day and it would also leave the afternoon free for a long stretch of work. As a rule, the President is busy from 10 in the morning till 6 o'clock, with an hour and a half or so for luncheon and recreation. The automobile ride before dinner enables him to relax physically and at the same time to do some quiet thinking. When he goes out with Grayson the two will ride for long intervals without a word, the President with his eyes closed or half open, lolling in a corner of the machine. On the way he often notices people and things. He has a particularly keen eye for what is humorous. On his return he sometimes goes straight to his typewriter to record something he has been working out in his mind.

Grayson also encouraged the theater going. One of his reasons was that it would give the President's eyes a rest from so much reading and would bring into activity brain cells seldom used, and would freshen up a mind bound to be tired at the end of the day. Attendance at vaudeville was encouraged on account of its lightness and variety. In theater going there was the appeal of the crowd, strongly felt by the President in spite of his intellectual detachment, perhaps because of it, by way of contrast. Those associated with the President know that though he dislikes being conspicuous in public, he has a great fondness for elbowing his fellow beings. One who often goes to the theater with him says that he will sometimes leave the White House with a haggard face and return looking as if he had just been enjoying a nap.

He sleeps well and he is solicitious about his sleep. When he has been kept up late at night during the week he will sleep late on Sunday morning, but not so late that he is kept from going to church.

On Tuesday evening of each week a masseur gives the President a body massage.

In spite of the burdens of office, in spite even of the war, Wilson has become a much stronger man than he was when he first came to the White House. His eyes that used to give him some trouble are holding out very well. They are now in fair condition. By breathing exercises he has developed his lungs to a high degree. In the midst of his work he will often stop, leave his seat and limber up by stretching out his arms and his hands and taking deep breaths. The break at luncheon always freshens him. After leaving the table he strolls into the hallway with the family and sits about chatting or walks or glances at the newspapers for fifteen or twenty minutes.

Indoor games the President takes no special interest in. But when the weather is bad he sometimes plays a game of billiards or pool. One who often plays with him says "he knows how to make the balls talk around the table." He has also been observed to fill in a few spare moments with a game of solitaire.

In eating, Wilson has always been a man of simple tastes. But he is a good eater just the same. He takes a substantial American breakfast. But, of an afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, he will sometimes drink a cup of tea with Mrs. Wilson and with a few people that he meets informally.

Deferred Class Men Go to Schools.

A hundred St. Louis draft registrants, who were in deferred classes, left the city yesterday, 50 going to a school for aviation mechanics at Columbia, Mo., and 50 to a school of automobile mechanics at Rolla, Mo. The men were called because of special qualifications. Friday night 500 drafted men, called from Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, passed through the city on their way to Kansas City for special technical training.

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made Canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by getting some Canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—ADV.

2 Cakes Cuticura Soap and 1 Box Ointment

Heal Face Broken Out With Pimples and Blackheads.

"For three years my face was broken out with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were small and red and were scattered over my face. They would gather and break, leaving little holes in my skin, and at times they would itch and burn causing me to scratch. Sometimes I could not sleep.

"I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In two weeks I found great relief so I kept on, and I only used one box of Cuticura Ointment with two cakes of Cuticura Soap when I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. J. F. Yuza, 12th St. and 11th Ave., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, August 13, 1917.

Most skin troubles might be prevented by using Cuticura Soap and Ointment for toilet uses.

Rupture Kills 7000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 557, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.—ADV.

HOW GERMAN AGENTS SOW SEEDS OF TREASON IN GUISE OF PACIFISM

point a commission that should safeguard our foreign trade during the war and see to it that new foreign markets were made ready for our peaceful penetration after the war. And the President replied that the Government would not appoint such a commission; that this country was not fighting to obtain foreign markets; that the struggle for foreign markets had been one of the predetermining causes of the conflict among the European nations, and it had been most difficult to make those nations believe that America was not secretly inspired by a similar greed for spheres of influence and "a place in the sun;" that America was not waging a commercial war or seeking any selfish advantage; and the Government would never appoint a commission that might, by its mere existence, misrepresent the motives of our people in their support of the nations fighting to defend the freedom of the world.

That pronouncement has been made, again and again, in the President's public utterances. He has consistently acted upon it in his war policy. And the statement that the war is "a rich man's war" or "a business man's war" is as deliberate a lie as any that the enemy has invented in order to confuse our people and divide them in their allegiance.

Libels on the Red Cross.

A campaign of mischievous rumors against the Red Cross is still under way in spite of the circumstantial disproof that has been given the falsehoods through the society's agents everywhere. New rumors, new slanders upon Red Cross work and Red Cross officials, are put out simultaneously in widely separated parts of the country in a way that proves preconcertment and direction. All these fabrications are designed to discourage loyal citizens from giving money or service to the work of the society. That is the purpose of the lies about Red Cross sweaters sold by department stores; about enormous salaries paid to Red Cross officials, who are really working without salary; about Red Cross sweaters being used at the front to "pack guns in;" about the contributed knitted goods being unraveled abroad by peasants who wanted the yarn, not the manufactured article, etc., endlessly. A list of such false reports, with their refutations, would require a pamphlet by themselves. The same is true of the libels upon the Food Administration that aim to arouse hostility to the Government's measures of food conservation. Both campaigns have been unsuccessful. The loyal support of the work of the Red Cross and of the Food Administration has been one of the most remarkable achievements of America at war in the eyes of our allies. German propaganda here has wholly failed, as it has failed against the Liberty loans.

Libels on the War Department.

A similar drive against the work of the War Department has been more successful, probably because our unhappy experiences in the days of the Spanish-American War prepared the public mind. A great many people still believe the story that 200,000 coffins were sent to France when ship tonnage was needed for munitions, although no coffins were sent. The stories about "wooden guns" still circulate, although the Ordnance Bureau has armed our troops with the best rifle on the battle line, has provided 1,500,000 rifles of all sorts for training camps and field forces, and is now producing the new rifle at the rate of 50,000 a week. Alarming reports continue about the shortage of American machine guns and heavy ordnance among our men at the front, although they are abundantly supplied with French machine guns and heavy ordnance.

German rumors about appalling epidemics in our training camps led to a congressional investigation, which showed that the men had suffered chiefly from measles followed by pneumonia; that the death rate had been no higher than among men of the same age in civil life; and that no deaths had occurred from malaria, typhoid or dysentery, which diseases killed more of our men in the Spanish-American War than were slain in battle. These rumors are now at rest. Others, equally unture, are afoot, such as the shocking one that the men in training have been given bayonets so defective that they double when they are stuck into the practice dummies. Such a story is incredible enough. More incredible is the fact that loyal citizens believe and repeat it.

SHIP CARRYING SUGAR EXPERT FORCED TO DODGE SUBMARINES

Vessel Bound to Atlantic Port From Cuba Put Into Shelter Three Times in 15-Day Voyage.

By the Associated Press.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 15.—When the steamship on which they were returning from Cuba put into a Florida port in pursuance of wireless warnings that German submarines were near, Sir Joseph White-Todd, a member of the British Food Commission, and Lady Todd left the vessel and continued their journey by rail.

This was reported upon the arrival of the steamer here today after an exciting 15-day voyage, during which she put into shelter from U-boats three times.

Sir Joseph is a member of the International Sugar Committee formed to insure to the allied governments control of the world's sugar production. He is understood to have been observing Cuban sugar production.

BERLIN DECLARED READY FOR NEW PEACE OFFENSIVE

Paris Papers Believe Official Action Soon Will Succeed German Press Preparation.

PARIS, June 15 (By A. P.).—Berlin has not abandoned hope of obtaining a "good" German peace soon. The press is following with curiosity and interest the preparations for a peace offensive, which seems to be clearly outlined and about to pass from the newspaper domain into official circles. The Petit Journal, voicing the unanimous opinion of its colleagues, declares that German intrigue will fail before the unshakable will of the allies. The only possible peace for them is a peace of justice and civilization, it says.

Jurors Tend Farm, Reconvene.

SAN ANGELO, Tex., June 15.—Circuit Court is in session here again after having adjourned for two weeks in order that farmers on the jury might attend to their crops.

SPIRITUALISM GROWS AS RESULT OF WAR, SAYS CONAN DOYLE

history how six months later the whole Italian line fell back, how it abandoned successive positions upon rivers, and how it stuck upon this stream which was said by military critics to be strategically almost untenable."

Dr. Doyle thinks that we may yet hear of a crowning victory on the Piave. Of course, the sceptic will suggest that Dr. Doyle had consulted his war map of the Italian front before the dream, and incidentally saw the word Piave, with other names of nearby places or rivers. This, the sceptic might further suggest, caused the dream, and the name Piave was the only one he remembered on waking. But it is certainly a remarkable coincidence, if nothing else, that the dream and the fact came to fit so well.

Incidentally, Dr. Doyle has a theory of dreams which will interest the dreamers. There are two kinds of dreams, he believes, the experiences of the spirit really released by sleep from the body, and the confused and grotesque imaginings of the lower animal part of the brain which keeps us alive during slumber. Most dreams are of the latter kind.

Accepts Spiritualistic Marvels.

The four incidents given above practically cover all that Dr. Doyle tells us of his personal experience. His book is also interesting as showing how he has, through his reading and investigation, come to accept those startling modern miracles said to have occurred in the presence of such mediums as D. D. Home, Florence Cook, Eusapia Paladino and others. Of Home, he says, the testimony cannot be brushed aside. For example, that Home, in the presence of three persons, floated out of one window and into another, at a height of 70 feet from the ground. Dr. Doyle thinks that the testimony of the three witnesses, Lord Dunraven, Lord Lindsay and Capt. Wynne, "all men of honor and repute, who were willing afterwards to take their oath upon it," is more direct evidence than for any of those far-off events which the whole world has agreed to accept as true."

Interesting adverse comment on this Home incident, and all others on which the Spiritualists reply, will be found in a book recently published, entitled "The Question If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again," by Edward Clodd, from the publishing house of Edward J. Clode of New York. In this book of 313 pages, Mr. Clodd has, to his own satisfaction, disposed of all the mediums and their works, ancient and modern. His reply to the question of human survival is that there is no such thing. When a man dies he is dead, says Mr. Clodd.

As to D. D. Home.

Inasmuch as Dr. Doyle seems to base his belief in Spiritualism largely on the historical accounts of the feats of celebrated mediums, it may be as well to state that Mr. Clodd, while citing every possible fact in depreciation of Home, admits that he was never shown to be a fraud. He was intensely vain, says Clodd, and always chose his own conditions for exhibiting his phenomena. Mr. Clodd retells one of the best stories about Home—his handling lumps of red-hot coal with impunity, which was attested by the celebrated British chemist, Sir William Crookes, in whose presence it took place. The story is as follows:

Sir William tells how Home pulled lumps of red-hot coal, one at a time, out of the fire with his right hand, then folded a handkerchief, and putting his left hand into the fire, took out a red-hot cinder and put it on the handkerchief, which remained unburnt. Sir William tells us that on another occasion Home "took a good-sized piece of red-hot coal from the fire, put it in his right hand and covered it with the other hand. Then he blew the small furnace thus extemporized till the lump was nearly at white heat, and drew my attention to the lambent flame which was flickering over the coal and licking round his fingers. He fell on his knees, looked up in a reverent manner, held up the coal and said: 'Is not God good? Are not His laws wonderful?' "

If one wants to believe in miracles, what could be better attested than this? And in rejecting it, one has to impeach as an ignoramus the inventor of the Crookes tube, the discoverer of some of the newest chemical elements, the best-known chemist in England, who has been knighted for his scientific achievements.

Trickery of Mediums.

Mentioning Eusapia Paladino, about whom there has been so much controversy and who died about two years ago, Dr. Doyle says that he excludes all who have been detected in trickery in coming to his conclusions. Several noted investigators have asserted that, while Mme. Paladino did resort to palpable trickery when she could get no genuine phenomena, certain happenings in her presence could not be explained except by the Spiritualitstic theory. Mr. Clodd asserts that the so-called cool breeze which was said to have come from an old scar in this medium's head during a successful seance, was really produced by clever use of her lips, blowing wind upward. A description of a happening at one of these seances shows that if the observer told the truth and was not self-deceived, the charge of trickery on this occasion is absurd. Here is the Paladino story, one of many as remarkable. It is given as an example of things told in the literature of Spiritualism which, Dr. Doyle says, have made him a convert.

A number of French and Italian scientists have been investigating this subject with the medium, Mme. Paladino. They are for the most part desirous, apparently, of proving that the mysterious force which produces the phenomena is under the control of the medium and an emanation from her personality. But now and then, its manifestation of separate personality, and its exquisite human character cause them to revamp their theories. In the Annals of Physical Science for September, 1907, one of these scientists, Dr. Joseph Venzano, tells a remarkable experience of his own with this medium. He says:

Dr. Venzano's Vision.

"In spite of the dimness of the light, I could distinctly see Mme. Paladino and my fellow sitters." The sitting occurred on the evening of Dec. 20, 1900, in the rooms of the Minerva Club, at Naples. Dr. Venzano and Mme. Ramorino had hold of the medium's hands. Dr. Venzano testifies that he saw, by the light of a candle which was in the anteroom, "a form, fairly tall, which was leaning its head on my left shoulder and sobbing violently so that those present could hear the sobs. It kissed me repeatedly. I clearly perceived the outlines of this face, which touched my own, and I felt the very fine and abundant hair in contact with my left cheek, so that I can be quite sure that it was a woman. The table then began to move, and by typtology (raps) gave the name of a very close family connection who was known to no one present except myself. She had died some time before, and on account of the incompatability of temperament there had been serious disagreements with her. I was so far from expecting this typtological response that I at first thought that this was a case of coincidence of name. But while I was mentally forming this reflection I felt a mouth, with warm breath, touch my left ear and whisper in a low voice in Genoese dialect a succession of sentences, the murmur of which was audible to the sitters.

A Kiss From a Spirit.

"These sentences were broken by bursts of weeping, and their gist was to repeatedly implore pardon for injuries done to me, with a fullness of detail connected with family affairs which could only be known to the person in question. The phenomenon seemed so real that I felt compelled to reply to the excuses offered me with expressions of affection, and to ask pardon in my turn if my resentment to the wrongs referred to had been excessive. But I had scarcely uttered the first syllables when two hands, with exquisite delicacy, applied themselves to my lips and prevented my continuing. The form then said to me: 'Thank you,' embraced me, kissed me and disappeared."

If this had happened to Mr. Clodd or any other skeptic, he might have accepted it at the time as genuine and become a convert to spiritualism. But if he is one of that category of skeptics who do not want to believe, the time would come when he would persuade himself that he had been deceived, and he would deny the evidence of his own senses. In these matters the will to believe is everything.

In addition to his earnest plea for sincere investigation of spiritualism for its religious value, Dr. Doyle mentions in this book a number of new authors who have come to the front with testimony. Some of these latest books have not been published in America.

RENEWED INTEREST SHOWN IN INLAND WATERWAY PLANS

Post-Dispatch Exposure of Conditions Brings Inquiry From Some of Valley States Congressmen.

NATURE OF ATTACK MADE ON PROJECT

Survey of Stand Taken by Railroad Committee on Recommendations Made for River Improvements.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Developments in the Mississippi River waterways project since the Post-Dispatch's exposure of the plot among railroad men around Director-General McAdoo to defeat the recommendations of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Committee have been encouragingly rapid.

As a consequence of the revelations of last week, all the members of Congress from the valley states have become interested in what is going on, and some of them have demanded to see both the recommendations made by McAdoo's committee of experts and the attack made upon them by the committee of railroad men to which they were arbitrarily referred.

It will be remembered that these recommendations which went to McAdoo April 8 together with others such as that for the New York State barge canal, to which some $6,000,000 has been devoted for equipment and which has been in operation under Federal control since the 20th inst., contemplated an expenditure of $7,300,000 for seven steel towboats of from 1500 to 2500 horsepower each and 50 steel barges with a capacity of 2000 tons dead weight each, and institution at once of river traffic between St. Louis and New Orleans for the relief of the railroads during the war.

Men Who Made the Recommendations.

These recommendations were made by Brigadier-Generals W. M. Black and Charles, both Government engineers familiar with the Mississippi. Walter S. Dickey, who has been at the head of the barge line operating between St. Louis and Kansas City; G. A. Tomlinson, a practical operator of shipping upon the Great Lakes, now in charge of the New York canal; J. H. Sanders, president of the New Orleans Board of Trade; and Calvin Tomkins.

Since members of Congress have interested themselves in what is being said to McAdoo in answer to these recommendations by the committee of railroad men appointed to pass upon their practicability by the former presidents of the Illinois Central and Louisville & Nashville railroads, the arch enemies of Mississippi waterways, the Post-Dispatch has been told what the nature of this attack is.

The Railroad Committee consists of John Howe Peyton, former president of the N. C. & St. Louis Railroad; a controlled property of the L. & N.; Frank B. Bowles, formerly vice president of the Illinois Central, and F. C. Reilly, freight traffic manager of the Frisco.

Peyton, as the Post-Dispatch has shown, is the author of "The American Transportation Problem," in which he ridicules all inland waterways projects and likens them to the South Sea and Mississippi Bubbles. His indictment of the Soo Canals, the most conspicuously useful and successful inland waterway of America, was printed in this paper May 26. Peyton is the author of the report of the Railroad Committee. He says $300,000 would be necessary to provide terminal facilities at St. Louis, and that $125,000 would have to be spent to make the St. Louis grain elevators available for the transfer of grain from the railroads to the river. Neither of these objections to the waterways plan is in itself true, nor would it be important if it were true.

Neither Expenditure Required.

The Inland and Coastwise Waterways Committee contemplates neither expenditure in instituting the river traffic. It points out that St. Louis has already a municipal dock and that there is no need for immediate repair of elevators.

Peyton's committee admits that such a volume of traffic as is foreseen by the proponents of this enterprise is possible, but only by action of the Government in forcing trade down the river to the gulf. The committee believes this would work hardship upon a great many shippers.

The only other course open to the Government in making such a volume of traffic possible would be to force low water rates and high rail rates, thus taking the river out of competition with the railroads. This, Peyton says, is the policy by which France, Germany and other countries have sometimes made their water ways a success. The railroad men lay stress upon the possibilities of putting these $7,300,000 in the railroads themselves. They say in their report that such expenditure of this fund would result in much greater relief to railroad congestion.

Peyton's committee, however, does not believe that McAdoo should be deaf either to the recommendations of his special committee or to the widespread popular demand for traffic on the Mississippi. It recommends that he once and for all prove the impracticability of such a project by devoting some $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 fo Government money to a trial with such boats and barges as are now available on the river. The report includes an interesting statement of why the river traffic virtually disappeared. The reasons given are as follows:

1. Railroad competition and rate cutting.
2. Inadequate terminals and facilities.
3. The variableness of the channel.
4. The prevalence of silt in the river, making it impossible to maintain a permanent channel.
5. The prevalence of storms, fogs on the river, with the frequent incapacitation of harbors by reason of the inconstancy of any particular river route.
6. The absence of co-ordinated transfers with points off the river.
7. The general movement of traffic east and west.

The committee admits that modern equipments such as is recommended to McAdoo would remove at least some of these reasons why the river has been impracticable.

It admits that the proposal to have all steel shipping would reduce the rates of insurance and risks of loss to a point not hitherto enjoyed by river traffic. It summarizes the wharf facilities of St. Louis as follows:

Ten inclines, more or less out of repair. A municipal wharf, 275 feet long, accommodating one barge and having terminals for 90 cars. One dock at East St. Louis, 176 feet long at which one barge of 2000 tons could be unloaded in three or four days. Four wharf boats of 250 feet each at the foot of steep levees where transfer is necessary by means of trucks and drays. A wharf belonging to the Aluminum Ore Co. on the East Side, two miles below the Free Bridge, reached by the Alton & Southern—all, in the opinion of the committee, constituting an inadequate, unmodern and badly scattered terminal plant.

The report assumes that ¾ cent a bushel would have to be paid for elevator service at St. Louis in handling grain, though no such charge is assessed today. It assumes that inasmuch as this traffic would be for the most part forced by the Government, and not therefore responding to any natural demand, the entire equipment for which the Government would have spent millions of dollars would be so much waste after the war.

The report interposes nine "ifs," any of which is presumably enough to wreck this proposed project. They are as follows:

1. If such service can escape the usual delays due to storms, ice and breakdowns.
2. If it can reduce labor shortage and strikes to a minimum.
3. If crews can be always held on reaching port.
4. If railroad congestion can be avoided at the terminal points.
5. If ships are always available at New Orleans to prevent congestion at that point.
6. If consignees can always be induced promptly to move their goods from warehouses and wharves.

KING SENDS CANADIAN BOY HOME UPON MOTHER'S PLEA

Youth of 17 Got in Army After His Two Brothers Went Into Service.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 15.—At an English port. A Canadian regiment was embarking for a French port and the battlefield of Flanders. His Majesty King George of England was there. So was Clarence Steward, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

Steward is 17 years old. Two brothers are in the Canadian army. His youth barred him from enlistment, but he eluded the recruiting officer's usual vigil and was sent overseas. Two letters to army authorities at Ottawa failed to bring about his release from the ranks.

Then Mrs. Steward wrote a personal letter to King George. At the port of embarkation the boy was sought out and told by the King to go home, as his family had already done its full share, and he was too young to become a soldier. Steward is home, but he says that as soon as he reaches the required age he will enlist again.

RENEWED INTEREST SHOWN IN INLAND WATERWAY PLANS

7. If there can always be prompt elevator and terminal accommodations.

8. If spies and alien enemies can be prevented from sinking the boats and wharves.

9. If all the conditions of the plan can be just right at all times, none of these failing, but all working efficiently and harmoniously, such a service as has been proposed to McAdoo is, in the opinion of the committee, practicable, and seven boats and 50 barges would be an adequate equipment. But the committee fears that not all of these perils to river traffic would be reduced to any such minimum. It therefore says that such a volume of business as is proposed would require nine boats, at a cost of not less than $300,000 each, 71 barges at $122,000 each, eight tender boats at $50,000 each, and three tugs at $73,000 each, a total cost for equipment of $11,981,000.

The committee cannot foresee a net revenue per annum from such a service of more than $722,023. It reminds McAdoo that interest at 5 per cent on such an investment would amount to $599,050, leaving $172,975 to be put into the equipment of the service itself.

Estimates on Trip Time.

The committee finds that no such time as that allowed for round trips between St. Louis and New Orleans—18 days—could actually be made. It has consulted with steamboat men, who assure it that no less than 24 days would be required for such a round trip. It finds that there is no eight-foot channel between St. Louis and Cairo, as McAdoo was assured by the Government engineers existed there throughout 1917. On the contrary, Peyton's Committee says, this channel is in spots only four and a half feet deep through at least 60 days of the year. It cites the experience of the Pittsburg Coal Co. as an indication of the time required for towing on the Mississippi River, and the ability of river traffic to compete with the railroads. It does not, however, tell McAdoo that this towing was undertaken with an equipment far inferior to that recommended by the Island and Coastwise Waterways Committee for handling grain and merchandise between St. Louis and New Orleans.

The entire report is an attempt by means of sophistry, and a deliberate effort to make out a bad case for the river, to convince McAdoo that the whole project is impracticable and would be a waste of the Government's money. The absence of any fair answer to the recommendations of the committee of experts which made the recommendations is marked. This accounts for the stress laid upon storms, floating ice, the narrowness of the channel at points and the unstableness of the river currents. As a matter of fact, none of these is a valid objection to the institution of river service, and they are each one taken care of in the Inland and Coastwise Waterways report. Th recommendations do not contemplate that these boats and barges shall buffet ice. They propose this traffic for 10 months of the year, and say that this is sometimes less than the boats could operate.

Peyton's Committee also avoids telling McAdoo, as it in fairness might easily have done, that the experiences of steamboat men whose testimony it has taken have all been with that obsolete type of equipment with which the Inland and Coastwise Committee is even unwilling that a movement of traffic from West to test of the practicability of river traffic be made.

It does not tell McAdoo what is quite well known in respect to the East—that this movement is one almost wholly created by the railroads themselves. What is carefully concealed from the Director-General is the great fear of almost all the railroads that serious dislocation of the West to East movement of freight would result from the institution of a first-class barge service on the Mississippi.

LARGE RECEIPTS FAIL TO LOWER CATTLE MARKET

Prices for the Week Are Firm at the National Stockyards.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week	Week before.	Last year.
Cattle	29,000	20,400	28,000
Hogs	62,700	50,000	54,000
Sheep	13,600	14,000	10,000

Last week was the largest in volume of cattle receipts here for the year to date, and showed an increase of about 9000 head over the week before. Regardless of this increase, however, the market was satisfactory.

On the bulk of steers, both killers and stocker and feeder grades, prices showed a flat advance of 25c per cwt. The only exception where steady sales were recorded was on common, light off-colored steers that were neither good enough to interest the killers nor had the quality to attract feeder buyers' attention. The proportion of butcher cattle and mixed stuff was quite liberal, but all classes were taken readily and as high as a week ago.

Prime to fancy beef steers are quoted at $16.50 to $17.85; choice to prime, $15.50 to $16.50; good to choice, $14.25 to $15.50; medium to good, $12.50 to $14.25; common to medium, $10.25 to 12; good to choice stockers and feeders, $10.50 to $12.25; medium to good, $10 to $10.50; common to medium, $9 to $10; good to choice stock cows, $8.25 to $8.75; good to choice stock heifers, $8.75 to $9.50; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $14.50 to $16.50; good to choice, $13.50 to $14.50; common to medium, $9 to $13; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $12 to $14; good to choice, $10 to $12; common to medium, $9 to $10; cutters, $8.25 to $9; canners, $7.50 to $8.25; good fat beef bulls, $11.50 to $13; heavy sausage bulls, $9.50 to $11, and light sausage bulls, $8.50 to $9.50.

Hog trading showed slowness and unsatisfactory deals were generally manifest throughout the week, though closing prices were considerably better than during the midsession of the period. During the middle of the week the crest went down to $16.45, the lowest it has been at any time this year. A week ago yesterday it was $17, and on yesterday's market it was $16.65, with the bulk of the good hogs, 150 to 230 lbs., selling from $16.50 to $16.65; 230 lbs. and up to 270 lbs., $16.35 to $16.50; good to choice, 120 to 150 lb. pigs, $16.25 to the top; lighter pigs, $15 for fair kinds up to $16 for the good kinds, and rough hogs $15.25.

Sheep receipts showed no great difference from the feek before, and found a conservatively active demand for all varieties, lambs closing fully 50c to 75c and sheep 25c to 50 higher for the week.

Spring lambs are quoted at $19.50 to $20.50; clipped lambs, $17 to $17.85; fat sheep, $13.50 to $14; bucks, $11; canner and chopper sheep, $6.50 to $10, and choice breeding ewes, $14.50 to $16.

Horses and Mules.

MULES—The market is steady and sellers dispose of the miners and pit mules without much difficulty. Good heavy mules are also wanted for general purposes.

16 to 16¼ hands, $200@325; 15 to 15¼ hands, $140@225; 15 hands, $165@180, 14 to 14¼ hands, $90@135; 13 to 13¼ hands, $50@125; 12 to 12¼ hands, $50@125.

COTTON UP 22 POINTS IN THE NEW YORK DEALINGS

NEW YORK, June 15.—There was a sharp advance in the cotton market today, on trade buying and covering for over the week-end. Weather and crop advices were generally favorable and caused some irregularity, but light offerings were readily absorbed, and the highest prices of the day were reached in the last few minutes, with October selling at 24.76c, or more than $2 per bale above Friday's closing figures. That delivery closed at 24.72c, with the general list closing firm at a net advance of 22 to 41 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 12 points. Liverpool was a good buyer of July, while reports of a more confident tone in the goods market were accompanied by further trade buying of early new crop deliveries. This buying inspired scattered covering, particularly in the near month, which increased its premium over October during the early trading.

After showing net advances of about 13 to 30 points, the advance was checked by realizing and there were setbacks of several points from the best, with one of the features selling of October by brokers believed to be operating for Japanese interests.

These offerings were soon absorbed, however, with the market firming up again in the late trading on the continued strength of New Orleans, further covering and trade buying.

July sold at 26.40c and December at 24.46c, with the three active months showing net advances of 41 to 46 points later in the morning. The close was only a shade off from the best under realizing.

Week-end statistics were considered bearish, except for a slight increase reported in the amount of cotton on shipboard, as weekly crop reviews indicated continued favorable progress. The forecasts also pointed to good weather for over the week-end, but local brokers said these features did not appear to be bringing in any pressure from the South, either in the shape of increased spot offerings or hedging against prospective supplies.

HOT WINDS IN KANSAS ADVANCE CORN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 15.—Corn ascended rapidly in value today owing to reports of hot winds in the West. Anxiety over the possibility of crop damage resulting from excessive heat was evident. Government advices said the temperature was considerably above normal, and in Kansas had risen higher than 100 degrees.

Opening prices, which showed ⅛c to 1⅛c advance, with July $1.42¾ to $1.43¼ and August $1.44¼ to $1.45½, were followed by a decided additional upturn.

Oats displayed independent strength. Complaints of dryness in Montana and Canada had a bullish effect. After opening ¼ to ⅝c higher, with July 69⅞ to 70⅛c, the market scored material further gains.

Provisions reflected the advance of cereals. Besides large shipments of meats were reported.

No important reaction took place. The close was unsettled 2⅝c to 3⅛c net higher, with July $1.45 to $1.45¼ and Aug. $1.46⅞ to $1.47.

Flour, Meal and Bran.

RYE—Firmer. No. 2 at $1.81, No. 4 (with corn) at $1.73 track, good ungraded at $1.73 on levee—sacks returned.

FLOUR—Government purchases of soft 100 per cent continue on basis of $10.50 jute New Orleans, but domestic requirements very light and offerings by small country mills pretty free, considering the lateness of the season. Hard flours scarce, with some urgency to the demand reported. Pacific Coast 100 per cent offering to arrive at $9.90 jute and some new 100 per cent hard and soft offered at $10.15 bulk, 30 days' shipment.

Quote extreme range of value in jute sacks: Soft 100 per cent at $10.50 to $10.75 and 5 per cent low grade at $8.50 to $9.50; hard 100 per cent at $11 to $11.65 and 5 per cent low grade at $8.50 to $9.25. Barley flour quoted by some mills at $9.90 jute, but offered locally at $8.50 jute. Corn flour offering at $4.50 per 100 pounds, but as high as $5.45 for degerminated asked by some mills.

RYE FLOUR—Dull and weak. Quotations from outside mills were: White patent at $11.25 jute, straight at $9.85 jute and dark at $8.75 jute.

CORNMEAL, ETC.—Dull. City mill quotes in 100-pound sacks thus: Cornmeal, $3.75; cream meal, $4.05; grits and hominy, $4.45 per 100 pounds.

MILLSTUFFS—No wheat-feed inquiry offering. Corn, bran and hominy feed scarcer, too, and stronger. Other feedstuff nominal. Car kiln-dried white hominy feed sold late Wednesday at $45 per ton, but mills asking $47@48 today.

Quote kiln-dried corn bran at $36 for white and $35 for yellow. Oat-feed at $14.50 sellers. No. 1 alfalfa meal at $26 to $28 sellers.

Government prices on wheat-feed: Bran, 38 per cent of average wheat cost bulk basis at mill, $1.25 over for mixed feed and $2 per ton over for shorts, standard middlings, gray middlings, flour middings and red dog.

ITS inventor, David Bushnell, an American, in 1776 attempted to sink the British warship, Eagle.

Bushnell towing his torpedo, an oak piece charged with powder, by means of a hand-power semi-submersible, planned to fasten it to the hull of the attacked ship with a steel plunger; then explode it by clock work.

His torpedo failed. It was too much of an experiment.

Safeguarding the user against failure, Goodrich never markets an experiment, tires or any other product.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STEEL STOCKS FEATURE WEEK'S SPECULATION ON THE NEW YORK EXCHANGE

Issues Reflect Hopeful War News and Less Anxiety Over Tax Measures.

CURB TRADING ACTIVE

Outside Market Shows Many Wide Price Changes on Favorite Shares.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Evening post, in its weekly financial review, says:

"It is dificult not to associate the sudden return of activity and strength on the stock market, during the past few days, with the week's later news from the Frnech front. It is true that the Stock Exchange, reflecting, as in the long run it does, the mature financial sentiment, has at no time given way to that pessimism, which swept occasionally over the rest of the community.

"The market has shown signs of momentary nervousness when each of the successive 'German drives' of the season began, but the declines were usually canceled on the next business day. On the occasions when even the military critics were explaining why Amiens must fall, Ypres be abandoned, and finally Campiegne be given up, the Stock Exchange gave no sign of a change in its point of view.

Stock Market Is Strong.

"Judged by the results of the campaign to date, it saw things more correctly than the critics. This week's resumption of the upward movement began, in fact, at the very time when a considerable part of the newspaper readers were conjecturing as to whether Paris itself might not have to be surrendered to the Germans. The Kaiser himself was reported as present to see it done—though in regard to this, it must be confessed that some observers are beginning to reckon his appearance at the front as a signal for German reverses, since the occasions selected for such imperial visits in this war have been the eve of the Marne battle, the fighting at Ypres in 1914, the Verdun offensive in 1916, and the recent move against Amiens.

"The German offensive of 1918 is by no means ended, and it still remains for the stock market's judgment to be vindicated or not. It is quite within the range of probabilities that the appearance in dispatches and war office bulletins of the achievements of American troops on the active fighting line have had a hand in stimulating financial sentiment.

"The exploits of our marines have not yet been military achievments of the first importance; but they have made an evident impression on both allies and enemy and what was more important they were the outward and visible signs that theAmerican reinforcements were no army on paper. In later retrospect and in the light of later events, Wall street may point to this entry of our soldiers into the fighting as a primary reason for the renewal of the rise on our financial markets.

The Question of Taxes.

The fact that the reaction from the high point of the recent prolonged advance on the Stock Exchange has gone no further is a fair indication, first that the financial community is satisfied with the latest war news; second, that it recognizes the importance of the harvest outlook and of the excellent results achieved in our industrial war work; and finally, that it is not at present disturbed over the prospects of increased taxation.

"In all three directions, except possibly the last, this week's developments have emphasized the great change in the general situation which has occurred since the discouraging days at the close of the winter season.

"Even as regards the question of the taxes, there is this to be observed—that the people who will bear the heaviest part of the burdens are manifestly taking the position that the stopping of the German advance, and the effective preparation for a decisive counter offensive in due season, are the supreme considerations in achieving that for which no sacrifice ought to be shunned.

"But quite aside from this, there are reassuring signs that the atmosphere surrounding the discussion of the new tax schedules is very different from what it was in the spring and autumn of 1917. The clumsy revenue bill, which was then eventually produced, was a not illogical outcome of the misconception of the nature and purpose of a war finance bill which so largely prevailed in Congress.

"Whatever else may happen—in the debates of the present session, all present indications are that the committees will at least approach the problem on scientific lines, and with recognition of the experience which European Governments, notably England, have already had in drafting taxation measures.

"Steel and indstrial shares featured the week's trading. U. S. Steel was the strongest and most active issue."

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 15.—"It is considered here that the rise in American stocks, which seems to be strongly maintained, is thus far justified. London itself would doubtless have been a buyer in Wall street, if permitted. But speculation of any kind is still strongly deprecated here. It is interesting to note that at the present level of quotations the yield to the investor in common stocks of American and English railways corresponds rather closely.

"This week's news from the Western front suggests to the city that we still have strenuous and anxious weeks ahead of us. Nevertheless, the courage and calmness of the French, in the face of the German drive, is taken as justifying expectations of assuming that England and America overestimate rather than underestimate the resources and speed of the enemy.

The Crop Outlook.

"The immense promise of your harvests, as we view it here, means more to your own economic situation than millions of gold could do. At the same time it removes all apprehension of famine on this side of the Atlantic.

"But even apart from your crop outlook, our own food problem has already become less urgent. Thus far, it may be said that actual privation has been not only utterly unknown, but is unfeared. Furthermore, 'rationing' has produced good rather than ill effects on the national health, which is excellent. The tendency of all rations is to increase during the summer.

"It is believed that your reported plans for heavy taxation on luxuries are sound, because taxing expenditure rather than income, and thus gaining money for the State, while preventing undesirable diversion of goods and services to other than war purposes.

"Our feeling is that too high taxation, either in your country or in ours, would have the effect of discouraging voluntary participation in the war and might even handicap war finance.

"If our own luxury fulfills present expectations, we may avoid any further income tax in the next budget. Nevertheless, it will probably be necessary somehow to tax war profits of individuals and companies further, because experience shows that fixed incomes are already suffering from the double strain of high taxation and high cost of living, and that this is happening while the Government's enormous war expenditures are enriching men and organizations whose contribution to the cost of war has not been proportionate."

Trading Is Broad and Active on the New York Curb.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Trading on the Broad street curb during the past week was extremely active, with wide fluctuations in many issues. The independent oil stocks attracted most attention because of the violent advance in Houston Oil, which rose from 66 to 81¼, with the trading at times on an extremely large scale.

Merritt Oil was also in good demand, all through the week, selling at 26½ to 28½ and Midwest, in the same group, advanced from 109 to 114.

A good deal of confusion was caused in the trading of some of the mining stocks by the mistake made in reporting the Supreme Court decision in the West End-Jim Butler suit. At first the statement was published that the suit had been won by the Jim Butler company, causing the stock to advance, while West End dropped from $1.12 to 83c. When the truth became known that the suit had been won by West End, that stock advanced to $1.43. Jim Butler, after selling at 88 cents, dropped to 60 cents.

Tonopah Extension was under pressure because of rumors that West End will start a suit against it similar to that just decided against Jim Butler. Big Ledge showed a strong tone early in the week, but declined under unfounded rumors that there was uncertainty over the transfer of control to Interstate Callahan interests. These rumors met with positive denial and it was insisted that the control will be taken by the new interests on Thursday.

War Stocks Irregular.

War stocks were irregular, Aetna Explosives dropping from 14 to 13½, followed by an advance to 14⅝. Curtis Airplane ranged from 39 to 41; Submarine was traded in at 17½ to 16½; United States Steamship, ex-dividend, sold at 6⅝ to 6⅞.

A firm tone was shown in Wright-Martin, which moved up from 18⅛ to 10¾. Carbon Steel was strong, advancing from 114 to 123; Lima Locomotive sold at 46 to 46½.

The motor stocks were fairly active and strong, Chevrolet advancing from 125 to 130, and United Motor rose from 26¾ to 28⅜. Keystone Tire moved up from 18½ to 20½. After the close yesterday, the directors declared a stock dividend of 22 1-3 per cent, subject to the approval of the stockholders, as well as the regular dividend on the common stock and a dividend of 2 per cent regular and 1-3 of 1 per cent extra on the preferred.

Rochester Combined Mines Co., the stock which made its initial appearance on the curb this week, will begin milling operations within 30 days. Several electric motors have been shipped to the property and will be immediately installed at the mill.

Picardy Oil Corporation, whose stock was listed on the curb during the week, was capitalized at $2,500,000, of which 750,000 shares are outstanding, with a par value of $1 The company has no bonds or preferred stock. Its property is located in five different producing fields, the principal holdings being in Wyoming, Oklahoma and Kansas.

HOT WEATHER BULL CARD IN CORN MARKET

Futures Gain 7 to 8 Cents on the Week; Oats Also Are Strong.

Big jumps in corn prices here last week, resulted largely from a hot wave that for a time threatened possibly severe damage to the crop. Compared with a week ago the market at the close yesterday showed an advance of 7¾c to 8¼c. Oats gained 2⅜c to 3⅝c.

Excessively high temperatures in the wheatfi exceeding 100 degrees at some places, came at a most unwelcome juncture for the bears in corn. Simultaneously, widespread notice was being taken of a likelihood that the wheat soon would receive preference in the grain movement, and that a curtailment of corn receipts would follow. Notwithstanding subsequent reports that the extreme heat had done no harm, nervousness, which had been engendered, was hard to dispel. Ideal weather which prevailed on Thursday and Friday, however, led to material setbacks from the topmost point reached.

The down turns, too, were emphasized by advices that the crop prospect as a whole was well above the average. Yesterday the market was strong and 3c higher on a revival of crop damage stories, influenced by high temperatures in the Southwest.

Oats displayed sympathy with the advance of corn. Besides, reports were current that premature ripening had marred the crop outlook in Kansas and Missouri.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash corn was 7c off for No. 2 yellow and 6c to 7c higher otherwise; extreme advance on No. 2 white; demand limited.

Cash oats, 1½c to 2c up on mixed; white, ½c to 1c up; good demand.

Quote No. 2 corn, $1.63; No. 3 corn, $1.59; No. 2 yellow corn, $1.63; No. 3 yellow corn, $1.63; No. 5 yellow corn, $1.45@1.47; No. 2 white corn, $1.88@1.90; No. 3 white corn, $1.78.

Quote standard oats, 79c; No. 3 white oats, 78@79c; No. 4 white oats, 77½c; No. 2 oats, 75c; No. 3 oats, 74c.

Hay Market.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Graham & Martin Grain Co., Merchants' Exchange.

Timothy hay market continues to rule quiet and slow. There is a fair demand locally for the better grades of timothy, but the medium and lower grades are dull and draggy, and concessions in price have to be made to effect sales. Quote timothy No. 1 at $20@23; standard, $19@20; No. 2, $16@18; No. 3, $13@14; threshed, $6@10, headed, $13@14.

Light clover mixed, No. 1, $19@20; No. 2, $16@18; heavy clover mixed, No. 1, $17@18; No. 2, $15@16; clover hay, No. 1 old, $18@19; new, $14@15; No. 2, $13@15.

You get an actual deed to this Wyoming oil property in 2½-acre tracts and upward, to do with as you please.

You can lease to someone else to drill on shares, drill yourself, or hold to sell at a higher price, as the field is developed. Thousands of dollars per acre are often paid at that time.

Located by Experienced Oil Friends

Experienced, practical oil men of my personal acquaintance who have actually made good and sold other selected locations for large amounts—locations that were no better, they claim, before they were developed—not only recommend this property, but have holdings in it (not for sale) themselves.

was to be arranged for last week by an Ohio oil man, who has large holdings in this field. Active drilling will affect these prices immediately, and as the acreage is limited you should and make arrangements to join me in owning and controlling your own oil land. I have no framed-up literature to mail. We should each make big money from a small investment if practical oil men's judgment is worth having and I prefer it to the much-talked-of geologist.

For Big Money

was never made without some risk, and in this instance I consider it small when $125 buys 2½ acres; $250 buys 5 acres; $500 buys 10 acres, etc.—and you own it.

Safest Oil Investment

No Stock—Oil Royalties are the very cream and velvet of the oil investment line. In fact, few today, in the oil fields, buy oil stocks. They buy Oil Royalties. You get a Warranty Deed for an undivided interest in producing oil land, under lease to big established companies. These producing companies pay all expenses of drilling and operation. The royalty owners get ⅛ of all the oil produced in proportion to their interest.

Six Mile Pool Royalty

In Okmulgee County, Okla., 160 acres under lease to National, Carter and Gypsy Oil Companies. Eight wells now! One a gusher! More wells drilling! Proven oil land! A 1-1200 undivided interest in the free and oil and gas royalty costs today $250 and pays not less than 1% per month on this price. Two new wells will be in about July first, which should (we believe positively) increase royalties and price. A real ground floor opportunity. Write or wire for particulars.

LOCKSMITH HELD IN INQUIRY INTO PETITION THEFT

Police Say Edgar C. Kerwin Gave Them Name of Man Who Rented an Electric Drill From Him.

LET DRILL TO U. R. EMPLOYE, HE SAYS

Similar Tool Was Found on Floor of Cigarmakers' Hall Where Franchise Election Petitions Were Kept.

Investigation by city detectives into the theft of referendum petitions, for submission of the United Railways franchise ordinance to a vote of the people, led last night to the arrest of Edgar C. Kerwin, 42 years old, a locksmith, of 3543 Itaska street, who admitted that he had borrowed the electric drill used in the robbery, and rented it the night of the robbery for $50 to a man who, he said, works for the United Railways Co. He gave the police the man's surname.

The referendum petitions were stolen between 6 p. m. Friday and early yesterday morning from a safe built into the wall at the headquarters of the Cigar-Makers' Union, 615 Chestnut street, where they were placed for safe keeping by representatives of the Citizens' Referendum League. The league had intended presenting the petitions yesterday morning to the Boar dof Election Commissioners, and if they were sufficient it would have been mandatory for the Electio nCommissioners to submit the United Railways franchise ordinance to a vote of the people for approval or rejection.

The robber or robbers drilled two small holes in the quarter inch steel door, near the combination, and broke or forced back the tumblers. The office is on the third floor. Entranec apparently was gained through a window opening on a hall on the second floor. It appeared that the robbers reached the window by climbing up the bars of a first-floor window. The petitions, containing 11,826 signatures, weighed about 50 pounds and were of such bulk that one man could carry them.

Borrowed the Drill.

Kerwin, who has a locksmith shop at 9 North Tenth street, borrowed the electric drill from Henry C. Klages of 1921 Montgomery street, foreman of a locksmith shop at 408 North Third street, at 2 p. m. Friday, sending a messenger for it. Kerwin, after his arrest, told detectives that the United Railways employe came to Kerwin's shop in an automobile and got the drill at 6 p. m.

Klages, prior to Kerwin's arrest, had told the police about Kerwin borrowing the drill, and also had told them that Kerwin came to his place of employment yesterday morning, after the petitions had been stolen, and asked him to say nothing about the matter.

Klages said he asked why Kerwin wanted nothing said about the loan and that Kerwin replied:

"It might get me into trouble."

Kerwin then tendered him $10, he said, saying:

"This is what I owe you."

Klages said he answered that Kerwin owed him nothing except the safe return of the drill, and that he declined to accept the money. The drill, after being used to open the safe, was behind, still attached to an electric light socket.

Klages stated that Kerwin first called him on the telephone Friday morning, and made arrangements to borrow the drill. At 2 p. m. another man arrived with a note from Kerwin, asking Klages to give the drill to the bearer, which he did.

Circuit Attorney McDaniel announced that he would present the matter to the grand jury when it holds its first session Tuesday. Officers of the Citizens' Referendum League will be summoned first.

Vigorous efforts will be made today and tomorrow by the Citizens' Referendum League to get enough signatures to referendum petitions, asking that the United Railways franchise ordinance be submitted to a vote of the people, to sufficiently replace the stolen petitions. Time for filing them expires Monday midnight.

Approximately 3109 additional signatures are now needed.

Petition books containing 11,826 signatures were stolen, but other books containing 1300 signatures which were in an upper corner of the safe were overlooked. Louis H. Proske, secretary-manager of the league, had petitions with 2672 sig-

BOONE COUNTY (MO.) MILL CLOSED BY HOOVER'S ORDER

License Revoked for Alleged Violation of Price List on Bran and Shorts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 15.—The milling license of the Boone County Milling and Elevator Co., the only mill of consequence in Boone County, was revoked at noon today, by order of Food Administrator Hoover, for alleged violation of regulations as to prices to be charged for mill feed. Permission was given to apply July 15 for reissuance of license.

W. T. Anderson, president of the company, said that he had bought bran and shorts from a Nebraska firm for 35 cents above the price allowed, sold it to a Hallsville (Boone County) firm for 20 cents more, and Hallsville customers reported the fact of having to pay the excess. He said that he had lowered his price as soon as notified by the food administration and thought the matter closed.

EAST ST. LOUIS CITY ATTORNEY GOES WITH DRAFT CONTINGENT

Martin Drury Was Put in Class 1-A After Being Exempted by Board of Which Father Is Head.

Martin Drury, 26 years old, City Attorney of East St. Louis, who was granted exemption by the draft board of which his father is chairman and then was placed in Class 1-A after an inquiry into his exemption by a Federal investigator, departed yesterday with a draft contingent for Kansas City, where he will attend an automobile school of instruction in mechanics.

Drury's father, John H. Drury, is chairman of an East St. Louis draft board. On May 26 a Federal investigation of the exemption of two of Drury's sons and the enlistment of a third, a draft registrant, in the navy, was instituted and Martin Drury was later placed in Class 1-A.

Drury was appointed City Attorney by Mayor Mollman to succeed Thomas L. Fekete, a married man with two children, who resigned to accept a commission in the artillery.

CAPTAIN OF THE KEEMUM TELLS OF HIS BRUSH WITH U-BOAT

Had Running Fight With Submarine That Was Nearly 300 Feet Long.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The submarine which attacked the British steamer Keemun, 25 miles off the Virginia Capes last Thursday night, was nearly 300 feet long and was firing a shell of at least five inches, Capt. Thomas A. Collister, master of the ship, reported today to the Navy Department.

His report follows:

"On the evening of June 13 at 6:50 p. m. the Keemun sighed a submarine while about 93 miles due east of Winter Quarter shoal.

"The submarine was bearing north by west at a distance of seven miles from my vessel. It was not submerged and was running about 12½ knots. Ten shells were fired by the submarine. My vessel opened first at 7000 yards and at 11,000 yards the last shot was fired, after which we lost sight of the submarine, which apparently came to a standstill. The submarine appeared to be nearly 300 feet long and was firing a shell of at least five inches."

ENGLAND CALLS MEN OF 51

Controller Trying to Meet Needs for Year or Two Longer.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 15.KMen of 40, 50 and 51 have been called up for medical examination for the army. Sir Auckland Geddes, the man-power controller, is quoted as saying he was trying to meet the urgent need for men for a year or two longer. He was aware of the public feeling about calling up older men while younger men remained; but some of the younger men were essential to the munitions supply and could not be removed to the fighting forces until the older men were able to do their work.

Sir Auckland added that there were 60,000 fewer men in the Government departments now than three years ago.

3,000,000 UNDER ARMS BY AUG. 1, CROWDER SAYS

Provost Marshal General Declares That Extension of Draft Age Limit May Be Necessary.

CALLS DURING 1919 WILL BE HEAVY

Of the 2,428,000 in Class 1 of First Registration 1,347,000 Already Have Been Called.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Three million Americans will be under arms by next Aug. 1, the Senate Military Committee was told today by Provost Marshal General Crowder.

Extension of the age limits in the army draft will be necessary, Crowder said, if the present rate of draft calls is continued. He estimated that all the men in Class 1 would be exhausted soon after next Jan. 1.

Crowder said that 1,347,000 of the 2,428,000 men placed in Class 1 already have been called to the colors. He estimated that some 400,000 additional men for the first class will be obtained from the men who registered last June 5, and that another 200,000 will be added by the reclassification of men in the re-examination of the questionnaires now being made.

Requisitions from the draft to complete the 3,000,000 total by Aug. 1, Gen. Crowder said, have been made. Of these 2,000,000 will be draft registrants and the others volunteers and national guardsmen.

"Everybody thinks there will be heavy calls during the first six months of 1919," was a significant statement made by Gen. Crowder.

Crowder approved the general principle of the bill introduced by Senator France of Maryland, extending the registration ages to from 18 to 45 years, thereby providing additional men for military and industrial service. He did not, however, approve the age limits fixed in the bill.

After outlining the plans of the War Department for additional calls, Crowder said that at the present rate Class 1 will be exhausted by the end of the present year and, that unless the age limits are extended and another registration held, it will be necessary to call men in Class 2 and probably soon thereafter in Class 3.

Final figures of classification of the first registration totaling 8,689,447, were given. The registrants were shown to have been divided as follows: Class 1, 2,148,729; Class 2, 509,666; Class 3, 427,870; Class 4, 3,483,326; Class 5, 1,839,856.

Crowder submitted figures showing the progress of the draft this year. A total of 1,347,512 men, all from Class 1, will have been called by the end of July divided by months as follows:

January, 23,288; February, 83,779; March 132,484; April 174,377; May, 360,230; June, 283,354; July, 290,000.

MILLIONS IN INCOME TAX PAID

Those Who Failed to Pay Given to June 25 Without Penalty.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—This was the biggest tax gathering day in the nation's history. Millions—perhaps more than a billion—of income and excess profits assessments were paid to Collectors in the 64 districts in such numbers that it will take two weeks to tabulate them.

Persons who failed to pay by tonight, as required by law, will receive next week notices of their delinquency, with demand that they pay before June 25 in order to avoid penalties.

Regiment Lies Down Under Fire, but Color Sergt. Stands His Ground

"Yes Sah, I Heard the Order, but as Long as I Kin Stand Up I Aint G'wine to Let This Flag Touch the Dirt."

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, May 12.—If the name of the negro soldier concerned in this brief recital were known, it would be used in defiance of all the rules the censor can think of. But he is nameless so far. He is the Color Sergeant of a regiment of negro soldiers.

The regiment swung down a shell-marked road of France, the Stars and Stripes fluttering in the air, the only dash of color in the gray landscape. They were very near to the battle line.

An airplane battle high in air gave them the feeling of the fray. Six German planes, forming one of the famous "circuses," attacked two allied fliers, sent one of them streaming to earth in flames, and drove the other off. The Germans began to circle and dive, still well to the front of the advancing column. Soon it became apparent that they were reaching for low altitude, intending to attack the regiment from a little distance above and riddle it with machine gun fire. The Colonel sensed the situation, and ordered that the men should get off the road and lie flat on the ground.

"Fall out! Take cover!" went down the line. The well trained soldiers scattered like a covey of quail, and a minute later there was no target left for the swooping hawks, for the road was clear and the men were scattered khaki dots against the gray earth.

The road was clear for all but one man. Erect in his place, calmly holding the flag high and steady against the breeze, was the color bearer.

"Did you hear the order to lie down?" a Lieutenant asked.

"Yes, sah," quite respectfully, "but while I kin stand up, I don't never mean to let this flag touch the dirt."

The Colonel heard and he did not need to stop and ponder.

"Let him stay where he is," he said.

So the circus flew past and disappeared and the flag flapped high and clear, unharmed. Then the regiment reformed, and plodded on down the muddy road to meet their new comrades in arms, and to do their work.

5 LIEDERKRANZ CLUB MEMBERS WITH MARINES OFF FOR CAMP

Dickmann Brothers and Comrades in Group of 23 Given Farewell Ovation at Station.

Five members of the Liederkranz Club departed last night in the weekly St. Louis contingent of Marine Corps recruits for Paris Island, S. C., the Marines' training station. They were Bernard F. Dickmann, 30 years old, son of former Sheriff Joseph Dickmann of 3446 Halliday avenue; his brother, Otto John Dickmann, 28; William Edward Tiemann, 3029 Shenandoah avenue; George D. Otto, 4252 West Florissant avenue, and Victor Perry Roach, 6036 Berlin avenue.

The Marine Corps recruiting officer said the five young men were comrades and that the enlistment of the Dickmann brothers had prompted the others to go along. Bernard Dickmann was appointed temporary captain of the contingent, which numbered 23 men.

The recruits were given a farewell ovation by the Elks' band which, with a guard of Marines, escorted them to Union Station. At the station lingering farewells to relatives and friends were said and the train departed at 9 o'clock.

13,630 DRAFT MEN CALLED TO GO TO SCHOOLS JULY 1

Registrants of Grammar School Education May Enlist to June 21—1261 of Number Negroes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A call for 13,630 draft registrants of grammar school education and qualified for general military service was made on the various states today by Provost Marshal-General Crowder. The men, of whom 1261 are to be negroes, will be sent to schools and colleges for training.

The entrainment date was set for July 1, but the call will be held open for volunteers until June 21. If on that date enough are not obtained boards are authorized to draft the remainder needed.

$125,000 Given to Swiss Red Cross.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—In recognition of its services to allied troops interned in Switzerland and Holland, and to prisoners in Germany, the Swiss Red Cross has been given an appropriation of $125,000 by the American Red Cross. In making this announcement tonight the Red Cross War Council said the money would be used for relief work among the people and soldiers of Switzerland and allied troops and civilians in transit from Germany and Austria.

U. S. WILL HAVE 1,000,000 MEN IN FRANCE BY JULY

Gen. March Says Shipments Have Passed 800,000 and Transportation Is Limited Only by Tonnage.

CHANNEL PORTS GERMAN OBJECTIVE

Chief of Staff Points Out Great Drives Have Lengthened Allied Line in France 66 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—To give the allies a mastering superiority of numbers over the German invaders, American troops are being rushed to France as rapidly as transport tonnage will permit. When the purpose will be realized cannot now be foretold, but more than 800,000 men have been sent overseas and this number will be increased to 1,000,000 early in July.

The facts were announced today by Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, in beginning the Government's new policy of giving newspaper men a weekly summary of battle conditions. The numbers of American troops now overseas and soon to go were disclosed by the general in explaining the situation, which makes the need for American man power urgent.

Allied Line Is Lengthened.

Facing a great map of the battle line with every operation of the German offensive shown upon it, Gen. March drew a graphic picture of a single gigantic campaign extending from Rheims to the sea where the allied lines have been battered back in four successive phases. The great wedge of the assault has now increased the allied lines 66 miles from Rheims to Ypres.

"In a condition of this kind," said Gen. March, with a quick gesture at the map, "where a new line has to be held and where the attacks of the Germans have been made with such large forces as they have, the importance of getting American troops to the front is more and more pre-eminent.

"We have now passed the 800,000 mark in troops shipped overseas."

The extent of the American troop movement was particularly striking because Secretary Baker stated less than a week ago that "more than 700,000" had embarked. The fact that the figure had increased approximately 100,000 in less than seven days drew a quick question as to when definite superiority in man-power might be attained.

"The matter of the number of troops on the western front," Gen. March replied, "is a question that must be considered with reference not only to the enemy divisions which have been known to be there all along, but with the potential increase which might be attained by bringing divisions from the eastern front.

"It is impossible to predict a day—say, a month ahead, or any other definite time—when a mastering superiority will be in the hands of the allies, but the number of troops we are sending across now is limited only by the capacity of the ships to carry them, and we intend to keep that up."

Channel Ports the Objective.

Gen. March made it clear that there is no doubt in his mind or in that of the allied military leaders that the channel ports are the main objective of the whole German effort. In terse sentences and with quick motions toward the map as he followed out the strategy of the one great battle, he outlined the situation that Gen. Foch is facing.

"The four drives," he said, "one beginning March 21, the next April 9, the third May 27, and the present one beginning June 9, are all part of the common scheme of offensive. Looking at this map, we see this red dotted line running down to the Swiss frontier which represents the allied line when the Germans began their advance on March 21. Considering as a whole the succession of attacks, the first penetrated this line some 36 miles into Picardy, the second some 15 miles into Flanders and the third a distance of 38 miles further along the Marne. Under the present drive the line has been penetrated an average distance of from 5½ to 6 miles.

More Troops Needed.

"One very striking feature in connection with this whole advance is the extension of front which the allies have had to cover as a result. The total stretching of the line from Rheims to the sea was 66 miles. In order to hold that extra line the al-

How the First Two German Planes Fell to American Flyers

Lieut. Winslow Describes in Diary How He and Lieut. Douglas Campbell Shot Foes Down Over American Camp.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—How Lieutenants Alan F. Winslow and Douglas Campbell, taking the air together, shot down the first two German airplanes to fall victims to American aviators with Gen. Pershing's Expeditionary Forces, is vividly told in the personal diary of Winslow, made public tonight by the War Department. For their feat the officers were decorated by the French government and later proposed for the American Distinguished Service Cross.

The account which discloses that the two machines were sent down within a minute of each other and almost on top of an American airdrome, was not written for publication, but the department explained that because of its historical and descriptive value it was decided to make it available to the public.

Winslow, who was the patrol leader, wrote that he and Campbell, since designated as the first American "ace," were on emergency call duty on Sunday morning, April 14 last, when, at 8:45 o'clock information came that two German planes were about 2000 meters (about 6000 feet) above a city only a mile from the airdrome. The aviators rushed to their machines and were soon off, Campbell in the lead. Winslow, however, was first to get his man.

Winslow Got First Plane.

"I had not made a complete half turn," Winslow wrote, "and was at about 250 meters when straight above and ahead of me in the mist of the early morning and not more than a hundred yards away, I saw a plane coming toward me with huge black crosses on its wings and tail. I was so furious to see a Hun directly over the aviation field that I swore out loud and violently opened fire. At the same time, to avoid my bullets he slipped into a left-hand reversement, and came down firing on me. I climbed, however, in a right-hand spiral, and slipped off, coming down directly behind him and 'on his tail'. Again I violently opened fire. I had him at a rare advantage which was due to the greater speed and maneuver ability of our wonderful machines. I fired 20 to 30 rounds at him and could see my tracers entering his machine. Then, in another moment, his plane went straight down in an uncontrolled nose dive—I had put his engine out of commission.

"I followed in a straight dive firing all the way. At about six feet above the ground he tried to regain control of machine, but could not, and he crashed to earth. I darted down near him, made a sharp turn by the wreck to make sure he was out of commission, then made a victorious swoop down over him and climbed up again to see if 'Doug' needed any help with the other Hun, for I had caught a glimpse of their combat out of the corner of my eye.

"Doug" Got His, Too.

"I rose about 300 again to see 'Doug' on the tail of his boche. His tracer bullets were passing throughout the enemy plane. I climbed a little higher and was diving down on this second Hun and was about to fire when I saw the German plane go up in flames and crash to earth. Doug had sent his Hun plane down one minute after I had shot down mine.

"Mind you, the fight took place only 300 meters (900 feet) up in full view of all on the ground and in the nearby town, and it took place directly above our aviation field. These are remarkable facts, for one of our Majors who, with the French army since 1915, has shot down 17 machines, never had one land in France.

"When we landed only our respective mechanics were left in the 'drome' to help us out of our flying clothes. The whole camp was pouring out flying by on foot, bikes, side cars, automobiles; soldiers, women, children, Majors, Colonels, French and American—all poured out of the city. 'Doug' and I congratulated each other and my mechanic, no longer military, jumping up and down, waving his hat, pounded me on the back instead of saluting, and yelled: 'Damn it. That's the stuff, old kid.' Then Campbell and I rushed to our respective Hun wrecks.

German Pilot Skeptical.

"On the way there—it was only half a mile—I ran into a huge crowd of soldiers—blue and khaki—pressing about one man. I pushed my way through the crowd and heard somebody triumphantly say to the surrounded man in French: 'There he is; now you will believe he is an American.' I looked at the man—a scrawny, poorly clad little devil, dressed in a rotten German uniform. It was the Hun pilot of the machine I had shot down. It seems he would not believe that an American officer had brought him down. He looked me all over and then asked me in good French if I was an American. When I answered 'Yes' he had no more to say.

"There was a huge crowd around the wrecked plane, and the first man I ran into was our major—the commanding officer—and he was the happiest man in the world outside of me and 'Doug'. A French and an American General blew up in a limousine to congratulate us—Colonels, Majors, all the pilots, all the French Officers,, mechanics—everybody in the town and camp. All had seen the fight. One woman, an innkeeper, told me she could sleep well from now on, and held up her baby for me to kiss. I had my mechanics take off everything available—the machine was a wreck—but I got some splendid souvenirs.

Like a Burnt Sacrifice.

" 'Doug' had set his Hun machine on fire at 300 metres, and it had fallen in flames, rolling over three times, and then completely burning up. There remained but a charred wreckage, like the sacrifice of some huge animal. The Hun pilot had been thrown out and was badly off. His face, hands, feet, nostrils and lungs were all burnt, while his leg was broken. He is now in a hospital and my Boche is probably commencing his job of ditch digging.

"They got much information from my man, the other could not speak. He was a Pole, said he was not an officer because he was a Pole, although he had been 'aspirant' and a pilot at the front for two years.

"That afternoon my wrecked Hun plane and the charred result of 'Doug's' good work were exhibited in the public square of the town, surrounded by armed guards and overlooked by a French military band. It also was a great day for the townspeople, and has had a good moral effect. You can imagine it, when you realize it took place above their roof tops, at only 300 metres and that they were able to see the whole fight."

U. S. AVIATOR SAID TO HAVE DOWNED 5 PLANES IN A DAY

Three of Massachusetts Man's Victories Are Officials; Two Under Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 15.—Sergt. David E. Putnam of Brookline, Mass., is reported to have downed five Germans on June 10. Three of Putnam's aerial victories now are official and the other two are under investigation. This new record, if the five victories are officially accredited, makes Putnam's total 13, supplanting Lieut. Frank Baylies of New Bedford, Mass., as the American ace of aces.

The feat accredited to Sergt. Putnam is the most notable performance by an American aviator, and has probably been eclipsed only once during the war. The only other aviator getting a larger bag of enemy airplanes in a single day is Lieut. Fonck, a French ace, who, on May 9, brought down six German machines.

Premier Orlando Announces at Rome Early Reports Indicate Enemy Has Failed to Gain Preliminary Results Usually Obtained in Such a Thrust.

NEW DRIVE COVERS FRONT OF 100 MILES

Infantry in Large Numbers Moves Forward From Asiago to the Sea After Intense Artillery Preparation of Four Hours.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, June 15.—The Austrians began a great offensive at 7 o'clock this morning on the front from the Asiago plateau to the sea.

This announcement was made in the Chamber of Deputies today by Premier Orlando, who added:

"Our troops are everywhere resisting magnificently."

"Nearly the whole of our front is engaged, as the offensive extends with extreme voilence from Astico to the Brenta, from the Brenta to the Piave and along the Piave everywhere, involving the Astico plateau, the Mount Grappa sector and the plain," said the premier.

Premier Orlando declared that the Austrians had failed to achieve even the preliminary results which usually followed a crushing offensive.

Describing the operations, the Premier said:

"A very violent bombardment began at 3 o'clock and at 7 o'clock an infantry attack was launched along the whole line. The latest news which has reached me, summarizing the situation at 1 o'clock, is that our troops have offered magnificent resistance."

A message sent from the front to the Premier concludes as follows:

"A comparison of all reports received shows that the offensive was pressed only in the first zone of resistance and not even at a few points has it obtained the effect which the enemy must have hoped for from his powerful bombardment and the enormous effectives launched—an attack against which our troops are resisting magnificently."

The Austrian offensive covers a front of from 75 to 100 miles.

The last great Austro-German offensive, begun in October, 1917, rolled back Gen. Cadorna's line from the Isonzo front and along the Venetian plain. More than a million enemy troops participated in this operation, and it was not for many weeks that the Italians were able to stay the advance. About the middle of November the Piave battle began along a 90-mile front in Northern Italy, and French and British troops were hurried to reinforce the shaken Ittalian army. The crisis was passed about the first of December, and since that time there has been heavy fighting, in which the Italians and their allies carried out many successful counter-attacks.

There have been insistent cries from Germany for Austrian action along the Italian front, to co-ordinate with the German offensive in the western zone, and for months past the Italians have been preparing for just such a blow as apparently is now being struck. The Italian army has been re-equipped and Gen. Diaz has succeeded Gen. Cadorna as Commander in Chief.

Vienna Reports Intense Gunfire on Italian Front.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, via London, June 15.—The beginning of a great offensive is indicated in the official communication from Austrian headquarters which says: "Gunfire increased to great intensity on many sectors of the southwest from early this morning.

"On the Albanian front, new French attacks are said to have broken down."

British Capture German Positions on a Two-Mile Front.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 15.—British troops in a local operation have captured the German forward posts tions on a front of two miles north of Bethune, according to Field Marshal Haig's report from British headquarters in France tonight.

The statement reads:

"The number of prisoners taken by us in the successful operations carried out last night north of Bethune is 196. We also captured several machine guns. As a result of this attack our troops have gained possession of the enemy's forward positions on a front of two miles, securing all our objectives.

"In the fighting reported this morning east of Nieppe Forest the enemy by a local attack carried out under heavy bombardment, succeeded in driving three of our advanced posts west fo Vieux Berquin.

"The hostile artillery was active this morning east of Arras and has shown some activity this afternoon north of Bethune."

French Reoccupy Important Point Near Soissons.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 15.—French troops have reoccupied Coucres-Et-Valsery (southwest of Soissons), an important strategic point from which the Germans have been endeavoring to debouch their troops. The war office announcement of this tonight adds that ground has also been gained around Montgobert.

Americans on Marne Front Fire Thousands of Gas Shells.

By the Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, June 15.—American batteries last night hurled thousands of gas shells into the German line along the Marne front, northwest of Chatea uThierry. The bombardment was in retaliation for a heavy gas attack by the Germans.

There was patrol activity along the America nfronts in the Marne region an din Picardy, and some artillery fire occurred in addition to the gas bombardment. There was no infantry action.

The situation, however, is tense along the entire line.

Berlin Says Allied Local Attacks Were Repulsed.

BERLIN, via London, June 15.—The evening report from general headquarters says: "Local attacks by the enemy north of Bethune and south of the Aisne failed with heavy losses."

The earlier communication said:

"Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: There has been lively reconnoitering activity. We brought in prisoners southwest of Merris. Enemy advances in force on the Ancre were repulsed.

"In the evening artillery and mine throwing duels revived on both sides of the Somme."

"Army group of German Crown Prince: Southwest of Noyon the infantry activity was limited to local engagements. The intensity of the artillery fire decreased. South of the Aisne the increased artillery fire continued.

"Several attacks which the enemy launched in the forest of Villers Cotterets were repulsed. The number of prisoners captured in recent battles south of the Aisne has increased to 48 officers and more than 2000 men.

"Army group of Gen. von Eichhorn: Russian bands about 10,000 strong, coming from Leisk and landing on the north coast of the Sea of Azov and advancing to attack Taganrog, were destroyed. Some of the enemy who endeavored to escape in boats and rafts were shot down in the water."

U. S. SENTRY CAUGHT BUT ESCAPES BY TRICKING GERMANS

Gen. Pershing Reports That Two Enemy Airplanes Were Brought Down by Americans.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15. — Gen. Pershing officially reported today the downing of two enemy machines yesterday by American aviators. Aside from heavy shelling by both sides, northwest of Chateau-Thierry, the dispatch said, there was nothing else to report.

The communique follows:

"Section A—Northwest of Chateau Thierry, the day was marked by heavy shelling, executed by the batteries at both sides and including the use of gas. There is nothing to report from the other points occupied by our troops.

"Yesterday our aviators shot down two hostile machines.

"Section B—In the Woevre on the night of June 11 to June 12 a German patrol captured an American sentry at a listening post. The sentry had two grenades, from one of which he managed to remove the cap while he was being taken away. By striking this grenade against the other, then dropping them and making a sudden dash he succeeded in escaping.

"In a communique made public tonight Gen. Pershing reported the successful bombing by American aviators of a station and railroad tracks in an unnamed town behind the German lines. A number of direct hits were made and all the American machines returned.

Aside from patrol work there was no marked activity on the fronts held by American troops, the statement said. It follows:

"There was no marked activity except that of patrols at points occupied by our troops. Last night our aviators bombed the station and railroad tracks at ——. A number of direct hits were made. All of our machines returned."

U. S. WILL HAVE 1,000,000 MEN IN FRANCE BY JULY

ties have had to have more troops than they had at the start.

"Obviously the objective of the German advance is, first, the channel ports, which would make it necessary for England in shipping troops to France to go farther out to sea and a longer distance, making the turn-around longer and slowing up the movement, and making it more dangerous; second, Paris, which, of course, is a great strategic objective because of its importance sentimentally and practically to the people of France.

"All of these drives have been stopped. The last advance, the advance which we are now considering in the daily press, is more to straighten out the German line than it is an advance considered as a military movement with a definite and important objective—like Paris, for instance.

"Taking the general location of the advance along the Oise, you will see that between the Picardy and Marne advance we have been holding a re-entrant angle, which furnishes the distance from which a dangerous attack could be made on the flank of the Marne advance and the most desirable thing which Germany could have at this stage would be a straightening out of the line. That is apparently what she had in mind in beginning her advance on June 9. She succeeded in that, moving forward for a distance of six miles, and the last information we have indicates that west of Soissons she still is attacking with the idea of finally straightening out her line along the general front, which I have indicated to you.

"The activities of the Germans are now toward Paris, but as for the importance of the objective from a military standpoint, the capture of the channel ports would have a more immediate effect upon the prosecution of the war than a movement on Paris."

Further Away Than in 1914.

In connection with the advance toward Paris, however, Gen. March pointed out that the farthest point they had thus far reached this year was 20½ miles farther away from Paris than the point of their nearest approach to that city in 1914.

While Gen. March did not say so, it was evident that he anticipates further efforts to complete the reduction of the Compiegne salient before the major movement toward the channel is resumed. Other officers feel that the renewal of the assault on the British lines will definitely mark the beginning of the final stage of the battle, but they also believe that the German strategists may not be willing to leave the allies in possession of strong points like Compiegne and its surrounding forests, which would be in the rear and on the flank of the thrust toward the coast.

Earlier in the day Gen. March told members of the Senate Military Committee at their weekly conference with War Department officials that the situation of the allies "is now more favorable than it has been for many months."

New Gas Aided Germans.

American military experts are agreed, Senators said, after the conference, that the present German drive has been stopped, for the present at least, but its renewal, possibly with its force directed more largely against positions held by the Americans, is expected. The enemy's recent successes, the Senators were told, were due largely to new uses of gas. The allies, it was said, soon will be ready to cope with new forms of gas attack. Gas masks now in use, the Senators were told, admittedly are not useful against some forms of German gas, particularly mustard gas. A special "tear" gas for use against artillery, the Senators were told, has been duplicated by the Germans.

The allies, officials said, are preparing to match the German efforts in the use of gas and provide for complete defenses of their forces, as far as possible before the next attack of the enemy develops.

"Third of Enemy's Great Offensives Mastered," Says Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 15.—"The third of the enemy's great offensives has been mastered ever since the third day," says an official comment issued this evening. "When one stops to think," it continues, "that the Germans, electrified by their success on the Marne, expected to overwhelm us and advance along the road to Paris through Compiegne, which was their first objective, the importance of June 11, which obliged them to stop, can be seen.

"For seven days the enemy was able to make progress in the offensive beginning March 21. Following May 27, his advance was interrupted in the same length of time. On this occasion the Germans, who had let loose their attack on June 9, had to give up after the battle of June 11.

"Our soldiers, inferior in numbers, have beaten the best assault troops of the German empire and inflicted upon them terrible losses and closed again the barrier. This result gives us confidence in the future."

BAUER LETTER WAS PETTY CHICANERY, WILFLEY ASSERTS

Senator Gives Out Communication Sent by Him to Secretary of Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

United States Senator Xenophon P. Wilfley yesterday made public, through his campaign headquarters here, a letter written by him to Ignatius J. Bauer, secretary of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

In his letter, Wilfley comments on the letter recently written by Bauer to R. Perry Spencer, one of Wilfley's most active supporters at Jefferson City. This letter was published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch. In it Bauer said that the liquor dealers were "against Folk for Senator, and against Folk for anything," and they would not try to "hang a beer sign" on Folk's opponent, or embarrass him with questions about prohibition and woman suffrage. The defeat of Folk, he declared, would satisfy the liquor men.

Wilfley wrote to Bauer:

"I have a letter before me purporting to be signed by you and a copy of a St. Louis newspaper in which is published the same letter addressed to R. P. Spencer. In this letter you pretend to be writing as secretary of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, and you express most violent opposition to my opponent in the race for United States Senator.

Points Out Clear Inference.

"From the language of your letter the inference is clear that you are opposing Gov. Folk because of injury which he has done to your association, real or imaginary, and you clearly intended the inference to be drawn that you have received, or expect to receive, favors from me. I might have been puzzled by your letter if it had not come to me, at the time I received the letter and the newspaper clipping, that a carbon copy of the letter to Mr. Spencer had been given to the press by my opponent before it reached its destination.

"From this significant circumstanstance I am forced to the conclusion that your letter was written for the purpose of favoring what it seemed to oppose, and in the preparation and publication of your letter there was a desire to arose in some of the voters of the State prejudice against me, by inferring, what no man can charge, that I have asked for your support, or that you can expect favors from me in consideration of it.

Petty Political Chicanery.

"I shall not undertake to express my opinion of the methods adopted in the preparation and publication of this letter, further than to say that it represents in my judgment the most contemptible form of petty political chicanery. I do not believe it will serve its intended purpose of misleading any of the voters of Missouri when the facts are known, and I am giving this letter to the press of the State in order that the people may be informed and may judge for themselves the real purpose of the letter, which so speedily found its way into the hands of my opponent, and was with such speed delivered by him to the press for publication.

"I understand that you are yourself a Republican and now hold a position in the office of the Sheriff of the city of St. Louis. It is fairly to be inferred that your interest in a contest between two Democrats in the primary is measured by advantage that you might expect to gain for your party through the nomination of my opponent rather than myself. I do not believe that the Democratic voters of the State will fail to see the significance of your action from this standpoint."

Three Dead in Oil Explosion.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 15.—Three employes were burned to death and several thousand barrels of oil destroyed this morning when storage tanks around the Brewer well at Ranger, 60 miles west of Fort Worth, were ignited. Pleas Madewell, watchman, who lived five hours after being burned, says an explosion preceded the fire.

40,000 MEN FOR NEW WARSHIPS URGED BY DANIELS

Tells House Committee They Will Be Needed to Man Great Fleet to Be Turned Out by July 1, 1919.

SERIOUS HANDICAP OF NAVY POSSIBLE

Submits Letter From Rear Admiral Palmer Revealing Shortage of Higher Grade Officers in Fleet Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Upwards of 40,000 men will be needed to man the great fleet of warships which the United States will turn out during the next fiscal year, the House Naval Committee was advised today by Secretary Daniels.

In asking the House to concur in the Senate amendment to the naval appropriations bill, increasing the navy's enlisted personnel from 87,000 to 131,485 men, Daniels transmitted letters from Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations, and Rear Admiral Palmer, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, showing in detail why this increase is necessary.

The correspondence revealed that new warships are being turned out faster than they can be manned with the present limited personnel, and that should there be a change in naval tactics and the nation be forced to a defensive instead of an offensive fight, the navy would be seriously handicapped in handling the fleet against an enemy.

Admiral Palmer said in his letter that a shortage of officers of higher grade should be made up, pointing out that American destroyers now are operating in the war zone without a designated commander other than the British officer, Admiral Bayley. The submarine chaser force in foreign waters is commanded by a Captain, the Admiral said, whereas there should be at least one Rear Admiral, and preferably two, for this force.

No Flag Officer for Cruisers.

The two American divisions of armored cruisers also are without a flag officer, and there is no flag officer for the division of superdreadnoughts which will be added to the navy within a year. Admiral Palmer also pointed out that the Admirals and Vice Admirals in command of American fleets should have Rear Admirals as chiefs of staff.

"Merely to man our fleet properly and to make our war organization efficient," Admiral Palmer's letter said, "we must have immediately 27 additional rear admirals, and by July 1, 1919, six more, in addition to those we have now."

Admiral Palmer said that specifically 42,146 men will be needed to man the warships which will be turned out during the next fiscal year ending July 1, 1919. This force he divided as follows: For battleships, 4400; destroyers, 29,992; patrol boats, 5400; sea-going tugs, 3705; submarines, 1026; fleet fuel ships, 1070; gunboats, ammunition ships, etc., 553.

On last April 1, he wrote, 83,475 men were required for the permanent navy, as follows: On battleships, 33.486; cruisers and monitors, 18,590; gunboats, 3228; destroyers and torpedo boats, 8234; supply vessels, 5304; naval transports and hospital ships, 2506; tugs 1000; yards, stations, hospitals, radio stations, 6000; submarines and tenders, 5037.

With a force of 131,485 men he estimated that there might be a surplus over those actually on duty of 5864 to replace men wounded, on sick or regular leave.

QUESTIONS MERCY SHIP CARGO

Berlin Paper Fears That Flyers and Planes Will Be on "Comfort."

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—Referring to the report that the American hospital ship Comfort is to be sent to Europe without escort and that Germany has been notified of this by the American Government the Lokal Anzeiger says:

"We humbly venture to ask the question what will the Comfort carry on her first voyage to Europe, as she will have no sick or wounded aboard. We greatly fear American flying men and, perhaps, a few dozen airplanes After the ample experience we have had in the course of the war of hospital ships bearing the sign of the Red Cross the gentlemen of America and their President will perhaps not take it amiss if we ask this question."

JEREMIAH O'LEARY ARRESTED IN REMOTE WASHINGTON TOWN

On Way Back to New York in Custody of Federal Agents After Capture Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Jeremiah A. O'Leary, a fugitive from justice since the eve of the date set for his trial on a charge of violating the espionage act by publication of seditious matter in the anti-British periodical, Bull, and later indicted for conspiracy to commit treason, has been arrested at Sara, Wash., and is on his way back to New York in the custody of Federal agents, it was announced here tonight.

O'Leary was found Wednesday in the remote hamlet in Washington, which is about 27 miles north of Portland, Ore. No details were made public concerning the pursuit.

Announcement of his capture marks another dramatic episode in a case which already has had many sensational developments. His brother, John J. O'Leary, and Arthur L. Lyon, a business associate, were placed on trial in Federal Court yesterday under an indictment charging them with having aided him to escape from the jurisdiction of the court.

LOCKSMITH HELD IN INQUIRY INTO PETITION THEFT

natures at his home, and petitions bearing 5746 were filed with the Election Board May 8. Of the sum of 1300 and 2672, it is estimated that 72 per cent, or 2860, will be accepted as valid, thus making a total now on hand of 8606. The total number necessary for a referendum election is 11,715.

300 Volunteer Canvassers.

To get the needed signatures, 300 volunteer canvassers will go over the city today and tomorrow, paying particular attention to baseball games, public and private parks and public gatherings.

The robbery was one of the strangest the police have had to deal with in recent years.

The league's headquarters are on the second floor of the Sawyer Building, at 810 Chestnut street. The petitions were taken to the Cigarmakers' Union headquarters at 6 p. m. Friday for safe keeping until the following morning.

Safe Drilled Open.

When the janitor opened the building early yesterday he discovered that the safe had been opened with an electric drill, and the petitoins were gone. The drill was on the floor. It had been attached to an electric light socket. No money or other valuables were molested.

In investigating crime it is the police practice to seek first for a motive. Proske, who was questioned by the police yesterday in an effort to get a clew, said that the conclusion could not be escaped that the theft was committed by a professional burglar, and, second, that the only possible beneficiary of it was the United Railways Co. He reasoned, therefore, that the safe was opened by a professional cracksman in the interest of the United Railways.

The press agent for the United Railways yesterday called up the newspapers with a "quiet tip" which he suggested would, if pursued intelligently, lead to a solution. It was, in effect, that the league members, despairing of getting enough signatures, had "framed up" the robbery to cast odium on the traction company. To support this theory, he said that the Board of Education had refused the use of school buildings for meetings of the league because the attendance was so small. The league had difficulty in getting more signatures after the Socialist party had been canvassed, he said.

Dictaphone Found Two Weeks Ago.

Proske and other members of the Referendum League asserted, however, that they had 21,544 signatures, almost twice as many as are needed to have the proposition submitted at the next election in November and 1464 more than are needed to call a special election.

Two weeks ago officers of the Referendum League reported that they had found a dictaphone concealed behind a radiator in the league office. William Petty, negro manager of the building, said yesterday, under questioning by the police, that two men calling themselves Federal officers, forced him, with threats, to admit them to the office at night, at which time they installed the instrument.

Petty said the men told him the Referendum League was suspected of pro-German activities, and for him to say nothing about the dictaphone; otherwise he would "get into trouble with the Government." Petty said he complied.

No Federal official could be found who had ever received any complaint about the Referendum League, or who knew of any such investigation. Officers of the Referendum League reported last Wednesday that they had found a home-made ladder leaning against the building, at the league's office window.

Two appeals were issued by the league yesterday: One for volunteer canvassers, and another to the general public to sign the petitions. After newspapers telling of the robbery appeared on the street yesterday, a number of persons called at the headquarters to sign the petitions.

"Beat the Robbers."

A man patrolled the downtown streets yesterday afternoon with a petition blank and carried over his shoulder a banner with this inscription:

Your Last Chance to Beat the Robbers.

Sign Referendum
Petition Here.

Responses to the appeal were numerous. A crowd surrounded him at Seventh and Olive streets at 3:30 o'clock, signing the petition.

Proske pointed this out as evidence that the theft would arouse the public in behalf of the referendum, and asserted it not only would result in the getting of enough signatures, but also would prove a powerful argument to the voters to repeal the franchise bill at the election.

The franchise ordinance, extending the United Railways' franchises to 1948, was signed by Mayor Kiel April 10, after a long fight against it by civic bodies and labor unions. Experts had declared its provisions inadequate and its terms unjust to the city.

Under the city charter, the referendum can be invoked by petition. The procedure required is that petitions bearing signatures in number equaling 2 per cent of the votes cast at the last mayoralty election must be filed 30 days after the Mayor signs the bill. This was accomplished when the league filed 5746 signatures May 8. This authorized the continuation of the referendum movement an additional 40 days, in which another 5 per cent must be obtained.

Dates of Elections.

The 7 per cent entitled the people to a vote on the bill at the general election in November. However, the law also provides that if 12 per cent are obtained, a special election must be held.

TREATMENT OF WOOD HAS HURT ARMY, T. R. SAYS

Colonel Writes General's Offensive Seems to Have Been in Pointing Out Shortcomings.

POINTS TO WOOD'S STANDING ABROAD

Declares General Would Have Been Able to Give Invaluable Assistance in France.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
(By Courtesy of the Kansas City Star.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 15.—Senator Hiram Johnson has rendered many notable services to the public and among them is his recent speech concerning the cruel injustice with which Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood has been treated and the very grave damage thereby done the army and the allied cause at this critical moment of the war.

Gen. Wood's entire offense consists in his having, before the war, continually advocated our doing things which now every one in his senses admits ought to have been done. Nine tenths of wisdom consists of being wise in time.

Gen. Wood was wise in time. Moreover, by 20 years of hard, practical work, he fitted himself to do peculiarly well in this very crisis. He was our senior general in rank. He was recognized by the best French and English military authorities as by experience trained to play an immediate and important part in the difficult and perilous joint work of the war. He had testified at length and with exhaustive professional knowledge before the Congressional Military Committees, one year and two years prior to our entry into the war, pointing out all the military lacks, which experience has since shown to exist and which the War Department then denied existed.

He is to be credited with the only piece of serious military preparedness in advance, which is to our credit. In the service of 1915, in the teeth of indifference and hostility from superiors, he created Plattsburg Officers' Reserve Training Camp, starting the system of training camps which has enabled us to officer our draft army.

He is in splendid physical condition. Recently when in France he was severely wounded by a shell burst, and the surgeons reported his recovery as being more rapid than would have been the case with the average young man of robust bodily health and vigor. He has done excellent work in training his men at Camp Funston. He has been unwearied in looking after the health and welfare of his men. He has been rewarded by their loyal devotion; they have been profoundly grieved and moved by having him suddenly taken from them.

The refusal to use his great ability and energy means a distinct subtraction from the sum total of our military efficiency, a distinct addition to the risk from disease and discomfort which some of our men at the front will have to incur, and a distinct benefit to the cause of Germany.

No explanation has been given the American people for the action concerning him. Nothing has been made public which warrants our belief that this action was due either to professional or to patriotic considerations.

LIGGETT WORKED OUT PLANS FOR NEW U. S. ARMY

First Corps Commander in France Said to Be a "Bug" on Intrenching.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The commander of the first American corps in France, Major-General Hunter Liggett, has behind him the conventional and creditable service record—the West, the Spanish War, the Philippines, the Texas border.

His share in 1898 was to help to improvise a volunteer army; his duties in the Adjutant-General's office gave him no chance at the Spaniards. In 1899 he went to Cuba with the army of occupation, promptly contracted typhoid and was invalideed home—one of the disappointments of his life. He made up for it, however, in the Philippines.

His rapid promotion has been chiefly earned by his work under Wood and Witherspoon in building up the war college. The army gives him a great share of the credit for its effectiveness. He had charge of collecting the data in advance for a Mexican campaign. In Texas his ability to make soldiers in a hurry again asserted itself. His command was the Fourth Brigade, and he worked the men without mercy.

"He's a bug on intrenching," it was said of him. Certainly the brigade at intrenchment practice dug up a good share of that part of the Lone Star State, until they could "go to ground" faster than any rivals.

Gen. Liggett is one of the youngest officers of his rank, being 61 years old. He has been one of the keenest and most eager students of the military lessons taught in Belgium and France. Possibly that explains his zeal for intrenchment proficiency.

Personally he is said to be about the quietest and most retiring of the Generals. He married Miss Harriet R. Lane of San Antonio, Tex., in 1881. His native town was Reading, Pa. He has been in the army since 1879.

When Gen. Pershing's men got to France Gen. Liggett was promptly picked out by Gen. Pershing as an officer capable of big things. When the Americans took over a "divisional frontage" Gen. Liggett was placed in command.

It was assumed from this he would command the first corps, a forecast now confirmed. It is reported that instead of a single corps, he will have an "army" of two corps of three divisions each, approximately 200,000 men. Gen. Liggett is understood to have worked out the whole plan of reorganizing the army on the American entrance into the war to make it properly dovetail into the French and British schemes of the organization. This work in the war college eminently fitted him for this task and the manner in which it was wrought has gained the admiration of military experts the world over.

COL. MILNE FROM INDIA SPEAKS HERE TODAY AND TOMORROW

He Says Germans Do Not Like to Have Hindus for Their Foe.

Col. J. S. Wardlow Milne of the India Defense Force of the British Army will speak today in the First Presbyterian Church, Washington avenue and Sarah street, and before the City Club at noon tomorrow. He is on sick leave, having been made ill by the heat in India. His wife and a secretary are accompanying him on a tour of the United States.

Col. Milne, in speaking to reporters yesterday, praised the valor of the Indian troops, and told of the German efforts to foment disloyalty in India and to gain political and industrial domination of the country.

The German agents, he said, found that the Indian peoples could not be swerved from their loyalty to the British Empire.

The German soldiers, he declared, dislike to find Indian troops opposed to the min the trenches. They especially dislike and dread the Gurkhas, who spend their spare time whetting their long knives, and who are fond of using these knives in trench raids.

FORD RETURNS TO DETROIT

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., June 15.—Henry Ford, who announced in Washington Thursday that he would ecept the nomination for United States Senator to succeed William Alden Smith, if tendered him, arrived here today from the capital, but declined to make any comment. E. G. Liebold, his private secretary, however, said that Ford would probably make no campaign for the nomination.

Indorsement of Ford as the Republican, but not the Democratic candidate for the nomination for Senator was made today by former Gov. Fred M. Warner, in withdrawing fro mthe Republican race. Warner denounced the action of the Democratic conference at Lansing in urging the Republicans to unite with the Democrats in supporting Ford. Former Gov. Chase S. Osborn caiticised President Wilson's actoin in urging Mr. Ford to run for Seinator as an attempt to "pose as a political dictator."

Widow of Adolphus Busch Returning From Germany, Where She Went Just Before Outbreak of War.

SAILING DELAYED SEVERAL TIMES

Closing of French and Spanish Ports and Illness Changed Plans—Harry B. Hawes Accompanying Her.

By the Associated Press.

A CUBAN PORT, June 15.—Mrs. Lily Busch, widow of Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, was among the arrivals here today on a Spanish steamer. She has been in Germany since the beginning of the war.

Mrs. Busch arrived in Germany just prior to the outbreak of war in 1914. In response to inquiry of friends, she soon afterward cabled that she had established a hospital and felt that her place was in Germany until the war was over.

In November, 1917, Harry Hawes departed for Europe to conduct Mrs. Busch to St. Louis. Soon afterward it became known that Mrs. Busch's income had been placed under control of A. Mitchell Palmer, custodian of enemy alien property.

Mrs. Busch arrived and was met by Hawes in Switzerland in December, 1917, and since that time Hawes has been making efforts to get her to the United States.

Mrs. Busch became ill in Switzerland and her departure was delayed. In March this year Hawes cabled that he and Mrs. Busch were in Paris and expected to sail soon. The next word from Hawes came from Spain on April 19. Sailings had been canceled from France and he had sought passage for Mrs. Busch from Spain. However, Mrs. Busch again became ill and Spanish sailings were also cancelled. It was finally announced by Hawes that he would sail with Mrs. Busch on May 25, but on that day a U-boat appeared in the port where they expected to embark. The next word came from Hawes on June 10, saying that his party expected to land in Cuba in 24 hours.

TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE HELD UP BY PLEA FROM WILSON

Operators' President Says Western Union's Attitude, Solely, Controls Future Action to Be Taken.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 15.—President S. J. Konenkamp of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union announced today that he had received a communication from President Wilson urging him to use his good offices to help settle the threatened telegraphers' strike. Konenkamp announced that he had made a sympathetic reply to the President's communication.

Konenkamp declined to make public the contents of his reply until it is in the hands of the President.

"Although the time limit on the ultimatum sent by the General Strike Committee of the Railway Telegraphers expired at noon today," he said, "this direct appeal from the President puts a new angle on the situation. Speaking for the commercial telegraphers at least, we can do nothing until we find out what the railway telegraphers are going to do.

"If through the representations of President Wilson the Western Union officials will abide by the decision of the National War Labor Board the chances are that violation of the time limit on the ultimatum will be overlooked."

LABOR COMMITTEE DEPARTS WITH STRIKES UNSETTLED

Representatives of War Board Failed in Efforts to Bring Employers and Employes Together.

COMPANY OFFICIALS IGNORED SUMMONS

V. A. Olander and C. E. Michael Were Unable to Get Representative of Wagner Electric Co. to Appear.

Victor A. Olander of Chicago and C. E. Michael of Roanoke, Va., representatives of employers and employes respectively on the National War Labor Board, and who were designated as a special committee to deal with the St. Louis strike situation, have departed from St. Louis after ineffectual efforts to bring employers and striking employes together with a view to ending strikes in this city.

They came here at the request of labor union officials and had two conferences with the St. Louis Joint Committee of the War Labor Board, composed of three representatives of employers and three of labor. They endeavored to arrange conferences of employers and strikers, but failed, owing to the refusal of employers to comply with the War Labor Board's request that they appear for hearings on the situation at their plants.

Before departing for Chicago Olander said he would make a full report of the St. Louis strike situation to the War Labor Board and expressed a hope for some action that will end industrial disputes in this city. He was disappointed over the employers' ignoring the War Board's local committee, as he believed the committee could end the trouble in this city if given an opportunity.

Sought to End Wagner Strike.

Olander and Michael had hoped to conduct a hearing of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co.'s strike of employes, where union men say 2000 men and women have been out since March 30, but officials of the company declined to appear before the committee. Olander then insisted that the union representatives of the Wagner employes be allowed to present their side of the case.

Before proceeding with the hearing Olander and Michael called on Judge Trieber of the United States District Court Friday to inquire if a hearing of the Wagner case would interfere with an injunction proceeding in that court, in which the company sought to enjoin the strikers from picketing the plant. Judge Trieber assured them that they could legally proceed and expressed the hope that they would settle the strike out of court.

The strikers then were permitted to present their case and it will be laid before the War Labor Board at Washington. Union leaders representing garment workers in this city, who are demanding increased wages and improved working conditions, and representatives of striking workmen of barber supply companies, also requested hearings by the local committee. The employers in these cases also have refused to appear before the Joint St. Louis committee.

Situation Unchanged.

Michael declined to make a statement for publication before leaving, but it was learned that he called on several employers affected by labor trouble and discussed the situation.

The situation is about the same now as before Michael and Olander came. The local committe will continue to meet from time to time in the hope that a method of adjustment satisfactory to both sides will be found.

Judge Trieber yesterday granted a temporary injunction restraining the strikers at the Wagner plant from the use of abusive and violent language and from interference with the work of employes who did not join them in the strike. The injunction was granted on motion of the company. A previous restraining order of the same nature was granted by Judge Dyer on May 2.

W. A. Layman, president of the company, testified that the injury to the company before the first restraining order was issued was enormous, in that the strikers intimidated all but 700 or 3000 employes into joining their ranks. After the first order was issued, he testified the number of workers who returned to work increased the force to its normal condition and the company is now able to produce Government munition orders at 100 per cent efficiency.

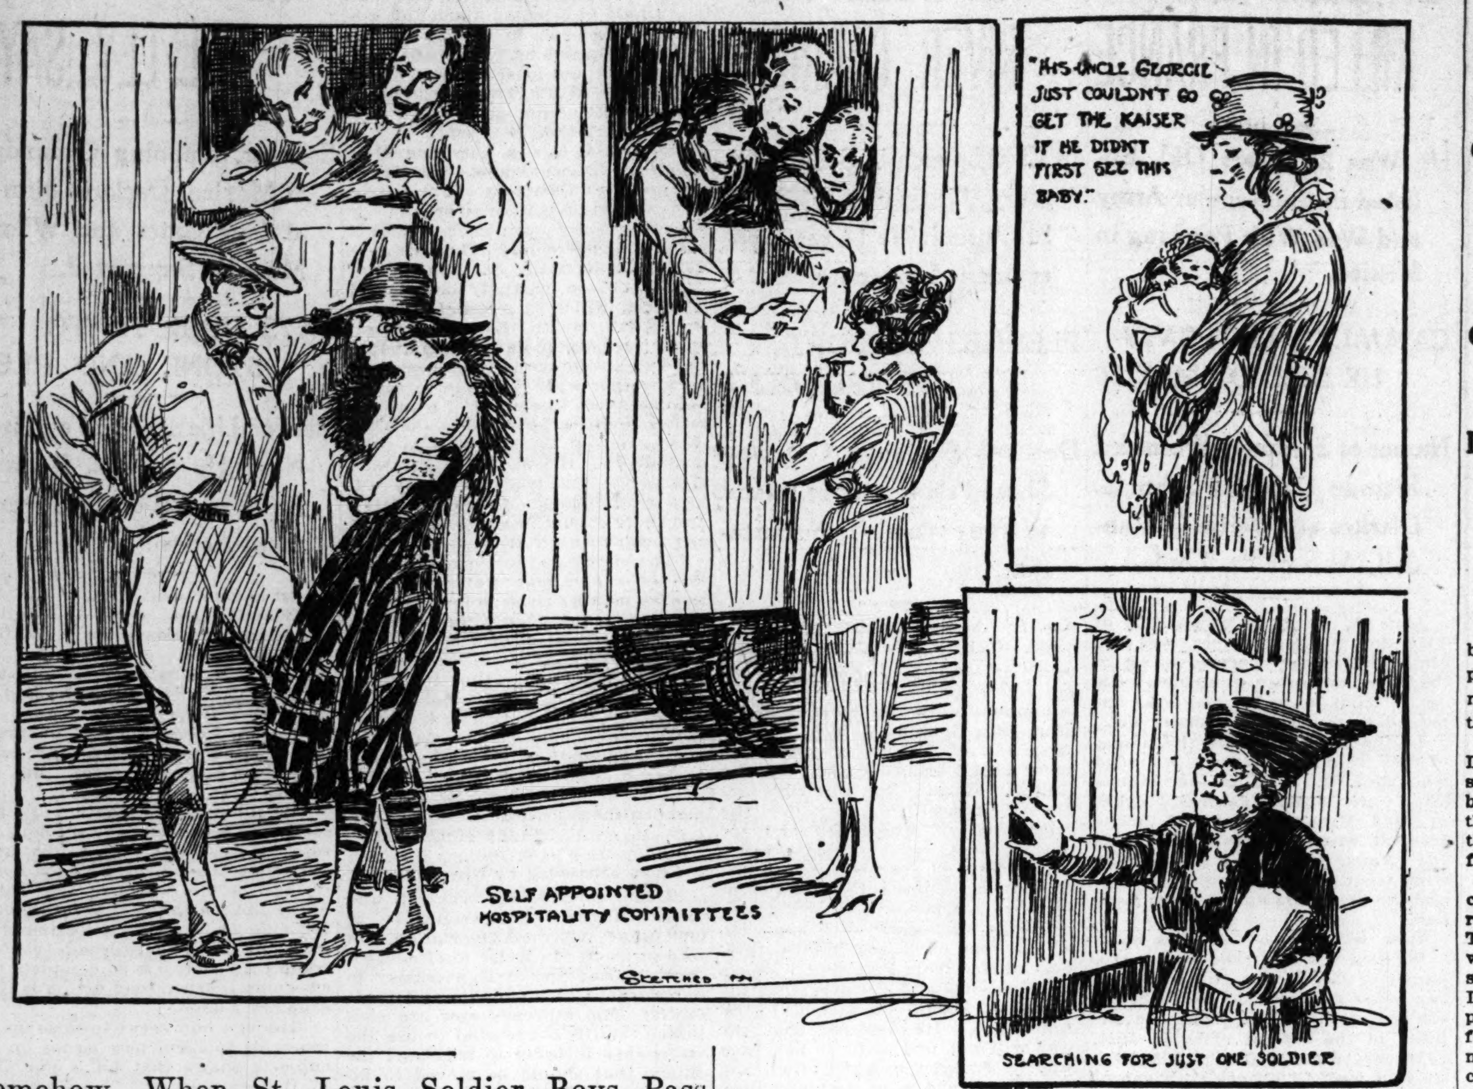
TOO MUCH PLATINUM JEWELRY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The whims of fashion which have created a great demand for platinum in jewelry have not yielded to the national needs as readily as had been expected, the Bureau of Mines announced today in making a renewal appeal to the people to release this precious metal so that the "American war machine may go ahead at full speed."

The bureau asks the public not to purchase any platinum jewelry either during the war or thereafter.

Uncle Sam Sometimes Winks at Disobedience of His Army Orders in the Terminal Yards



"HIS UNCLE GEORGIE JUST COULDN'T GO GET THE KAISER IF HE DIDN'T FIRST SEE THIS BABY."
SELF APPOINTED HOSPITALITY COMMITTEES SKETCHED BY SEARCHING FOR JUST ONE SOLDIER

Somehow, When St. Louis Soldier Boys Pass Through Under Sealed Orders, Their Family and Friends Are on Hand to Meet Them.

By Marguerite Martyn.

A LONG alley enclosing two tracks has been fenced off in the Terminal yards for the safety of those persistent ones, mostly women, who have been braving the jungle of railroad tracks, each to catch a glimpse of some particular soldier on a troop train passing through.

Some of the dangers have been eliminated by the wire fence. Women and children do not swarm over the tracks and weave in and out among moving trains as they did, and the guards can handle the situation more effectually. But many discomforts still are undergone.

The other morning there were women and a few men waiting who had been waiting since the afternoon before. They had sat on a pile of lumber under the open sky all the night through. One of the women carried a baby, a five months old baby, in her arms.

There was a little stoop shouldered woman, gray haired and black garbed, her back bent not so much with age as by some too confining occupation. She had remained until after midnight the night before, when they told her there would be no more trains until morning; had been persuaded to go home, and when awakened by what she thought might be the whistle of a troop train at five that morning had hurried back to the tracks without breakfast.

Three trains stopped on the tracks that morning. Each time the little old lady would walk slowly the length of the several coaches, searching the windows, all of which were crowded with the wriggling, jostling shoulders and heads of soldiers competing for the most advantageous place position for surveying the scene outside. Then she would walk back again the length of the train, more slowly, giving each window a more careful searching, the boys having quieted down a bit now. Many youths held out their hands to her and she would reach up to them absently. She didn't ask questions, for she knew the information she desired—as to where the men were from and what division they might be—they would not be permitted to give. Then she would go back to the lumber pile to wait for the next train which, rumor said, was standing even now only a few miles out on the tracks. Near noontime somebody said to her, "Won't you come now and get something to eat at a restaurant?" "No," she replied, "I am afraid I might miss that next train."

The face she searched for, the hand she sought to clasp, were those of her youngest son, whom she had not seen since he enlisted months ago and was sent to a training camp in California. This little glimpse through a car window might be the last she'd ever have of her boy. Do you blame her for making the effort?

IT is on account of mothers such as this, and fathers, wives, sweethearts just as plucky, that Uncle Sam is suspected of having rather winked at instances of disregard of one of his orders. A soldier may not notify his family when he is passing through St. Louis. He may not even know his route or destination himself. The train may be proceeding under sealed orders. Yet relatives do, somehow, sometimes get "hunches." And when a soldier's whole family and his best girl and some of his neighbors just accidentally happen to be strolling through the Terminal yards when unexpectedly a train pulls in, upon which, lo and behold, there is the one soldier in which they all are most interested, why, the soldier isn't always courtmartialed. At least I have not heard that he is.

There were several other mothers and fathers, one mother accompanied by five daughters; a war bride whose husband is an officer and who is well known, and other relatives who had been waiting, waiting, all with anxious looks upon their faces, for of course "hunches" at best are indefinite. The women who had remained there all night could be identified by their disheveled hair and absence of hats. The mother with five daughters was among these.

But while some of these cases tore at your heart strings, there were others which made you hope there may be truth in the rumor that Uncle Sam, when he gets around to it, is going to issue a new and more rigid order against people meeting troop trains.

The woman with the 5-months-old baby was not waiting for the baby's father, if, sympathetically, you have been indulging in that fancy. She was waiting for the baby's uncle. His Uncle Georgie never had seen this ickle bit a darlin' sweetness and he des couldn't go over and get that bad old Kaiser without first seeing this baby!

Not enough garments nor warm enough ones had been provided for such a cold night and long wait, and a pacifier which he occasionally spat out upon the ground was pretty poor provender between uncertain meals brought by any chance member of the waiting party who might be going over to the station and back and who would take along the nursing bottle.

As the sun grew hotter and hotter toward noon the baby drooped like a heavy, wilted flower over its mother's arm. Still, do you know, that baby did not complain much? He slept most of the time. Once a soldier reached out and demanded to take him in his arms, saying he had one at home just like him. Aroused at the suddenness of being bounced high in the infantryman's strong arms, the baby blinked a time or too and then actually smiled.

AND there were other victims of that emotionalism, excused in the name of patriotism, to which this infant was almost a martyr. A young person in the black and white plaid taffeta skirt pinned high under her arms, the striped stockings, the tinted georgette waist, the fur collar and the wad of gum, refreshingly true to type in every detail, evidently had chosen entertaining the soldiers as her "bit."

There are clubs and leagues of girls and women organized to extend hospitality to the soldiers. There is a Y. M. C. A. committee which meets every troop train. But this young woman's work was entirely independent, and I doubt if any large committee ever dispensed a more generous amount of hospitality than she did, single handed, and in so short a time.

When one train pulled out she lingered in the embrace of a Sergeant until he almost had to fling her from the platform. And the second train had barely slowed down to a standstill when she was in the arms of a corporal who hopped off to take his place as guard. Absolutely indifferent to the hoots and jeers of the noisy audience at the windows, who were not allowed to get off, and over whom the corporal seemed to delight in flaunting his advantage, the two promenaded up and down, their arms tightly entwined about one another, except when they stopped to exchange names and addresses which they wrote on tablets they seemed to keep for the purpose.

And it didn't seem brazen effrontery on the part of the girl so much as intentness upon the task she had in hand. Certainly she must have been unconscious of the attention she was attracting from some of the Y. M. C. A. workers, railroad men, army officers and others in a group discussing them.

"It hurts me, it positively hurts me," exclaimed the Y. M. C. A. woman worker turning her eyes away from the billing and cooing. "What do you think of it, Major?"

"Oh, I don't know," responded the Major, "there isn't time enough at one stop for them to do much damage. I guess its harmless enough. Sometimes when I see a lot of pretty girls I wish I were as young as that myself."

"It may be harmless, but is silly, perfectly silly, and it ought not to be allowed," declared a young woman social worker.

"Aw, let 'em have a good time while they can," growled a trainman with the oil can in his hand. "They may not have much longer to enjoy themselves."

That the two rather ardent fraternizers had been totally oblivious of the attention they were attracting was further proved when a private on guard duty, seeing my sketchbook, asked me if I wouldn't make a picture of the pair—for him for purposes of facetious blackmail.

I suppose, the Corporal and he bring in the same company he said. The sketching attracted their attention at last, penetrated their detachment, broke the spell and they scampered for the protection of a wall.

THERE were several other young girls, self constituted hospitality committees, who may have been waiting for some particular soldier, but who certainly made the most of the short time allotted, distributing hand clasps, embraces, names and addresses, with utmost impartiality.

The five sisters, with their mother along, seemed to feel even a little freer than the unchaperoned ones in dispensing their favors.

"What do you think of the behavior of these girls and boys?" I asked the private as he stood watching me make the sketch.

"Oh, it's harmless enough. They don't mean anything by it."

"But suppose it was your sister"——

"My sister"—he seemed to bristle as if with bayonets. "Why, any man that would get fresh with my sister, he'd answer to me, I don't care who he is. But down in my country," he added, becoming a little milder, "we're stricter about those things than they are other places, I guess. I come from the very most southern point of Texas, right at the mouth of that river where La Salle landed when he thought he was discovering the Mississippi. My sister is 15 years old and I have been at the head of the family since my father died."

And he went on to tell me how he hoped to get into the aviation corps on the other side, having already had experience flying, and maybe get a commission or something else that would make him worthy of his mother and sister.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH TO BE MEXICO PROPAGANDA BASIS

Chamber of Commerce Will Circulate 50,000 Copies of Address to Editors in That Country.

Propaganda work in Mexico is being taken up by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. Translations of President Wilson's address to Mexican editors are being made for use across the border, 50,000 copies of them to be mailed to representative firms all over Mexico, commercial organizations, consular agents, and heads of city and state governments.

"The policy of the United States toward Mexico is made plain by the President," said F. Ernest Cramer, chairman of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. "If that speech is properly circulated in Mexico it will change very greatly the attitude of the people of the Republic to the south. It shows that the American policy toward Mexico is based on trust and friendship, and gives just cause for the sending of troops across the Rio Grande. All of these are things the Mexican people have questioned. We know this from reports made to the Bureau from agents who have surveyed the Mexican field.

"There is no city in the United States to which the best of Mexican relations are as highly important and necessary as St. Louis. This city does a big Mexican business, and it is growing rapidly. For that reason, as well as for the primary object of patriotism, the dissemination of the President's speech in Mexico is being attempted by the Chamber of Commerce."

To Save 15,000,000 Tons of Coal.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Saving of 15,000,000 tons of coal will be required this year of private residences, apartment houses, churches, schools and commercial buildings other than factories. To help effect this saving, the Fuel Administration announced today that it would put into operation a plan similar to that in Philadelphia, whereby no order for coal by a domestic consumer will be completely filled until approved by the local Fuel Administration.

CRISIS REPORTED IN AUSTRIA, WITH PEOPLE DEMANDING PEACE

Rumors in London Include One From Amsterdam Telling of Rioting in Vienna.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 15.—Reports of a serious crisis in Austria have come from various outside sources.

A news message from the semi-official Fabra agency of Madrid says private information from reliable sources states that the population is demanding peace at any price.

Amsterdam messages say a rumor was circulated on the Bourse yesterday that rioting had begun in Vienna.

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—On the Amsterdam Bourse the journey of Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister to Berlin, is connected with tension in Austro-German affairs.

The Berlin Tageblatt prints the following dispatch from its Vienna correspondent:

"The death sentence has been passed on the Government and it remains to be seen what course the Government will take if the crown declines to accept coming resignations. This is a stage of crisis and the Austria of 1867 has gone. Premier von Seydler declines to recognize this and the danger of the situation. Berlin must realize that the old signatory of alliance no longer exists and no power on earth, not even Germany's protection, can revive it."

A CANADIAN PORT, June 15.—A steamer has arrived here with the passengers and crew of the Canadian Pacific steamer Ravalli, which was destroyed by fire near here today. Capt. Thomas Nystrom of the Ravalli was almost suffocated while fighting the flames, passengers said. ST. LOUIS MADE CENTER IN WAR DISTRIBUTION WORK

Government Designates City as an Industrial Division With President of Commerce Chamber as Director

CITY ALSO TO BE A PURCHASING UNIT

Industrial Division Embraces Most of Missouri, Including Joplin District, Arkansas and Part of Illinois.

Two important announcements, bearing on St. Louis' share in the production and distribution of war materials, were made yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce.

One was the creation of the St. Louis Industrial Division, with Jackson Johnson, president of the chamber, as its director. The other was the selection of St. Louis as one of the two or three purchasing centers for the Railroad Administration.

The St. Louis Industrial Division is constituted under the Government regional or zone plan of organization. The regional organization is being worked out by the division of resources and conversions of the War Industries Board. The plan is to place war business through the different districts in a systematic manner, eliminating the confusions of competition.

Embraces Most of Missouri.

The St. Louis division embraces most of Missouri, including the Joplin mining district; all Arkansas and the southern half of Illinois, including Springfield and Decatur.

The United States is to be divided into 20 regional districts, and each region will have sub-regional organizations. Those of the St. Louis district will have their headquarters in Springfield, Mo.; Little Rock, Fort Smith, Pine Bluff and Helena, Ark., and in some Illinois center.

Each regional district will be an independent unit in production of war materials. At the headquarters of this district complete data will be compiled regarding industrial plants, transportation facilities, raw materials, fuel and labor. These facts will be taken into account in the allotment of war orders from headquarters in Washington.

President Johnson of the Chamber of Commerce, regional director, is in Washington with the waterways delegation, and will confer with Charles A. Otis, chief of the War Industries Board, on the handling of the regional industrial organization work.

Range of Purchasing Centers.

Johnson yesterday sent a telegram to the chamber announcing the selection of St. Louis as a purchasing center for the railroad administration. The range of the purchasing centers, it was announced, will be much larger than that of the operating divisions, and while there are several regional directors of railroad operation, there will be not more than three regional purchasing agents. The other headquarters will be Washington, for the eastern lines, and Chicago for the northern and northwestern lines.

According to the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce this means a great increase in business for St. Louis, as this city is recognized as a railroad supply point. Last year's railroad supply business amounted to $7,200,000. This indicated an increase of fully 40 per cent over 1915.

Before the delegation now in Washington left this city a thorough analysis of the railroad purchasing situation was prepared by the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce and upon reaching Washington, Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American Bank, headed a conference with John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the Currency, and chief in charge of purchases for the railroad administration. As the direct outcome of this conference the announcement was made that St. Louis was selected as a purchasing center.

C. of C. Campaigns Effective.

St. Louis, it was pointed out, has in the last month obtained recognition in various ways following extended campaigns in each case by the Chamber of Commerce. The resulting headquarters located here have been:

U. S. Shipping Board, Department of Transportation, J. P. Higgins, Railway Exchange Building.

Emergency Fleet, Materials and Production, Mr. Wadleigh in charge, Wright Building.

Regional Industrial Commission of the War Industries Board, Jackson Johnson, director.

Regional Director of Railroads, B. F. Bush.

Headquarters Southern Zone, Quartermaster's Department.

Production Section, Ordnance Department, Lieut. McLaughlin, Star Building.

Regional Purchasing Section, Railroad Administration.

DISPUTE ARISES IN DIVISION OF ESTATE OF MRS. CELLA

Attorney for One Administrator Says Half Should Be Held 21 Years, and Then Go to School Fund.

SHARE OF HEIRS ON FATHER'S SIDE

Partial Inventory Filed at Clayton Lists Personal Property Valued at $18,851.

A difference of opinion has arisen between Joseph C. McAtee, attorney for Fred E. Mueller, and A. E. L. Gardner, attorney for William Mongan, co-administrators of the estate of Mrs. Agnes Cella, concerning the disposition of her estate and her share of the estate of her husband, Louis Cella, which will have to be settled by the courts.

McAtee holds that one-half of Mrs. Cella's estate will have to be held 21 years if none of Mrs. Cella's heirs on her father's side appear, and will then go to the school fund. Gardner holds that if none of these heirs appear it will be presumed that they are all dead, and the entire estate can be divided among Mrs. Cella's heirs on her mother's side.

Mrs. Cella is known to have had nine uncles and aunts, the Mongans, on her mother's side. It is not known whether she had any uncles and aunts on her father's side. Unless some of these appear and unless McAtee's opinion of the law is correct, the estate will be divided into nine parts and one part will go to each of the living uncles and aunts on the mother's side and one-ninth to each group of children of deceased uncles and aunts.

Mrs. Cella's parents are said to have been married in Cleveland. Her father, a railroad man, named Johnson, is said to have been killed in an accident. Her mother went back to Ireland and Mrs. Cella was born there.

A partial inventory of the estate of Mrs. Cella, filed in Probate Court yesterday, lists a $10,000 life insurance policy and goods and chattels of the Cella home—Wildwood—which brought the total to $18,851.45.

The inventory also lists "personal property bequeathed to Agnes J. Cella as a specific bequest by her husband, which is now under the control and in the hands of his administrators, Charles J. Cella and Joseph E. Martin."

Real estate listed is one-half of Louis Cella's one-sixth share in property at Sixth and Morgan streets and 32 acres surrounding Wildwood. The inventory was filed by Fred E. Mueller and William Mongan, administrators.

Policeman Accompanies Her to Waiting Husband and Both Are Arrested.

A well-dressed young woman accompanied by a 2-year-old child, bought a pair of stockings for 49 cents at the Famous & Barr store yesterday afternoon and gave in payment a bill which the cashier found had been raised from $1 to $5.

They gave their names as James and Mary Christy, and said their home was in Chicago, but in the man's pockets were found checks which showed that they were moving their trunks from 4232 McPherson avenue.

Christy said he had been working for the Sherman Service Co., Boatmen's Bank Building. He had 14 $1 bills. He said he gave his wife what he supposed were two $1 bills. Christy is 31 and his wife 25.

MINING ENGINEER IS CHARGED WITH DISLOYAL TALK

San Francisco Man Alleged to Have Assailed American War Motives While He Was at Hospital.

INFIRMARY INMATES MADE COMPLAINT

Department of Justice Agent Says E. W. Bracht Said Wilson Was Hypocritical in His Attitude.

A Federal warrant charging disloyalty was issued yesterday aaginst E. W. Bracht, a mining engineer of San Francisco, who was arrested at the Railroad Y. M. C. A. last Monday and held for the Federal authorities.

It is charged that Bracht, when a patient at the Barnes Haspital, said:

"I do not believe the United States went into this war from altruistic motives. The cry about avenging the Lusitania and about Belgium was all to engineer the war spirit.

"I appreciate that this country is at war, and war is hell, but I know the people of Germany and I know them to be a different people from the kind the newspapers and the Government would make us believe. The cry 'he kept us out of war' was good enough to elect the President, but the damned old hypocrite, as soon as he had what he wanted, responded to the pressure of the money kings and stepped in to protect their privileges."

The statements are alleged to have been made to W. C. Saussele, an agent of the Department of Justice. Other patients reported that they believed Bracht was disloyal, and Saussele went to interview him, without disclosing his own identity.

Dispatches from San Francisco stated that Bracht was well known in Masonic circles there, and departed about three months ago, saying he was going to Washington. He arrived here about two weeks ago, became ill, and went to the hospital.

T. P. A. BACKS PLAN TO IMPROVE WATERWAYS

Resolutions Also Condemn Practice of Operators Who Fail to Clean Coal Properly.

Resolutions were adopted at the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Travelers Protective Association, which ended at the American Hotel Friday after a three-day session, commending the Government plans to improve waterways, to aid coal distribution and condemning the practice of operators who fail properly to clean coal before shipment.

The Resolution Committee, in reporting the resolution recommended that unless these conditions are complied with the Government will take over the coal industry and operate it.

The attention of the convention was called to the coal situation by F. C. Reese of Pottsville, Pa., a member of the Pennsylvania Coal Consumers' League, who investigated anthracite mining conditions. Thirty to 40 per cent of the coal shipped from the mines was noncombustible trash and rubbish, he said. The presence of this foreign material in the coal is accounted for by the practice of operators in shoveling and not forking coal into the cars. Other precautions for cleaning coal before shipment also were lacking, Reese said.

As a result of complaints from all parts of the country the Fuel Administration has ordered operators to eliminate all rock, slate, bone, sulphur, fire clay, shale or other impurities that would have made coal unmerchantable prior to Jan. 1, 1916. Those failing to do this will be required to reduce their prices 50 cents per ton below the Government price.

The condition of coal shipped from the bituminous fields, it is claimed, is not as bad as that from the anthracite fields, but there have been complaints to the Government about the bituminous coal also and agents of the Fuel Administration are said to be investigating the output of the Illinois fields.

The association, after electing Alexander Lawrence Jr. of Philadelphia as president, selected New Orleans as the next convention city. St. Louisans elected national directors of the organization were J. E. McKeown, J. M. Bull, J. H. Robinson and E. P. Lampkin.

A. A. PARG IS 9TH ST. LOUIS SOLDIER KILLED IN FRANCE

He Was 20 Years Old, Enlisted in the Regular Army and Was With Pershing in Mexico.

CASUALTY LIST SAYS HE DIED ON MAY 16

Names of Seriously Wounded Include Corporal John G. Dierkes and Bertie G. Randall, Also of St. Louis.

Alois A. Parg, 20 years old, of 1413 South Eighth street, was the ninth St. Louisan reported killed in the American Army in France. His death from wounds, May 15, appeared in yesterday's casualty list.

In the same list were the names of two soldiers seriously wounded who gave St. Louis as their home. They were Corporal John G. Dierkes of 2403 Menard street and Bertie Randall, whose address was given as 1017 North Seventeenth street. The Seventeenth street house is vacant, and the neighbors do not know Randall.

Parg was the son of Alois Parg, a foundry worker. The father is a native of Germany. Hie wife died two years ago, and the death of his son leaves him alone. The son enlisted in the regular army in May, 1916, served under Pershing in Mexico and went to France with one of the first detachments of regular troops.

Corporal Dierkes, who also served under Pershing in Mexico, is the son of Theodore and Anna Dierkes. He was a mattress maker, employe of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney. His mother recently received a letter from him, in which he said:

"I am writing you this letter on Mother's Day. We are all doing fine and are well taken care of. Our food comes to us just as if we were in the United States, and I have never felt better in my life. I tell you, mother, it's great to be among such a fine bunch of men as we have here.

"I wish you could see how we live over here. We are billeted in a barn where there's plenty of straw, and believe me, we know how to make a good bed of it.

"Old Kaiser Bill's going to 'get his' pretty soon, and the Americans will turn the trick. Now don't worry; everything is all right and we're all feeling great."

CRISIS THREATENS IN BULGARIA

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—Attacks on the Bulgarian Premier, Vassil Radoslavoff, in consequence of the peace negotiations at Bucharest, threaten to lead to a crisis, according to the Koelnische Zeitung, which says that the discontent is not confined to the political opponents of Radoslavoff. It is feared in Government circles that Bulgaria is missing an opportunity to annex the whole of Dobrudja and Bulgarian districts in Macedonia which were given to Greece in 1913. Attacks are also being made on the quadruple alliance, which is credited with an intention of supporting enemy Greece rather than friendly Bulgaria and rewarding Rumania rather than Bulgaria.

The newspaper adds that it was owing to these criticisms that Radoslavoff published the formal agreement with the Central Powers by which the latter consented, in the event of a Greek attack, that Bulgaria should annex part of Greek Macedonia.

FOLK OPENS RACE WITH PLEA FOR RIVER CARRIERS

In First Speech in Senate Primary Campaign Made at St. Joseph He Urges Government Financing.

PLEDGES SUPPORT TO THE PRESIDENT

Declares St. Louis Gateway Should Be Center of Inland Waterway Transportation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 15.—Former Gov. Joseph W. Folk, in opening his campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator here tonight, advocated the financing of Mississippi and Missouri river transportation by the United States Government and pledged himself to work for the fullest use of waterways and for readjustment of railroad rates, which, he said, discriminate against St. Louis, Kansas City and the State as a whole.

In the first part of his speech, which was of a patriotic nature, Folk quoted from President Wilson's war speeches and declared that the President should be upheld by all Americans. He declared that the war will not end until it has been won by America and the allies, and that the world must be, in future, "either all Prussian or all free, including Prussia."

In the latter part of the speech Folk said that when he returned to St. Louis to conduct the Chamber of Commerce fight against the bridge arbitrary he did not return with the idea of running for the Senate. Senator Stone's death, he said, created an unexpected situation, and the demand for Folk's candidacy came from every part of the State. This demand was based, Folk said, on his experience as solicitor for the Department of State and Counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission and his knowledge of affairs in Washington.

Pledges Full Support to President.

Folk said the law authorized the Governor to make "a mere temporary appointment" to the senatorial vacancy, until the people could name a Senator.

"We are fighting to give the people of all the world self-government," he said, "and this is not the time to ask the Democrats of Missouri to give up their self-government. We are waging a war to democratize the world; this is no time to establish political autocracy in Missouri. We are going to overthrow the German Kaiser, and the people of Missouri are in no mood to set up a political Kaiser here.

"If nominated and elected, my policy in the Senate will be 100 per cent Americanism. I shall wholeheartedly support the President and uphold his policies in the vigorous and victorious conduct of the war. To aid in winning the war speedily and worthily my every effort will be constantly directed. At such a time as this the wish of the President is the command of my country.

"I want the co-operation and support of all those who believe President Wilson should be upheld, the war waged unceasingly until brought to a victorious end, and that I can help in bringing about this result, as well as in solving transportation questions, while the war is going on and after it is over."

Refers to Water Transportation.

In his discussion of rail and water transportation, Folk said:

"St. Louis, Kansas City and Missouri are discriminated against in the present adjustment of rates. No city, or state, can prosper as it should prosper until such a disadvantage is overcome. Through rate discriminations the St. Louis gateway has been partially closed and Missouri, which is midway between the North, South, East and West, and by reason of its location should have an advantage in rates possessed by no other state, is made to suffer because those in control of transportation agencies have made the Chicago gateway the favorite, to the prejudice of the St. Louis gateway. During the next two years there will be a readjustment of all these rates, and there should be a weeding out of any inequalities that exist.

"The railroads have made a practice of suppressing water competition by making rates so low that water carriers could not compete. Then, when the water carriers were forced out of business, the railroads would raise the rates again, thus recouping what was lost. The individually owned, or weakly financed, water carrier could not compete with the great aggregations of capital composing railroad corporations, and so it came about that in the development of the railroads our inland waterways were virtually eliminated as transportation agencies.

Urges Financing by Government.

"Under Government control and operation the policy should be to encourage water transportation, not to destroy it. In order to effectively carry on the war it is necessary to move troops, war supplies and foodstuffs. The railroads now are congested, and it is essential to use the waterways in order to transport the things that should be moved to insure success in the war. The railroads and the waterways, both agencies of transportation, should be co-ordinated under Government control. Surely, if the Government finances the railroads, which it does not own, it should finance the waterways, which it does own.

"The water carriers, which could not compete with the heavily financed rail carriers, of course cannot compete with Government-financed rail carriers. So in order to use the waterways, it is necessary for the Government to exercise the power conferred by the recent railroad act in financing the water carriers. When this is done, the Mississippi River and the Missouri River will assume an importance in transportation such as they never had before, even in their palmiest days.

"If there were no Missouri River, and no Mississippi River, the project of building canals would be seriously considered, but we have great waterways ready for use, and it is criminal not to use them, both during the war, and thus shorten the war, and after the war, in the morning of a new and greater prosperity."

Signal Corps Wants Men.

CHICAGO, June 15.—A rush call for men to join the Signal Corps was sent out from Central Department headquarters here today. The men wanted are radio and telegraph operators, telephone construction men, switchboard construction men, linemen, cable splicers and men with a practical knowledge of electricity.

WINNING WAR THE ONLY ISSUE, WILFLEY SAYS

Senator, Opening Campaign at Mexico, Declares Hun Is at Our Gates and Wilson Must Be Supported.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO STONE AND REED

Railroad Matters Not an Issue Now, He Asserts, Because Railroad Action Is Government Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo., June 15.—United States Senator Xenophon P. Wilfley, in opening his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination here today, declared that he had no issue to present and no cause to champion, except support of President Wilson in winning the war. "The Hun is at our gates," he declared.

"In the past," Senator Wilfley said, "the regulation of railroads and railroad rates has been a live issue, but today the railroads of the country are in the hands of the United States Government. It is futile today for men or parties to attempt to make an issue of railroad control, when that control is so complete and sweeping that railroad action is Government action.

"He who now seeks to raise up old issues or to form new issues on old subjects shows that he is not alive to this emergency. The Hun is at our gates, and I have no issues to present or cause to champion save only that all things be directed to the one great purpose of winning the war.

President Has Support of All.

"President Wilson, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, has the support of every loyal American, and in him is reposed the confidence of the greatest number of free people that any individual has ever possessed. So long as I have in him the degree of confidence which I now hold, and which all the nation gives him, I am going to support him and the policies he outlines for the winning of the war. Congress has conferred great powers upon the President and he is exercising those powers with great foresight and wisdom.

"In granting the President this extraordinary authority, fear has been expressed that we would transcend the bounds of the Constitution of the United States. No man respects the Constitution of the United States more than I do. No man has greater confidence in it than I. I have no fear of the Constitution losing its force and efficacy by reason of legislation conferring extraordinary authority upon the President in time of war. The only sure way to preserve our Constitution to posterity is to win the war."

Extent of Government Control.

In speaking of the extent of Government control of national resources, he said:

"The War Industries Board, by Government edict, reduced the price of steel below the then prevailing price, developed under unregulated comptition, to an extent that reduced the income of the great companies manufacturing this essential war material by $3,000,000,000 per annum. The action of the Government was accepted without complaint or murmur.

"The great directing heads of the greatest corporations in the country have abandoned their private interests at the call of the Government and are giving their services to the conduct of the common business of all.

"If there be those who doubt that unselfish patriotism has moved these great concerns to submit so readily to Government direction, I care not to take issue with them, and I need not, for in selfish interest alone may be found ample reason for the course they are pursuing. The far-seeing men of large affairs realize that all gain is loss unless we win the war, and that all interests must be subordinated to that cause. Under such circumstances, how futile it would be for us to waste our time in consideration of issues that have passed away."

Tribute to Stone and Reed.

The Senator alluded, in opening his speech, to the fact that he is a native Missourian, born in this (Audrain) county, educated in Missouri, and owing no allegiance to any other state either because of birth or residence. Of his predecessor, the late Senator Stone, and his colleague, Senator Reed, he said:

"Senator Stone was loyal to his friends, devoted to his party, and combined with distinguished ability such outstanding courage as to give him a position of commanding leadership in the councils of his party and in the Senate of the United States. My colleague, Senator James A. Reed, is recognized today as one of the ablest men on the floor of the United States Senate."

He called the roll of native Missourians who are now prominent in national war service, naming Gen. Pershing, Rear Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, in charge of the personnel of the navy, and Major-General Enoch H. Crowder, Provost Marshal-General, in charge of the execution of the draft.

Senator Wilfley's address was made to several thousand friends from this and adjoining counties on the courthouse lawn. Judge T. S. Gantt introduced the speaker. Resolutions adopted at the meeting say:

"We urge the support of Senator Wilfley, * * * because from his childhood up, he has lived such a life that any county would be glad to claim him as her own * * * We are proud of the record he has already made in the United States Senate and of his hearty support of President Wilson."

Do Your Teeth Hurt?

Great as has been the development and recognition of dental science, it remained for the United States Government itself to place scientific care of the teeth on a definite basis of national necessity.

Our Government is spending millions to make sure that every fighter shall have sound, healthy teeth.

Uncle Sam knows from demonstration by the army dental corps that digestion suffers from diseased or missing teeth. Many other disorders are traced to bad teeth.

You owe it to yourself, to those around you, to future generations, to help eliminate the still widespread evil of defective teeth.

NOW IS THE TIME

To have your teeth put in a good, healthy condition. Now is the time to save money and suffering. Dental manufacturers and dealers assert that all kinds of materials and equipment will soon be sharply advanced in price or off the market entirely.

My advice to you is to have your needed work done now, even if it is not convenient, for the saving to you will be very material. The following low prices for my high grade guaranteed dentistry are good until JULY 1ST. After that date 25% increase on all work:

UNIVERSITY CLUB ACHIEVES FINISH IN ARCHITECTURE

Soaring Cost of Materials Fails to Obviate Luxurious Appointments and Complete Italian Renaissance Design.

13-STORY BUILDING COST IS $550,000

Four Upper Floors House College Men With Thirteenth Given to Dining-Room of Splendid Proportions.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who inspected the new quarters of the University Club on the upper four floors of the club's 13-story building at Grand and Washington avenues, found that attractiveness, comfort and convenience have been obtained to an admirable degree. This has been accomplished despite the fact that soaring prices for material since the war began have compelled many economies. The portion of the building devoted to the club is so nearly completed that the formal opening reception for members has been set for Tuesday night. The total cost of the building is estimated at $550,000.

The show-place of the club is the great main dining room on the thirteenth floor, which extends across the entire south end of the structure. Its ceiling is 20 feet high, and its other dimensions are 52 and 37 feet. Doors and glass windows all along the east and south sides give an out-door effect, increased by a stone balcony rail which runs outside. The windows and doors are to be decorated with colored draperies.

The general color scheme, that of cream-colored walls and ceiling, is carried out here. Set in the walls are Italian pilasters; above them runs a paneled and decorated frieze, with an elaborate cornice. Ornate silver candelabra will provide light. From the windows a fine panorama of the city is visible. It is hard to imagine a more airy, cheerful apartment, and here will center many of the club's activities—its dinners, its dances and its speech making.

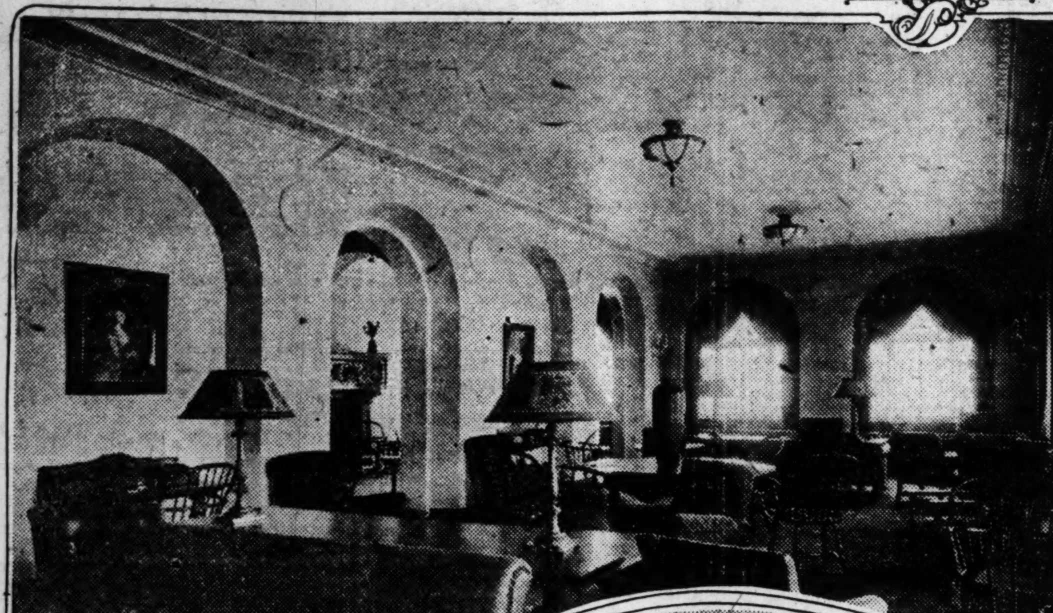
Dining Room for Women.

Across the lobby from the dining room, to the left of the elevator, is a dainty reception room for ladies, with slender Italian chairs upholstered in rose, delicate electric fixtures and softly cushioned settees. Leading off from it is a private dining room exclusively for women.

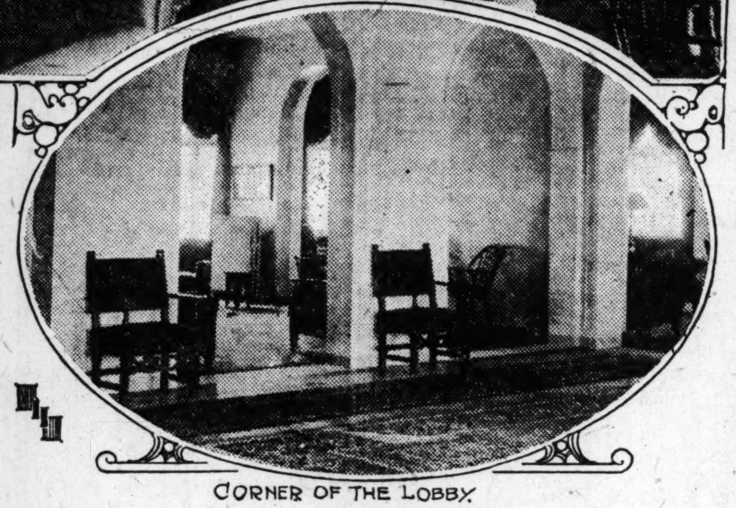
In the northeast corner of this floor is a gymnasium, equipped with two squash courts, showers and lockers. Above is a gallery from which visitors may watch the games and sports. On the mezzanine floor level with the gallery are storerooms and a tailor shop.

One of the entrances to the building, that on the Washington avenue side, will be used only by club members and guests, and one elevator is set aside exclusively for their use. Two passenger elevators reached by the Grand avenue entrance will serve the remainder of the building, which has been reconstructed for physicians' and dentists' offices. Automobiles will be driven through a bronze-lighted court to another entrance at the west side of the building, which is convenient to an elevator especially adapted for carrying patients on stretchers.

Two Interior Views of New University Club



LOUNGE ROOM OF NEW UNIVERSITY CLUB.



CORNER OF THE LOBBY.

Ascending the club elevator to the tenth floor, one reaches the bedroom quarters. Here are 24 rooms, including four two-room suites, one in each corner of the building. Each room is equipped with a marble shower bath and a commodious closet. Instead of transoms, the doors are fitted with hinge panels for ventilation, and outer doors of slats are to be added.

The eleventh is the main club floor, and through the elevator portals of Caen stone one enters a spacious lobby and assembly room, consistent in style and decoration with the Italian renaissance architecture which characterizes the entire building. The cream colored walls are set off with a delicately modeled and tinted cornice, the colors of which, blue, red and gold, are reflected in the upholstering and stains of the furniture, made by the famous Boston designer, Francis Bacon. There are four bronze chandeliers. In a prominent place is a marble bust of the late Thomas Allen, builder of the Allen mansion, which formerly provided quarters for the University Club on the site of the new building.

Allen Fireplace Preserved.

Italian renaissance arches lead from the lobby to adjoining apartments. To the south, occupying the entire width of the building, is a lounge room, with a great fireplace and mantel of marble, decorated with carved winged lions. In the center of the room is a large octagonal table and to either side of it are long rectangular tables, with reading lamps, and big leather settees backed against them. Three silver chandeliers depend from the ceiling, and in each corner is a silver candlestick.

Here again is found the decorative cornice and the snowy expanse of the walls is relieved by inset medalions. Adjoining the lounge room to the north is the magazine room, the dominating feature of which is a fireplace and mantel of green marble and bronze, which was preserved from the Allen residence. There is a cornice faintly tinted with blue, and the wall surface to the north is varied by a recess arch.

Near at hand are the manager's office, a visitor's room where callers may sit while waiting for members to be summoned, telephone booths and switchboard and a cigar stand. Farther to the north is the breakfast room, served from the kitchens on the floor above. The north end of the floor is occupied by a taproom and a billiard hall of unique and striking appearance.

The walls and ceilings in both rooms are of rough concrete, splashed on with a brush and left to harden. The taproom is in the style of an old Italian inn, with concrete beams in the ceiling, vaulted arches over the service bar and studded oak doors. The concrete of the walls and ceiling is left in its original color of woollly gray, the floor is of black and gray tiles and the lighting fixtures are rusty iron and gold. There will be three tables in the billiard room, each with its low-hanging battery of lights and rusty iron reflectors.

On the twelfth floor are the kitchens, in which all the cooking will be done on electric ranges. There is an array of great ice boxes, tables and storerooms. On the same floor are two card rooms and a barber shop. At the south end is the club library, with cozy furniture, a marble fireplace and rows of bookcases in recesses along the entire north wall. The lighting fixtures are of gold, and the cornice is tinted with blue and brown.

The decorating scheme throughout, designed by L. J. Clawson Primm, illustrates the old Greek idea of variety in unity. The walls and ceilings are almost everywhere of a rich cream color, but variations are achieved in the tinting of the cornices, which are all alike, however, in the delicacy of the shades. Simplicity and good taste are everywhere the keynotes.

T. C. Young Architect.

A tone of richer colors will be given by the carpets, upholstery and window draperies, all of which, it is expected, will be in place by the end of this week.

Construction began on the building about a year and a half ago. The architect is T. C. Young, the surviving partner of the firm of Eames & Young. Some assistance in an associate capacity was afforded by Guy Mariner, a New York architect.

The ground floor, on the Grand avenue side, is divided into six shops. The second floor also may be rented for shops. The remaining floors, progress on which has been delayed by the war, are being fitted up into offices according to the specifications of physicians and dentists who will occupy them. Many of these men have entered the military service, and have either canceled their contracts or have been compelled to put off supplying the plans for their offices.

One interesting feature of the building's construction was planned to obviate the usual optical illusion experienced when one looks up to the top of a skyscraper from the street. In most buildings the top seems to bulge out and overhang the spectator. This is avoided in the University Club Building by the device of making the walls taper inward as they arise, there being a slant of about four inches from top to bottom.

The building easily dominates the Grand avenue district, because of its height and its snowy color. It is built of gleaming Bedford limestone and white brick. The style is that of a palace of the Italian Renaissance ingsperiod, adapted to modern high buildings. In order to offset the effect of height, horizontal lines are accentuated, and devices such as a row of inset medalions are adopted. The club floors at the top are distinguishable by calcony rails and columns. Surmounting all is a conspicuous cornice, in which is adopted the daring color scheme of green combined with a deep purple, which relieves the whiteness of the walls.

Especial attention was given to the rear or west face of the building, which is visible for a distance along Washington boulevard. For the sake of this view, the cornice was extended all around the building, and the club floors are decorated on the outside with pilasters. The fire escape, painted the same color as the bricks, melts into them and almost disappears when the building is viewed from several blocks away. The edifice is of fireproof construction throughout.

PEEL OFF ANY CALLUS

Here's Magic! Instant Relief Without Any Pain

"Hard skin" or callus spots on the sides or the bottom of the feet peel right off without pain or soreness, after you apply a little Freezone, says a Cincinnati authority. This ether drug loosens the dead callused skin so it peels off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of Freezone costs but a few cents at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath is pink and healthy, and not sore, tender or even irritated.

PETITION FILED TO PREVENT TRIAL OF INSURANCE SUIT

Right of Non-Resident to Sue in Missouri Involved in Action by Connecticut Company.

Notice was served on Circuit Judge Klene yesterday of the filing of a petition in the Supreme Court to prohibit him from trying the suit of Mrs. Miriam H. Phillips, against the Travelers Insurance Co., a Connecticut corporation, for a $7500 accident insurance carried by her husband, Milton G. Phillips. The right of a non-resident of Missouri to maintain a suit in the courts here against a defendant which does business here, but whose headquarters is in another State, is involved in the prohibition proceedings, the plaintiff in which is the Travelers Co.

The insurance company contends that suit should be brought in the jurisdiction either where the cause of action arose, which in the Phillips case, was Wisconsin; where the plaintiff lives or where the headquarters of the defendant is located. Phillips died in Illinois, August 2, 1916, several years after he obtained the accident policy in Wisconsin, where he formerly lived. His widow lives in Ohio.

Although the same question was once decided by the Supreme Court adversely to the company's contention, it is alleged that the personnel of that tribunal has since changed. Of the seven judges who now comprise the bench six were members at the time of the first test of the matter. Three of the present judges decided that a non-resident could maintain suit here and three took a contrary view. The seventh, Judge Fred Williams of Joplin, has not yet had opportunity to express his view, the petition recites.

ently clogged with cases of bona the insurance company, are sufficiently clogged with cases ob bona fide resident-litigants without taking care of unnecesary lawsuits of persons living in other jurisdictions. It is also pointed out that the St. Louis Court of Appeals to which the Phillips case would go on appeal, is three years behind in its work.

The plaintiff's brief says "this State is rapidly becoming the dumping ground of non-resident claims against insurance companies." The reason for this, attorneys say, is due to leniency shown plaintiffs in such cases by the courts here and also a liberal statute affecting insurance policies especially in accident cases.

One objection cited by counsel for the Travelers Co. to trying the cases here is that it will be necessary to obtain testimony of witnesses living in other jurisdictions where the suit might legally be filed. Such non-resident witnesses cannot be compelled to attend court or give their depositions and this feature, it is contended, would work a hardship on the company.

WILL DECIPHER CABLES

There is such a demand for the translation of cables from the soldier boys in Europe, that James A. Troy, secretary of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, has announced that his department will decipher the code messages received by relatives of boys in France without charges.

During the last week 50 or 60 cable messages were translated for mothers, sisters and other relatives of men "over there." Those receiving such cable messages who wish them deciphered, may call at the offices of the Chamber, 510 Locust street.

Mitchell Sixes

$1350 and $1625

This Six at $1350
Is Too Great a Value to Last

It is the greatest value in the Light Six field today. The output is restricted, as with all cars this year. Costs are still advancing, so prices may go higher. We urge all interested people to see this new car now.

An Impressive Car

This new Mitchell Light Six has 120-inch wheelbase and a 40-horsepower motor.

It is long and low and roomy. The lines are exquisite. The body is built, finished and upholstered with unusual luxury in the new Mitchell body plant. It is the handsomest Six of the season.

The motor is a high-speed Six, very economical. And Mitchell Sixes have a world-wide fame.

In the past year the over-strength standards have been vastly increased in this car. Experts in endurance have studied every part.

The equipment includes many unusual features. And this is the only Light Six with shock-absorbing springs.

We Get But a Few

Our allotment on this car is small. War-time conditions force a restricted production. Materials are hard to get, and prices are still rising.

The demand this year for a car like this is bound to exceed the supply—and probably twice over.

A man who expects to buy any Six this year should make a decision early. Until the war ends, there is no probability of a value like this again.

Mitchell D-40 has a 120-inch wheelbase and a 40-horsepower motor. The Touring Car price is $1350 at factory.

Mitchell C-42 has a 127-inch wheelbase and a 48-horsepower motor. The Touring Car price is $1625 at factory. There are 16 new-style bodies.

ENGLISH STARS TO GIVE LITTLE SEEN CLASSICS

Drama of Ibsen, Maeterlinck and Moliere on Kearns' Players' Bill.

On account of a gap of three days in their itinerary of outdoor drama, the Elsie Herndon Kearns Players are enabled to announce a series of five classic plays, to be given here tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. The engagement will be novel in that the place of performance will be the main first-floor dining room of the Hotel Statler, and important because the dramas selected are mostly unfamiliar here.

On Monday evening, at 8:15 o'clock, will be given Shakspeare's "The Tempest." On Tuesday afternoon, at 2:15 o'clock, will be presented Moliere's comedy, "The Blue Stockings." Tuesday night's offering will be Ibsen's "The Master Builder." On Wednesday afternoon Shakspeare's "As You Like It" will be presented, and on Wednesday night Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande." The entire repertory will be in English.

The troupe of 20 players is headed by Miss Elsie Herndon Kearns, leading woman with the original Ben Greet company. Since Greet's departure for England she has, at his request, carried on the company under her own name. The leading man and director of the troupe is George Carlton Somnes, who was also a Ben Greet player, and who has supported such actors as William Faversham, John Drew, Constance Collier and John Barrymore. Miss Agnes Scott was formerly leading woman with Robert Mantell in Shakspearean repertory, and P. J. Kelly was a member of the Sothern and Marlowe company.

Moliere's "Les Femmes Savantes," a title translated as "The Bluestockings," is a powerful satire in five acts against pedantry and the affectations of shallow erudition. Armande and Henriette are the daughters of Chrysale, the hen-pecked husband of Philaminte, a would-be philosopher in petticoats. Armande pretends to hold marriage in abhorrence, but is prompt enough in attempting to recapture her rejected lover, Clitandre, when he turns to Henriette for consolation. Philaminte's candidate for Henriette's hand is Trissotin, a pinchbeck poet and fortune-hunter. The story ends with the discomfiture of the pedants, after many scenes in the best style of Moliere's wit—such as the passages between Chrysale and his formidable spouse, the battle between Trissotin and a rival poet, Vadius; and the depiction of the hallucinations of Belise, an elderly bluestocking, who fancies all men adore her.

Ibsen's "Bygmester Solness," rendered in English as "The Masterbuilder," is of especial value since the war has revealed the hideousness of the "furor Teutonicus." The chief character, Halvard Solness has made his way to the top through baseness and cruelty, but does not possess the "robust conscience," as he terms it, which would enable him to enjoy the fruits of his "frightfulness" without remorse. To him comes Hilda Wangel, a strange young woman, who undertakes to inspire him with the required "robustness of conscience." To signalize his triumph over his better self—he would say weaker—Hilda tempts him to the top of a tower and hang a wreath on the weathercock. It is perhaps of good omen that he becomes dizzy, falls and is destroyed. This play has aroused much discussion because it uses hypnotism and thought transference as dramatic agencies.

"Pelleas et Melisande," a play in five acts by the famous Belgian poet and mystic, is an adaptation of the ancient tragedy of Paolo and Francesca. It is better known in this country as an opera under the same title, with music by Claude Debussy, which echoes the elusiveness and mystery of the text. It is of interest to note that Maeterlinck always resented Debussy's use of his play, contending that the words were sufficient without music.

A stage will be erected at one end of the Statler dining room, and simple settings of draperies, palms and screens will be supplied. No service of food or drinks will be permitted during the performances.

Japanese Prima Donna and Hawaiian Act at Columbia.

A Hawaiian act, "A Night in the Tropics," will lead this week's bill at the Columbia. Angel and Fuller contribute a playlet, "A Real Soldier." The two Hills and the Tivoli sisters form a quartet of mirth-makers. At the Grand the chief attraction will be Sherman, Van and Hyman, a singing trio, in "melodious nonsense."

Haruko Onuki, a Japanese prima donna, singing popular songs, will be heard at the Forest Park Highlands theater. Among other acts, Keno and Wagner will present "Toys from Babeland," in which the characters are a cat, a wooden soldier and a doll.

MIKADO OPENS SEASON OF SUMMER OPERA

Given at Park Theater Tonight; Light Opera Each Week by Stock Company.

Th criminal cried, as he dropped him down,
In a state of high alarm;
With a frightful, frantic, fearful frown.
I bared my big right arm.
I seized him by his little pigtail,
And on his knees fell he;
As he squirmed and struggled and gurgled and gurgled,
I drew my snickersnee.
O n'er shall I forget the cry,
Or the shriek that shriek-ed
he,
As I gnashed my teeth, when
from its sheath,
I drew my snickersnee.
—From "The Mikado."

Acquaintance will be renewed with this jingle by W. S. Gilbert, and many others as familiar, and with the tuneful music to which Sir Arthur Sullivan set them, at the performance of "The Mikado" tonight which opens the summer season at the Park Theater, Delmar and Hamilton avenues.

The loves of Nanki-Poo and Yum-Yum, the troubles of Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, the pompousness of Pooh-Bah and Pish-Tush, and the machinations of Katisha will be depicted by a stock company recruited in New York.

Among those in the troupe are John E. Young, Ivy Scott, Arthur Aldridge, Yra Jeanne, James Stevens, A. L. Pellaton, Pacie Ripple and Mildred Rogers. A chorus of 50 and an adequate orchestra are promised. The company has been in rehearsal here for the last week. William Fitzgerald is stage manager and Frank Manderville is musical director.

The company plans to give one light opera each week, with performances every evening and matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

FLAG RAISING AT SUNSET HILL COUNTRY CLUB RED CROSS DAY

Feature of Celebration Will Be Exhibition of Paintings of Local Artists for Mercy Fund Sales.

On Red Cross day at Sunset Hill Country Club, June 29, Judge William Dee Becker will present the club with a huge American flag, which will be raised on a 110-foot flagstaff. Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner has been asked to unfurl this flag at the opening of the fete with proper military escort.

A large dinner dance will be given in the evening. A special dining pavilion has been arranged.

One of the features will be the "Art Gallery" of the paintings of local artists. A number of the pictures in this gallery will be scenes of Sunset Hill Country Club, and will be entered in competition for a Chevrolet runabout, donated by Russell Gardner. All pictures entered in this contest must be submitted to the jury of awards at the St. Louis Artists' Guild, Wednesday, June 26, not later than 5 p. m. George S. Johns is chairman of this committee.

All paintings entered in the contest are donated, and will be auctioned to the highest bidder by the Auction Committee. Many of the artists of St. Louis have donated other paintings for the "Art Gallery" and auction.

The Red Cross Motor Corps, of which Mrs. H. H. Langenberg is president, has volunteered to meet all street cars and all trains at South Kirkwood to transport those without motors to the club grounds. Arrangements will also be made for direct motor service from downtown districts.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER AS FOOD LINE FOR ARMY IN FRANCE

Senators Reed, McKeller and Kirby of Military Committee Agreed on Necessity of Water Traffic.

ARGUMENT BEFORE I. C. C. TOMORROW

Reed Will Tell Commission That Traffic Must Be Instituted This Summer to Prevent Coal Shortage.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—Senator Kirby of Arkansas, a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, told the Mississippi Waterways Delegates today that it was no longer sufficient to say that the United States has three quarters of a million men in France.

"I have just come from the war conference and I can tell you what that situation is," The Senator said, "We have by this time greatly exceeded that figure and will have a million men in France even before the First of July."

The chief argument decided upon for the transportation of the river project before Judge Prouty Monday is that without freight traffic upon the Mississippi, it is not going to be possible either to feed such an army as the United States is putting in France, or to keep it supplied with munitions of war.

Senators Reed of Missouri, Kirby of Arkansas, McKeller of Tennessee, all members of the Military Affairs Committee, told the delegates that the railroads are unequal to the task of supplying the army in France and that no more vital war measure is before the Government than the proposal to use the Mississippi River to get foodstuffs of the valley to the sea without tying up railroad traffic in the East.

Reed will be the chief advocate for the river at the hearing, which will be attended by the Congressional delegations and Senators of all the Mississippi Valley states. Reed told the delegates that as chairman of the Senate Committee which had investigated the coal situation, he had learned that the only hope of escaping recurrence of the crisis of last winter is coal carrying down the river where the ships can get all the fuel and that no greater necessity exists in the country than establishing that service at once and getting it in operation before cold weather sets in.

ACTING MAYOR HALL SIGNS SALARY STANDARDIZATION BILL

Acting Mayor Hall yesterday signed the salary standardization bill which was passed by the Board of Aldermen 10 days ago. It increases the salaries and wages of 4900 of the city's 6000 employes and gives to all union men the same wages they would receive if working for private employers. The 850 city firemen receive an increase of $5 a month. They had asked for $10 a month increase.

The new schedule will involve the expenditure of $530,000 a year additional for city salaries. It becomes effective at once.

PATROLMEN GUILTY OF LIQUOR THEFT FROM A BOX CAR

Federal Judge Trieber to Pronounce Sentence Tomorrow on Robert Wetzel and Joseph Fleck.

FACE MAXIMUM OF TWENTY YEARS EACH

Teamster Testifies to Having Taken $1500 Worth of Whisky to Saloon—Defense Was an Alibi.

Sentence will be pronounced tomorrow by United States Judge Trieber on Patrolmen Robert Wetzel and Joseph Fleck of the North Market Street Police Station. They were convicted by a jury yesterday of the theft of $1500 worth of whisky, an interstate shipment, from a box car in the Terminal Railroad yards in North St. Louis, April 24.

The men were convicted on two counts—theft of the whisky and knowingly having stolen property in their possession. The maximum penalty is 10 years' imprisonment on each count.

Wetzel and Fleck were assisted by John Vaughn and Charles Murphy, who are also under indictment, and two railroad employes. Vaughn, a teamster, and Murphy were the chief witnesses for the Government.

They testified that on the night of April 24 they met Wetzel and Fleck with the two railroad men and drove them to the railroad yards in Vaughn's wagon, where a freight car was entered and a lot of whisky stolen. It was taken first to a shed in an alley near Ninth street and St. Louis avenue and then to the saloon of Joseph Heibel, Second and Dock streets, where it was recovered April 25.

Wetzel and Fleck denied the charge and tried to prove an alibi by relatives and several patrolmen. They have been under suspension since their arrest. Following their conviction, the court fixed their bonds at $10,000.

U-BOAT SENT TO FRIGHTEN U. S., SAYS ADMIRAL WEMYSS

Germans Sought to Create Demand for Recall of Fleets, Says British First Sea Lord.

THINKS ONLY ONE RAIDER IS AT WORK

Effort Was a Defeat for Enemy in Bringing the War Home to Americans, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 15.—German submarine activity off the Atlantic coast of the United States should not be taken very seriously, as the Germans probably will not attempt a blockade of the American shores, in the opinion of Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty. The Admiral believes there is only one submarine operating off the American coast and that the purpose of its trip across the Atlantic was to frighten the Americans.

German ruthlessness at sea, the First Sea Lord declared, must be met by centralized warfare in the North Sea and the Mediterranean. Admiral Wemyss paid tribute to the co-operation of the American naval forces in European waters. He said American ships were not only in the North, but were also appearing in the Mediterranean and off Gibraltar.

The appearance of the German submarine off the American coast is an interesting development, from whatever point of view it is studied, and opportunity was given this week to Archibald S. Hurd, British naval writer, to obtain from the British First Sea Lord, not only his opinion upon this departure on the part of the Germans, but its effect on the naval situation generally.

Thinks Aim Was to Frighten U. S.

"I say there has not been more than one submarine off the American Coast, because that conclusion fits in with my interpretation of the enemy's object," Admiral Wemyss explained. "The Germans cannot hope anything in the character of a blockade. The distance is too great from their bases. They only make demonstrations with the hope of causing us to decentralize efforts to put down the submarine. His object is to frighten the American people in the hope that they may exert their influence on the naval authorities.

"You will remember Napoleon declared that 'exclusiveness of purpose is the secret of great successes and of great operations.' Now, if the German could cause a dispersal of naval force this demonstration off the American Coast would achieve its purpose.

"I hold firmly two principles. As chief of the staff I believe firmly in decentralization in administration, but as chief of staff I also believe as firmly in the decentralization of effort of the enemy. I think it was Admiral Mahon who said the great end of a war fleet is not to chase, nor to fly but to control the seas.

"With that statement in mind, glance at an ordinary school atlas if you have not handy what the Germans would call a 'war map.' You will see the Central Powers have formed a block in Europe running down from the North Sea to the Adriatic, and to the point where the Dardanelles debouches into the Mediterranean. Any submarine to reach the American coast has to pass either the north or the south of the British Isles, or along the Mediterranean where Gibraltar stands sentinel over the narrow exit.

Centralized Sea Force Necessary.

"That atlas is illuminating. It indicates sound strategic methods of dealing with the submarine campaign. We must fight the U-boat in the narrow seas. In other words, we must centralize, concentrating all our forces in what is really the decisive area.

"The Germans, you may be sure, have been studying the charts and in sending one of their so-called submarine cruisers to the American coast they thought to raise an outcry in the United States against the policy which is now being pursued of fighting the submarine in the narrow seas.

Thinks Germans Will Drop Raids.

"I judge both from official information and cable dispatches in the newspapers that they have already failed in their purpose. It looks as though they had merely brought the war home to the American people. This represents another defeat for Germany.

"We shall have to wait on events before final judgment can be formed as to whether the enemy will persist in his new policy. I am not inclined to take the business seriously. It cannot be serious in relation to the immense volume of sea traffic between America and Europe. But I must enter one caveat. The proper policy is, as I have said, centralization of effort in the decisive areas—the narrow waters through which all submarines, whether intended to cruise off our shores or off the American coast, must pass.

"That is the right policy, as I am sure every seaman will agree, although that does not mean that no submarine can escape and cross the Atlantic. No such guarantee can be given.

"What, then, should be done? I see it is reported that American coast bound traffic will be convoyed. That would be the adoption of a principle that has proved to be successful during the last year or so, but would be a quite secondary effort I imagine, since, according to the statement made by the Naval Secretary in Washington, the American naval authorities are convinced that if the submarine is to be mastered it must be mastered in the narrow seas.

"American resources are developing rapidly and two policies I hope may not prove incompatible, namely, co-operation in the main offensive with a measure of protection to local traffic."

U. S. Warships Off Gibraltar.

The conversation passed to the manner in which the American naval sources have co-operated in the European waters.

"You know, of course," the first sea lord continued, "that for more than a year past American men-of-war have been operating from Queenstown. It also has been noticed for some time that there are some American ships in the Mediterranean. I do not think it can be regarded as a secret from the Germans that American men-of-war are also acting against the enemy off Gibraltar.

"This co-operation constitutes a remarkable testimonial to the strategic insight of the American naval authorities, who have not hesitated to send battleships to join the grand fleet in the North Sea.

"I wonder how many people realize that the decision of the American naval authorities in sending ships 3000 miles or more across the Atlantic to defend American interests represents a unique triumph of a fundamental strategic principle. The naval historian when his time comes to write will not be blind to this notable action, and there seems no doubt he will be able to add that the navy department was supported wholeheartedly by public opinion.

"And that reminds me to emphasize the fact that the object of the Germans in sending submarines to the American coast to sink shipping was to weaken the concordat between expert and civil opinion in the United States. On that matter there is no shadow of doubt."

Praises Co-operation.

Discussing the relations of the two navies, Admiral Wemyss says: "On the broad lines of strategic policy complete unanimity exists. Admiral Benson and Admiral Mayo have both visited us and studied our naval plans. No officers could have exhibited keener appreciation of the naval situation. I find it difficult to express the gratitude of the British service to these officers and to Admiral Sims for the support they have given us. I am not exaggerating or camouflaging, to borrow a word of the moment. Our relations could not be more cordial.

"The day-to-day procedure is of the simplest. Every morning I hold a conference with the principal officers of the naval staff, and Admiral Sims is present as the representative of the United States fleet, joining freely in the discussion of the various subjects which arise. I need not add that I keenly appreciate his help. At sea the same spirit of cordial co-operation exists—extremely cordial. I should like to say we have, fortunately, a common language and common traditions, which have done much to assist us in working together.

"The American officers and men are first-rate. It is impossible to pay too high tribute to the manner in which they settled down to this job of submarine hunting, and to the intelligence, resource and courage which they have exhibited.

"They came on the scene at the opportune moment. Our men had been in the mill for many weary months. Possibly the American people, so far removed from the main theater of the war, can hardly appreciate what it meant when these American officers and men crossed the Atlantic.

Movement of Troops Unaffected.

"They have been splendid, simply splendid. I have seen a number of the destroyers and conversed with a large number of officers. I also have had many reports and am not speaking of the aid the United States has rendered without full knowledge.

"Not only are the vessels well constructed and the officers and men thoroughly competent, but the organization is admirable. It was no slight matter for so many ships to come 3000 miles across the Atlantic to fight in European waters. The decision raised several complicated problems in connection with supplies, but those problems have been surmounted with success. There has never been anything like it before in the history of naval warfare.

"This submarine business will not have any effect on transport movement which, judged from the standpoint of a seaman, has no parallel in history. A year ago the enemy was boasting that his submarines would prevent American troops being moved to Europe. I do not know whether that statement was ever believed in Germany or whether it was merely put about in the belief that it would make the Americans nervous, but which ever it was neither the threats nor the performances of the U-boats have affected the movement."

OBSERVATION YACHT ENDS CRUISE OF THREE YEARS

Scientists on the Carnegie, at Washington, Said to Have Obtained Valuable Data.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15. — The magnetic observation yacht Carnegie has arrived here after a three years' cruise, closing her voyage with a run up the coast as near inshore as possible to keep out of the way of German submarines. She will remain here indefinitely, the headquarters of the Carnegie Institution, which directs her movements. Valuable data on terrestial magnetism was obtained by the scientists.

The Carnegie left Brooklyn three years ago with six scientists aboard, passed through the Panama Canal and then cruised about in the North and South Pacific from the Arctic to the Antarctic circles. A visit was made to Buenos Aires, where she laid in port nine months on account of the war, while the scientists made observations in Argentina. The homeward voyage was made around Cape Horn, up the Pacific and through the Panama Canal. Only four members of her original crew were aboard when she arrived home, the others having left at various ports.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

TO FIGHT PROPAGANDA AGAINST MOTOR CAR

CHICAGO, June 15.—That automobile dealers everywhere unite in killing false and malicious rumors spread with intent to injure the motor car business was decided at a meeting of the National Automobile Dealers' Association held Friday and Saturday in Chicago. The dealers expressed their willingness to co-operate with the Government in just and equal schemes of taxation, but moved to resist and resent the spreading of rumors insinuating that unduly stringent restrictions are about to be placed on the sale and use of automobiles.

Every dealer in the country was urged by the meeting to comply instanter with the recommendation of the Commercial Economy Board at Washington for the curtailment of night and Sunday service and in other means of conserving labor and material. Plans were laid for the co-operation in the establishment of rural express routes and return load bureaus and for carrying the work of the organization into every county of every state. The latter division of the efforts being placed in charge of E. E. Peake of Kansas City.

The Chicago meeting was attended by F. W. A. Vesper, president, and G. Elmo Holke, assistant secretary from St. Louis, and Joseph A. Schlecht and Philip H. Brockman of St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

TALBERT TELLS CLUB HE WELCOMES HINTS

The first members' meeting of the new South Side Automobile Club was held Thursday night at the Western Rowing Club. It was attended by 124 members and 24 new members were enrolled at the meeting. Because of a sore throat, President H. P. Riefling appointed Robert E. Lee as presiding officer.

Addresses were made by Charles L. Talbert, Director of Streets and Sewers, E. J. Hess, Frank J. Riefling and City Treasurer Henry C. Menne.

In his address Mr. Talbert told the club that he welcomed the advice and assistance which it could give to the Street Department in the matter of bettering the streets and highways of the city. He stated that the appropriation for the streets was much under the real necessities and that it was necessary to spread the money as far as it would go. He asked that wherever possible, the club as a body would send to his department information in regard to particularly bad streets, and that he would promise to give them attention as quickly as possible. He also asked the club to formulate its ideas of better traffic conditions, the parking of automobiles in the downtown district and regulations at dangerous corners.

The new radiator emblem of the club was distributed to all of the members present, and then teams were formed to secure new members. Albert Von Hoffman is captain of one and H. P. Riefling of the other. The losing team in 60 days is to pay for a dinner for the winners.

The South Side Automobile Club has made arrangements with two of the local clubs for associate membership therein for members of the South Side Automobile Club.

DRIVEAWAYS OF COLE AERO-EIGHTS NUMEROUS

There is no more impressive evidence of the popularity of the new Cole Aero-Eight than the large number of dealers who are fairly besieging the factory at Indianapolis, Ind., for cars to drive through in order to hasten deliveries to purchasers clamoring for their cars, including the Cole, St. Louis Automobile Co.

Dealers are coming into the plant from New York to Denver for cars. In addition to the regular shipments by rail into all territory not under embargo, which are made whenever flat cars or box cars are available, and express shipments made whenever permitted, a score or more of the Aero-Eights have been listed for drive-aways every week.

The entire output of the Cole plant from the present well into the month of July is already booked.

Current comment of the dealers who are arriving at the factory is that the drive-aways are proving highly practicable. The action of the cars on the road is so impressive and their striking economy from the very start—which increases as the cars are run in—is proof of Aero-Eight capacity that is irrefutable. Many of the dealers on that account are bringing with them to the factory prospective purchases and are turning their drive-aways into veritable demonstration tours.

The Cole Aero-Eight is so individual in its lines and mechanical construction, the dealers say, that they are finding no difficulty in holding orders for cars in cases where purchasers are forced to write for deliveries.

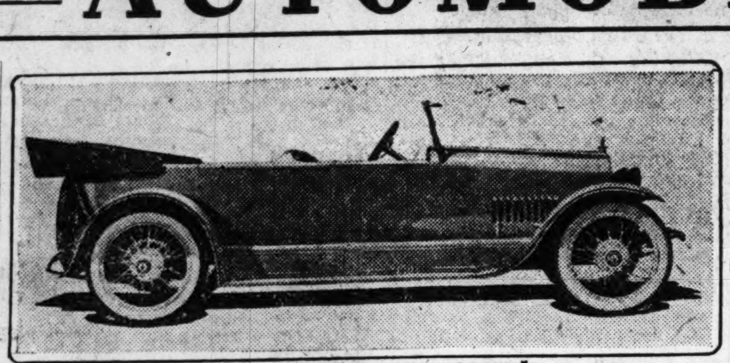
TRUCK UNITS HARD TO GET

Mr. D. C. Hathaway, assistant general manager of the Lauton Truck Co. of Youngstown, O., spent Wednesday with the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis, the St. Louis distributors.

Mr. Hathaway reports that his factory is unable to produce Lauton Truck Units in sufficient quantities to meet the demand.

"We expect to organize our territory thoroughly, as we anticipate an unusual sale of the Lauton products, says I. G. McNiece, president of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis.

"The axle unit is made in one, two and three ton capacities, and may be attached to any make of car at a saving of from $300 to $500 over a truck of like capacity."



THE JORDAN "SUBURBAN SEVEN."

JORDAN IS CHOSEN AS MATE TO MITCHELL

With the receipt of the first demonstrator early last week the Mitchell Automobile Corporation announced the Jordan as the new line which they had chosen as a running mate with the Mitchell. The car will be handled over practically the same territory as they now cover on the Mitchell, Southern Illinois, Eastern Missouri and Arkansas.

The Jordan is not unknown in St. Louis, but local motorists have not had opportunity this year to inspect the newer models, the lines of which have undergone radical changes.

The Sport Marine and the Suburban models head the line, the first being a four-door, four-passenger car and the other a seven-passenger car with the straight lines so admired in the smaller capacity cars.

The Jordan is in the higher priced field, the Suburban listing at $2375 and the Sport Marine $100 higher. The line is completed by four closed models, a sedan, a brougham, a town car and a limousine ranging in price from $2825 to $3750.

While large in size the Jordan is light, its weight being only 3100 pounds. The bodies are all aluminum and are offered in two colors, Briarcliff green and Liberty blue. The inside body trim is mahogany and genuine hand buffed leather is used in the upholstery.

"In marketing the Mitchell car, we have found a distinct demand for the higher priced car," said President John Bee in discussing the new line, "and it was to fill this field that we selected the Jordan after the inspection of several other lines. The attention of the Jordan factory to the most minute detail in the designing and construction was the feature that most impressed us."

LeRoy Jones of the wholesale department, drove the first car through from the factory at Cleveland and is now touring the territory selecting dealers. Other cars for immediate delivery have now been received.

WILL CLIMB MOUNTAINS WITH ONLY HIGH GEAR

Plans have been announced by the Olympian Motors Co. for a high-gear drive from Detroit to Philadelphia over the Allegheny mountains. According to C. O. Welling of the Welling Motor Co. it is to be a test trip to prove the power, extraordinary lightness and flexibility of the new Olympian car. Arrangements have been made to stage the drive sometime in August.

This test of the new Olympian was suggested to the engineers during numerous experiments in which the car performed remarkably. Scientific construction has eliminated every pound of superfluous weight so that the car now represents the very lightest automobile construction possible. This feature, combined with a powerful engine, enables the Olympian to start with unusual celerity, and to climb hills with ease. The car has not yet encountered the hill it could not negotiate on high, and it is the belief of its designers that there is no such hill between Detroit and Philadelphia, not excepting even the mountains.

On the test trip, a regular stock car will be used, with al gears removed from the gear-box except the reverse and high. The driver will be compelled to start the car with the high gear in mesh and take all hills on high.

USES LAUNDRY SYSTEM ON COMMERCIAL TIRES

A new idea in tire service has been inaugurated by the Roberts Motor Tire Co., 2827 Locust street, in its commercial repair department. A plan of regular twice-a-week calls will be made on all large commercial users, picking up tires that need attention and returning them the next day. It can be compared with nothing so much as the call and delivery system now used by the laundries.

A new feature is also being used in connection with the Dayton Thoroughbred Tire which the company distributes. Although these casings are guaranteed for 6000 miles, the Robert Tire Co. is agreeing to keep the tire in repair during its life, without cost to the user.

Arrangements have been made to enlarge the present quarters, the room on the west being added. With this additional space available, it is planned to add a full stock of selected seconds.

YOUNG WOMEN ASSEMBLE CARS AT GRANT PLANT

At the Grant Six factory in Cleveland young women now constitute about one-fifth of the working force. Dressed in the blouse and bloomer costume adopted by women workers in England munition factories, the hundred or more women in the Grant shops have proved quite as skillful and as satisfactory as the male workers that they have replaced and released for other work.

"In all jobs requiring quickness and deftness women are superior to men," says William Hummel, general superintendent of the Grant Six factory, writing to the St. Louis-Grant Motor Co. "In the stock rooms, in the assembling of small parts, in such operations as attaching the vaccum tank to the dash or assembling the running boards women are entirely capable. For anything requiring strength or lifting they are, of course, out of the question."

"In the Grant Six factory the girls and women are in charge of a matron. We have provided spacious dressing rooms and rest rooms and the physical condition of the women workers is carefully looked after. We find that the girls like the work and one glance at the group employed in the Grant Six shops shows that it agrees with them. To see them romping during the noon hour, you'd think they were going to school.

"Women have come to stay in industry. The shortage of men during the war will soon bring about a very extensive employment of women in shops and factories, and after the war they will remain a big factor. Employers will find it to their interest to make the working conditions as pleasant as possible and with the possibility of general employment open to women, so that women workers are not confined to a few industries as in the past, working conditions will have to be maintained on a high level in order to attract them. Women will always be more independent and more ready to shift to another job than men.

"The general employment of women in shops at wages higher than they can get in the lines of work that have hitherto been open to them, will raise the wages of women in all lines. The fact is that girls and women are only just coming into their own in the economic world and we need have no fear that they will not know how to take care of themselves now that they are in demand."

SCRIPPS-BOOTH LINE TO BE SOLD BY VELIE CO.

The Velie Automobile Co. of St. Louis announces a new line of medium-priced cars composed of fours, sixes and eights. This is the famous Scripps-Booth line that has been on the market for several years and has been noted for its attractiveness of design and color.

'A number of times during the past few years we have been offered the agency for other cars to be handled in conjunction with the Velie in this territory," says Herman L. Schnure, president of the Velie Automobile Co. of St. Louis, "but it was not until two weeks ago, when the opportunity to secure the Scripps-Booth line of cars presented itself, that we found a car that we could present to the public as enthusiastically and with as much confidence as we have been able to put behind the Velie.

"The new Scripps-Booth six-cylinder car, in both roadster and touring car body styles, at $1195, is the latest addition to the Scripps-Booth line, and upon the occasion of my visit to the factory at Detroit two weeks ago, after putting the car through all of its paces, I felt more than willing to present the line to our customers as worthy of every cent of its cost, and more.

"Mechanically, the car is 100 per cent attractive, and in addition to this, the lines are so unusually beautiful and the finish is so perfect, that the car will appeal instantly to those men who know mechanical worth and to those women who appreciate the many refinements which distinguish the complete motor car.

"The Scripps-Booth Corporation has recently affiliated itself with the largest producers of automobiles in this country, which has made possible an achievement in motor car building which could not have been accomplished in years without such co-operation.

"Our first shipment of cars has left the factory and is expected daily. In the shipment will come to us not only the six-cylinder cars, but also several of the four-cylinder roadsters and eight-cylinder chummy and four-door four-passenger cars, several hundred of which are being operated upon our streets today and which, therefore, need no further introduction."

NEWMAN TO TAKE NEW LINE JULY 1

Plans are being made by the Harry Newman corporation for a big sales drive on new lines which will be announced on July 1. For the present Newman is giving little information regarding the identity of the new connections further than saying there will be both trucks and a passenger car in the low priced field.

"We feel that the passenger car selling for less than a thousand dollars and the commercial car will be the two leaders in the motor car field during the period of the war," said Newman yesterday. "It is our intention to concentrate our sale effort largely along these lines."

MOTOR CAR FAR UP IN LIST OF ESSENTIALS

"The American nation leads the world in utilizing the efficient transportation service furnished by the wonderful modern internal combustion motor," said Stewart McDonald, vice-president and general manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis. "This motor conserves coal and rail transportation and increases agricultural and manufacturing production.

"In spite of the wide spread reports to the contrary, gasoline is plentiful and Washington actually recommends its free use. Gasoline is a by-product of fuel oil, and fuel oil just now is a vital necessity for Government use, for ships and manufacturing plants, so that there is actually a surplus of gasoline.

"In every city in the country the use of passenger cars, trucks and busses is increasing. They are time savers and they furnish transportation which can be had in no other way. On the farm the gasoline engine is used in passenger automobiles, in trucks, in tractors, in threshing machines and for power engines of various uses. It is said that there are more than 70,000 motor cars and trucks in the United States Army at this time.

"The automobile is, therefore, at this moment, as vital a necessity as any other item in the big list of war necessities and any steps taken to curtail the production of motor cars at this time would seem to be a mistake.

"That there will be a curtailment is a certainty and the man who wants an automobile—and who does not—will show his keenness if he buys it as quickly as possible."

ACCESSORY MEN WILL ENTERTAIN THEIR LADIES

The annual meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association will be held at the American Annex Hotel Tuesday night. At this meeting the new officers will be installed, and special and unusual entertainment provided. This is to be "ladies' night" with the Accessory Association, the first in its history. The members of the association are being invited to bring the ladies of the family to the meeting.

One of the speakers will be Miss Alma Robb, sales manager of the women's department of the Massachusetts Life Insurance Co., who will speak on "Women in the Business World." J. Jos. Redmond of the Chamber of Commerce will talk about 'Conditions During and After the War." There will also be a playlet rendered by children and music and dancing.

The officers to be installed are John F. Shuford, president; Wm. L. Ferrier, vice president; A. R. Baxter, treasurer; Robert E. Lee, secretary, and E. S. Marvin, W. F. A. Uhlenhaut, W. L. Patterson, T. Frank Wood and L. E. Allmon, directors.

AIDING FORMATION OF RURAL EXPRESS LINES

District representatives are being appointed in all the principal centers by the National Motor Truck Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to assist in the discovery of routes over which rural motor express lines can be operated successfully and to help in getting such services started.

The committee has issued a series of pamphlets giving in detail a list of services to be rendered by such express lines, the scale of charges, a sample cost sheet, suggestions for the preliminary survey of routes and canvass of prospective customers, operating plans and general suggestions. This printed matter is available to anyone interested and will be sent upon request addressed to the N. A. C. C., 7 East 42d street, New York.

The committee has undertaken to interest the 115 motor vehicle manufacturing members of the chamber and between 30,000 and 40,000 dealers in this patriotic movement. In this work it is aiding the Highways Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense, as a result of whose investigations and efforts rural motor express lines will be in extensive operation before the summer ends.

The object is to provide a regular service, reliable in operation and reasonable in cost, for the farmer, who is affected by embargoes or inadequate railroad service or is so far from a railroad that hauling is untable.

Farmers now served by motor express lines regard them as the greatest labor saver they have ever known and say that without the trucks they would have to stop shipping milk or garden truck, that their production has largely increased and that their produce is delivered quicker and in better condition than ever before. Many who formerly wasted material because it did not pay them to drive to town now make regular shipments.

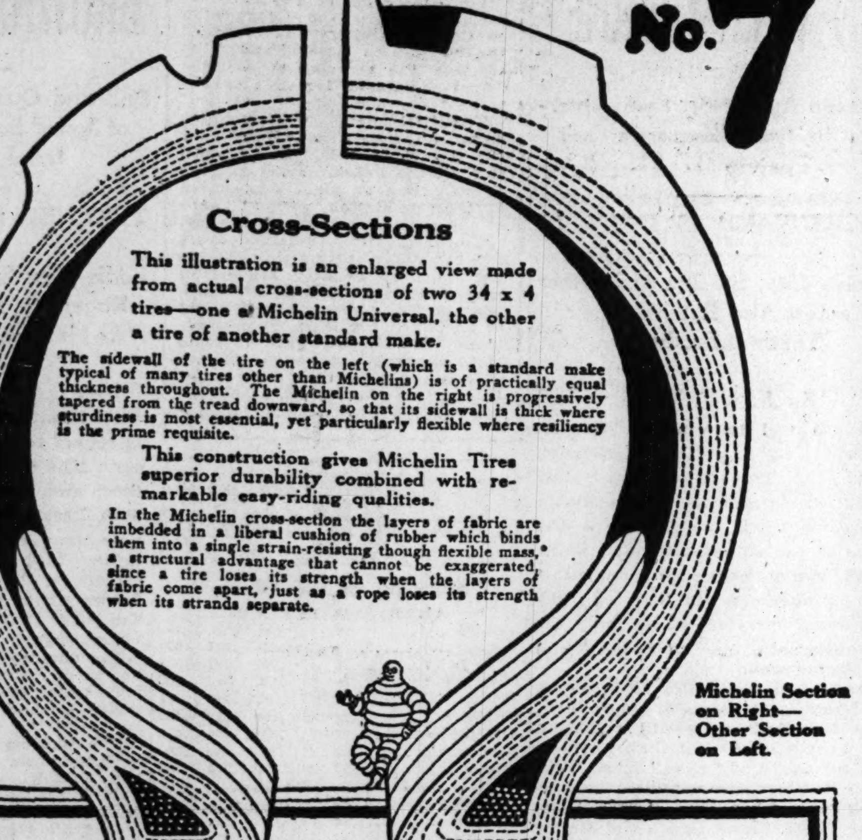
MICHELIN
Twelve Tire Tests
No. 7



Cross-Sections

This illustration is an enlarged view made from actual cross-sections of two 34 x 4 tires—one a Michelin Universal, the other a tire of another standard make.

The sidewall of the tire on the left (which is a standard make typical of many tires other than Michelins) is of practically equal thickness throughout. The Michelin on the right is progressively tapered from the tread downward, so that its sidewall is thick where sturdiness is most essential, yet particularly flexible where resiliency is the prime requisite.

This construction gives Michelin Tires superior durability combined with remarkable easy-riding qualities.

In the Michelin cross-section the layers of fabric are imbedded in a liberal cushion of rubber which binds them into a single strain-resisting though flexible mass, a structural advantage that cannot be exaggerated, since a tire loses its strength when the layers of fabric come apart, just as a rope loses its strength when its strands separate.

This series of twelve tests is designed to take the uncertainty out of tire-buying.

The world-wide reputation of the house of Michelin—the oldest, most experienced of all tire-makers—is proof that only the best of materials are used in Michelins. That a greater quantity of these superior materials is used in Michelin Tires is proved by their extra weight and remarkable thickness, which mean greater durability. And the superiority of Michelin design is shown by the above illustration.

Better materials, more materials and superior construction—these account for the supreme durability of Michelin Tires.

HACKETT IS NEW FOUR HANDLED BY WELLING

St. Louis had its first view of the new Hackett car, a Jackson, Mich., product, last week when the first shipment was received by the Welling Motor Co., which has taken on its distribution in eastern Missouri and southern Illinois in connection with the Olympian car and Gramm-Bernstein Trucks.

The Hackett is a distinctive looking four cylinder car in the thousand dollar class, both touring and roadster selling for $985. A detachable-top sedan, which sells for $200 additional, completes the line for this year.

The lines of the new car, which is now in its third year of production, follow the latest fashions among the motor cars. In fact with its beveledged body and the sharp, straight cut lines of the raditor, it follows very closely the lines of some of the high priced cars which have always been looked upon as leaders in style.

The factory claims to have solved the economy problem by designing a car which will give 24 to 28 miles per gallon on gasoline, 200 miles per quart of oil and 10,000 miles to a set of tires. It is the factory's pride that these are records of present Hackett owners.

The motor which is 3¾ x 4¼ develops 36.9 horse power at 2800 R. P. The wheelbase is 112 inches and 32 x 3½ inch tires are used. The standard color is deep blue but an option of red or brown is offered.

The first shipment to reach the Welling Co. comprises six cars and several other carloads are now en route for immediate delivery. The first Hackett dealer, Heisinger Brothers of Jefferson City, was closed last Thursday.

The city also purchased a two-ton Graham attachment and Dodge chassis to be used for hauling by the Water Department. The purchase also included three Dodge touring cars. One of these is to be used by Supply Commissioner Thomas, and the others by the Hospital Department. The sale was closed by Frank R. Tate.

GYPSY TOUR IS JUNE 23

Motorcycle enthusiasts are beginning to look forward with eagerness to the pleasure promised by the National Gypsy Tours, June 23. Officials of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, conducting the tour, have completed all the necessary arrangements and done everything possible to make the event a success.

The National Gypsy Tours are pleasure tours in which every motorcycle rider may participate, obtaining a maximum of enjoyment with a minimum of effort and expense, and the success of the 1917 Gypsy Tours has made the event the biggest annual affair in motorcycledom. Last year 22,000 riders took part, and indications point to at least 30,000 entries this year.

Each rider successfully finishing the tour will be presented with a handsome bronze medal, while riders who are F. A. M. members and who complete the tour will receive a bar at the top of their medals, signifying that they are members of the national motorcyclists' organization. The three clubs having the largest entry lists wil receive special honor trophies in the form of handsome silver loving cups.

But the real, honest to goodness drawing card for the outdoor enthusiast is the fun promised by the event, and there wil be plenty of that.

The local Motorcycle Gypsy Tour is being organized by the St. Louis Motorcycle dealers.

Riders who wish to take part—and all local motorcyclists should take part—are urged to leave their names with the Olive Cycle & Motor Co. or the Knight Motor Co. within the next few days.

Perhaps you have observed that we seldom feature any one detail of design or construction in a Maxwell Motor Car.

There is a reason for that.

In a product where excellence is uniform, there is no opportunity—no temptation—to emphasize any one feature, to the exclusion of others.

Today there are more than 250,000 cars of this same model in use.

For five years it has been manufactured in practically its present form.

If there ever was a weak link in the chain, it was long since strengthened.

But there wasn't—from the first this proved to be a wonderfully reliable, exceptionally economical and altogether a most satisfactory automobile.

Special features are all right.

It is permissible, of course, to emphasize any advantage a car may possess over its rivals.

But in the case of this Maxwell we feel the strongest thing we can say is that it is just as good at one point as at another—good all over and all through.

In a word, featureless—a standardized, dependable motor car.

You can't go wrong when you select a Maxwell Motor Car for yours.

As to Our Browns, Why Get an Outside Manager When We Need Inside Baseball?

RUTH'S HOME RUN, EIGHTH OF SEASON, BEATS BROWNS, 8-4

"Babe" Ruth Puts Ball in Bleachers With Two On in Seventh—Also Drives in Run in Ninth.

DAVENPORT KNOCKED OFF HILL IN FOURTH

Succeeded by Tom Rogers—Poor Baserunning Costs Locals Chance for Victory Over Sam Jones.

George ("Babe") Ruth brought about the downfall of Jimmy Austin's aspiring Browns in the second game of the series with the Red Sox yesterday afternoon, a game the visitors annexed by an 8 to 4 count. Ruth's home run in the seventh inning accounted for three of the four-run margin by which the locals were defeated.

The grandstand managers who are trying to help Jimmy Austin pilot the Browns in the absence of a permanent successor to Fielder Jones, yelled long and loudly for Tom Rogers to pass Ruth when the slugger appeared in the seventh. The situation was made to order for "Babe" and stood like this:

Score tied, two men on the bases and two out.

Over the Fence, Far Away.

In addition, on his three previous trips to the plate, Ruth had gone hitless and it was written in the skies that he was overdue. Tom Rogers, however, guessed the other way and buckled down to the business of pitching to the hardest hitter on the Boston club. Tom succeeded to the extent of getting two strikes across. He then tried to "groove" one, and the effort cost the Browns a ball game.

For Ruth met the leather squarely in the middle of the bat. Ray Demmitt simply turned his back and watched it land about half way up the seats in the right field bleachers. Ruther sauntered in behind Hopper and Shean, both of whom had singled. It was his eighth home run of the season.

Big Dave [illegible]port, the frozen-fingered exp[illegible] selected to start yesterday's ma[illegible] but he gave way to Tom Rogers in the early part of the fourth inning. Sam Jones, who is the fourth regular member of the Red Sox hurling department, while Ruth is playing the outfield, settled down after five very stormy innings and subsequent to the fifth, the Browns were able to get only one man as far as second base.

Baserunning Off Form.

Wretched base-running in the early innings accounted for the loss perhaps fully as much as Babe Ruth's hitting. The locals scored three runs in the first two innings on seven hits, a hit batsman and a fielder's choice. They might have had twice as many runs and perhaps more, had not both Sisler and Demmitt, to say nothing of Gerber, tried to get away with apparently impossible stuff on the bases.

The Austins were off to a two run lead in the first inning. Tobin opened with a double and took third, while Scott was throwing out Maisel. Sisler counted Tobin with a single past Shean. Demmitt followed with a safety to right, and Sisler was expunged in a runup between third and home, the entire Red Sox infield figuring in the play. Demmitt sneaked over to third during the muddle, whence he scored when Smith hit to center for one base.

A base on balls to McInnis, Thomas' double to right and a single gave Boston two in the second and tied the score. The Browns went into the lead in the second, where once they showed poor baserunning. Gerber beat out a hit to Jones for a starter. Severied singled to right, but Hooper's throw to Thomas cut down Gerber trying for third. Davenport was hit by a pitched ball and Tobin's single counted Severied.

Red Sox Take Lead.

Two runs for Boston in the third put the visitors in front by a single tally. Hooper beat out a hit to Gedeon and continued to second when the latter threw wide to Sisler. Shean singled to left and Hooper stopped at third. Strunk forced Shean, Hooper scoring on the play. Ruth tapped to Davenport, but McInnis singled and Strunk counted when Smith let the ball get through him.

Doubles by Sisler and Demmitt made the score four runs each in the fifth. Meantime, however, Rogers had relieved Davenport after Scott had opened the fourth inning with a single. Ruth's disastrous blow, as related above, produced three more for the pacemakers in the seventh and they threw in one more in the ninth for good measure. Ruth also having been responsible for the final counter. Shean singled and Ruth bumped the right field wall with a liner on which he was thrown out at second trying for a double.

In the two games thus far, Ruth has driven in seven runs and scored an eighth with his home run yesterday. Thus, he has accounted for eight of the 12 runs the Red Sox have scored in the two games.

Urban Shocker is the logical hurling choice for the Browns in the third game of the series this afternoon. Either Carl Mays or Hubert Leonard, the latter a southpaw, will work for the visitors. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Bagby was effective except in the third round, when Walker's long single followed two passes. A great one-hand catch by Speaker was a feature. Score:

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Giants won a sensational uphill game from Cincinnati today, 8 to 7. Causey, a young local pitcher, starting his first big league game, was batted hard, and Cincinnati go a 6-run lead. The score was tied in the seventh inning, when Kauff hit a home run with two men on base.

New York won in the ninth. Burns doubled and reached third on a fielder's choice. Fletcher hit a short fly to Neale, whose throw to the plate would have retired Burns, but Wingo failed to stop the ball.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Baseball's Finish.

THE knockout blow would be added to the misfortunes that have on every hand beset the short but stormy career of the Cardinal Idea and the Knot Hole Gang if Walton Cruise, as suggested in an item hinting at his coming enlistment, is to be lost to the club at this moment.

Cruise, after a bad start, has just begun to hit and it is his larruping of the leather, plus the improvement in Hornsby's batting, that has helped the club get a foothold on some higher terrain than last place.

War and other events have bashed the Knot Holers so badly that even their originators would not recognize them. Since last year the team has parted with some of its vital assets, including Miller, Goodwin, Smith, Horstman, Knight, Currie and others. Snyder and Baird are expected to go. The chances to make a pennant winning club is now entirely up to the pitchers and to Hornsby and Cruise. Any losses among these will seriously jeopardize the future of the team. As this future is still involved in the paying off of $150,000 or more residue on the purchase price, and as the club's gates and those of all other teams will probably remain closed next year, the loss of any important money earning factor at this time approaches a calamity.

This club has had its share of troubles since its purchasers one year ago launched a benevolent and ambitious project for uplifting the Grandma League in this man's town. In normal times success would have crowned its efforts, since last year it made $20,000 and would have this season begun with a strong third place team.

As Rickey Views It.

"I DO not think the larger minor leagues will be forced out of business before the season's end," Branch Rickey told the writer. "I look for the Pacific Coast League, the American Association, the International and even the Southern League (with a six-club circuit) to survive the season.

"The major leagues are suffering heavily from the draft, but if permitted to run will undoubtedly be able to finish the season intact. No club has yet been forced to call for help—at least none that has been heard. Next year? That's too far ahead."

Washington's Bottomless Pocket

THE American League clubs, with the exception of Washington, have done very well this year. The Browns' crowds compare more than favorably with last year, and the team is making money. Washington, despite its 4:30 p. m. starting hour and a greatly augmented adjacent population, is not a money-maker this year. Reports from Washington correspondents state that the attendance at the Browns' game there was under 4000 for the entire series, and that the visiting team's "bit" hardly covered its expenses.

Washington owners must have a bottomless pocket, since, for the past two or three years, they have been reaching in and pulling out wads of coin. Many attendances last year were appallingly far below 1000 on week days.

A. L. Race Close—That Helps.

HOWEVER, with six teams only a few games a part at the top of the race the receipts in the Johnsonian organization have been very close to normal.

If the pinch grows anguishing, fewer American League clubs will be crushed not only because of the better circuit patronage conditions, but because practically no A. L. owners are dependent on basthall profits for existence, whereas at least three clubs in the N. L. need the change.

Complex Bookkeeping.

WAR has immensely complicated the books of baseball clubs. One of the Browns' officials offers this as one of the reasons why club owners of today close their gates and postpone a scheduled contest if there's even a suspicion of rain in the offing. He explained as follows:

"Rain checks are causing snap judgment postponements. Rain checks are cumulative. They have to be used on various days subsequent to their date of issue. Yet they have to be registered at the turnstiles as admissions in order that the visiting club may be paid its proper share of the attendance. The consequences is Uncle Sam wants to know why the turnstile count on certain days doesn't agree with the receipts.

"Frank Navin has had the hardest luck of all the ball clubs. Detroit had 28,000 rain checks in three successive postponements. In fact they were not able to play a home game during the month of April. Carrying all those rain checks into April has about cost him all the gray hair he owns.

"Rather than have the rain check bogey hanging over them, magnates postpone games and avoid it."

U. S. Soldier Was Game, Anyhow

THAT fighting spirit of the American soldier is hard to dampen. They have been keyed up to battle pitch and just HAVE to work off some of the enthusiasm and fight energy. That's the conclusion to be drawn from the following account of an ambitious American sergeant who was billed to give boxing exhibitions with the renowned French champion, Georges Carpentier.

"The fate which awaited an American sergeant in a recent bout with Georges Carpentier should be a warning to boxers not to take liberties with men of renown in exhibition bouts. Carpentier and the American were to give a four-round no-decision affair at some athletic sports at Loir-et-Cher. The American, through excessive zeal, went for the champion in deadly earnest in the first round. In the second he paid for his temerity; two seconds from the start he was knocked out by a terrific swing. It is pleasant to know that he apologized to Carpentier for his conduct."

Brooklyn Wins Protest of Cards' Game; Tener Orders It Replayed

NEW YORK, June 15.—President Tener of the National League today sustained the protest of the Brooklyn Club and the game between the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams, played at Brooklyn on June 3, has been stricken from the records and ordered to be replayed.

In the sixth inning of that game Baird of St. Louis was on second when the batsman hit a fly to center. Baird started with the pitch and had touched third base; but when he realized the possibility of a catch he ran back toward second. The ball was not caught and Baird, from a position 15 or 20 feet from third, cut across the diamond and scored.

Umpire Rigler allowed the run on the ground that the runner was not required to touch third base a second time; that he had not run out of line to avoid being touched and that no play had been made on him at the home plate.

Quoting section 13, of rule 36, President Tener decided that it clearly applied in this instance and that when Baird retraced his steps toward second he nullified whatever technical right he had acquired to third; and when he again tried for home he was "advancing" and it was necessary for him to touch all bases in order.

FOREST PARK GOLF TEAM IS YOUNGEST IN TITLE TOURNEY

Average Age of St. Louis Quartet in Trans-Mississippi Golf Feature Is 21.

BOCKENKAMP IS ONLY 17

Kansas City, St. Joe and Other Centers Also Entered Their Youthful Prodigies.

By John E. Wray.

Youth will have a big fling at Kansas City beginning tomorrow, when the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association's annual championship tournament will be held over the links of the Hillcrest Country Club. With Harry Legg not competing, the younger set will have a fine chance of carrying off not only the championship, but the Brock Team trophy as well.

And of all the youth represented, St. Louis youth seems to appear best. The four lads who will represent the Forest Park Golf Club have all the earmarks of "class." It was this club that last year supplied the winning team when Paul Buesse, Clarence Wolff, Frank Lynch and Jimmy Mannion turned in a medal team score 25 strokes lower than that of their nearest competitor.

This year Wolff and Buesse are not representing the Forest Park club. In their stead are M. J. Crichton, a municipal star, and Richard Bockenkamp, the 17-year-old boy who made the low medal score over the municipal links and who later eliminated State Champion Jimmy Manion in the Forest Park Golf Club tourney.

Two Just of Age.

This quartet will average just 21 years of age. Bockenkamp is the youngest of the lot, being 17; Manion and Lynch have just come of age and recently registered under the draft regulations; Crichton is 25 years old. Every member of the quartet obtained experience while caddying, all of them save Crichton—pronounced Crayton—being products of the municipal links.

Bockenkamp's lack of trying tournament experience may militate against his showing; but the others are veterans. Lynch is probably playing better than any of his companions. It took a 76 to eliminate him in the city championship match play. Last year, in the T.-M. event, he was put out by Harry Legg, the perennial title-holder, but it took 36 holes to complete the job. Manion has a fine golfing temperament, but has been as erratic as a U-boat, in sinking his putts.

Kansas Champion a "Kid."

For the rest St. Louis has no monopoly of clever young men in the tourney. Among those expected to play are several youthful prodigies from other parts. Arthur Bonebrake, the 20-year-old Kansas State champion, has entered. From Sioux City there is a 19-year-old entry who is highly heralded. Kansas City has two dazzling young stars in Charley Smith and Jimmy Ward, both under 21; and from Swope Park, the municipal links of Kay See, a quartet of younglings is being counted on to make a stir in the Brock Trophy competition.

Other St. Louis entries have been sent in and quite a delegation is entered from the Sunset Hill Club, but the entries fall a little shy of the class of the younger men.

The Trans-Mississippi qualifying play will begin tomorrow and will last two days. Unlike the usual tourney, 36 qualifying holes are required. The first and second rounds of match play, both held on Wednesday, are at 18 holes, and the remainder of the tourney is all at 36 holes. This means 36 holes of golf on four successive days—a wearing contest of endurance in which youth ought to have a fine chance to outlast middle years.

St. Louis in Circuit Proposed for Belgian Soccer Eleven's Tour

NEW YORK, June 11.—The offer of the Belgian soccer team to play in this country for the benefit of war relief funds has been accepted by several teams.

The United States Football Association wired the Commission on Camp Activities on behalf of the Bethlehem Steel Field Club offering the services of the national champions for such a contest.

The Bethlehems, who recently defeated the Fall River Rovers for the American title, have agreed to meet the Belgian army players at any time or place designated by the commission, without share of the receipts or expense money.

Word has been received from several other teams in various parts of the country requesting that should the Belgian team come to this country games could be arranged for them upon their home grounds, all gate receipts to be donated to some war fund.

It is proposed that a series of three games be played, at Washington, New York and St. Louis.

Allie Walsh was the individual star of the victory of the St. Louis Malleables over the Triple A Club yesterday afternoon at the latter's grounds. The game ended in a 6-to-3 score. Walsh made three hits in four trips to the plate, including a single, a double and a triple, and scored three runs.

The victory gave the Malleables a record of five victories and two defeats and they continued in second place in the Manufacturers' League. Meyer pitched for the winners.

The American Brakes retained the lead in the league by defeating the Hezels, 8 to 1, at Fairground Park. Pfeiffer's work on the defense was the outstanding feature of this contest. He had five putouts and one of his catches was of the sensational variety. The scores:

MEADOWS' HURLING AND GOOD BREAKS HALT BRAVES' DASH

Spectacled Pitcher Almost Cheated of Victory Through Errors by Baird, Paulette and Hornsby.

DOUBLE STEAL HELPS BEAT BOSTON 4 TO 3

With Two Out Hornsby and Heathcote Put It Over on "Buck" Herzog and Collegian Crosses the Plate.

BOSTON, Mass., June 15.—Lee Meadows pitched what should have been airtight baseball against the careering Braves here this afternoon, in the opening game of the series, but his Cardinal playmates erred frequently and weirdly and Lee was fortunate to come out a 4 to 3 winner.

The Braves have been hitting hard, but the bespectacled Meadows with his curve ball and his fast one working admirably held them in check today, giving them but six hits, all singles, and no two of them in any one inning. "Doug" Baird at third base had an erratic afternoon; Rogers Hornsby juggled one and Gene Paulette made the craziest throw seen here this year. It was around those irregularities that the Braves made their three runs.

Three Boston pitchers worked against the men of Hendrix and of course, the left-handed Bunnie Hearn, who worked seven innings, is the Tribesman who gets blamed for the local setback. Pat Ragan, erratic as they make them, flung the eighth, after a pinch hitter had swung idly for Hearn. Then into the picture came Dana Fillingim, the tribal spitball sensation, for the last frame.

10,000 Braves Supporters Out.

Perfect weather and the recent winning streak of the Braves—they had taken five out of their six contests—conspired to bring out a good crowd, something like 10,000 and that despite the worst subway conditions known in Boston for many a year. The Georgian rushed reserve after reserve to the fray. Matters actually looked black for the Cards in the last eighth when the Braves had the tieing run on third base and the winning counter on second. There were two out at the time, and Rawlings obligingly whacked a hot grounder back to Meadows, who forthwith knocked it down, recovered and tossed out the batter. In the ninth the Braves went out in that order without a ruffle.

Double Steal Aids Cards.

The Cards got off on the right foot in the opening frame the Braves yielded two runs and it was largely because the Stallings team could not properly defend against the double steal. In the old days of 1914 the Boston Nationals broke up the double steal more than any other big league club. But they muffed it today, "Buck" Herzog being largely responsible therefore, as a result the Cards promptly hopped in and got two runs. That was the winning margin. Heathcote singled to center. Baird popped to Rawlings. Cruise walked and, when Hornsby forced Cruise at second, the stage was set for the double steal. Two were out. Hornsby went down and drew the throw. Herzog getting the ball.

Heathcote did not make the break from third for home at once. Hornsby held up before he reached the waiting Herzog. Then the fleet Heathcote sprinted for the plate and "Buck" hesitated, in returning the ball to Wilson, just long enough to make it bad for the completion of the play. The throw was into the dirt at Wilson's feet and Heathcote scored.

Paulette Scores Hornsby.

Hornsby, of course, reached second in safety, and scored on Paulette's clean single to right, though Paulette was out for being too ambitious, being cut off trying to make second. Wickland to Wilson to Rawlings.

A pass to Smyth, Gonzales' double and Heathcote's sacrifice fly gave the Cards their third run, in the fifth. Hornsby crashed a hot drive in front of right-fielder Wickland, in the sixth. The ball refused to take a regulation, self-respecting bounce, or "did not come up," to use the language of the player, and skipped by Wickland to the right field bleacher wall for a home run.

Ancient Mr. Wallace Stars.

The fielding of Hornsby was brilliant, despite his one error. Gonzales' catching was spectacular, once more demonstrating that he is one of the best, if not the best back stop in the league, or any other.

A jumping up catch by old Bobby Wallace, of Wickland's liner was the one big thriller of the afternoon.

CLEVELAND BUYS JOHNSTO

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—The purchase of First Baseman Wheeler, ("Doc") Johnston, from the Milwaukee American Association baseball club, was announced today by the Cleveland club of the American League. The terms were not made public. He will report tomorrow.

Johnston leads the American Association batsmen. He played on the local team for three seasons previous to 1914, when he was with the Pittsburg Nationals, from which team he was purchased by Birmingham of the Southern Association. Milwaukee obtained Johnston from the Birmingham club.

College Sports Too Costly; May Be Dropped Out

Question of Reviving Football Causing Serious Discussion in Many Institutions.

NEW YORK, June 15.—College sports managers are in a doubtful frame of mind regarding the making of a football schedule for next year. The new military courses, which are being increased on occasions, will make it difficult for students to indulge in practice for sport except in rare instances and the time has been much limited this year. Under the circumstances some good teams have been got together and have made creditable showings, but college sports cost money, which has not been forthcoming.

At some colleges the important games have been fairly well attended, but at others the gate money would not pay for half a dozen balls. Subscriptions for payment of expenses have been called for in several institutions, but the response has not been satisfactory, which might have been expected with the demands for money for war relief, which are constant. If the sale of tickets will not pay for college sports, even with the rigid economy now in force, they had better be abandoned until after the war.

It is evident that the students care little to watch contests on ordinary days, and the alumni are no more enthusiastic in their attendance.

NEVER HOLD FOE CHEAP, CHAMPION OUIMET SAYS

BOSTON, Mass., June 15.—According to Francis Ouimet, it's a good idea to plan one's game before starting a match. The advice is that the golfer should figure out each hole and each nine, and at the same time try to forget the matches won in the past, likewise the holes.

He suggests going out and playing each hole as if it were a separate unit, and also playing each stroke as if it were a thing apart from any shot that had been played before. A further caution is, not to become overconfident, and never hold the opponent too cheaply.

BRITISHERS STAGE GOLF MEET TO BOOST FUNDS

NEW YORK, June 15.—A golf committee has been forme from the membership of the British Schools and Universities Club, which proposes to hold its first tournament at the Richmond County Country Club on June 18. This tournament has been arranged to further the "get together policy" of the club and to help deserving charities. Any surplus over expenses will be given to the American Red Cross and the British and Canadian Patriotic Fund. Conditions call for an eighteen hole medal play handicap, and the member making the lowest gross score will become the club champion for the year.

"Edgerton Sabre" Won by Oliphant, Now Graduating

West Point Loses Great Athlete and Army Gains a Fine Type of Soldier.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Elmer Oliphant, the West Point athlete, will don the army blue within a short time, whereat Annapolis will give a sigh of relief, while the nation may enjoy all the satisfaction that comes from the knowledge of a stanch fighting man added to the ranks.

Oliphant's career at West Point was not characterized by great scholastic brilliancy, but he was very military in all his reactions, and the Academy authorities have no idea that he will not develop into an officer of the approved West Point sort. He will be the only cadet ever graduated from West Point with the honors of having won the Army "A" in four different branches of sport—football, baseball, basketball, and a fourth letter for establishing track record in competition.

In addition, he participated with success in several minor sports, notably hockey. It was as a football player, however, that Oliphant established his greatest record.

Scored 319 Points for Army.

In the course of four years at the Academy he scored 319 points for the cadet elevens.

In 1915 he made both touchdowns and kicked the resultant goals which defeated the Navy by a score of 14 to 0, and the following autumn he made one touchdown and kicked one goal from placement, thus totalling nine of the fifteen points by which the soldiers defeated the Middies 15 to 7.

In 1916 he was second scorer among the Eastern college players, and last fall held third place at the close of the season. When Oliphant enters the army, he will be the wearer of the "Edgerton Sabre," awarded each year to the outgoing football captain. This is one of the most valued trophies that West Point has to give.

BASEBALL TO BE PLAYED AT COLLEGES IN EAST DURING SEASON OF 1919

PRINCETON, N. J., June 15.— It is believed that intercollegiate baseball, at least, will be played when the season of 1919 comes around. The game at Nassau has fitted in with the R. O. T. C. and naval unit work, and when the pressure of events has been so great as to prevent practice the nine, curiously enough, has played its best game, as for instance the last Harvard contest. The Tigers had had but one day of practice in the week preceding this contest, and yet they went into the game and batted and fielded as they never had before.

There is the suspicion, thus, that university athletic coaches have been carrying their practice idea too far, and that day after day of grinding routine tends merely to deprive men of that fine edge which otherwise they would have. At all events, the authorities at Princeton have nothing but fine words for the conduct of the baseball season, and at Yale they are so proud of their team that they don't know what to do.

At both universities baseball paid for itself, and there may be a few dollars left over. So far as may be gathered, the question of either Yale or Princeton playing intercollegiate ball depends upon the players themselves, upon the material, upon their willingness to carry on college work and play ball into the bargain.

MRS. YEAGER AND MISS GOULD WIN IN DOUBLES FINAL

Misses Henske and Stricker Beaten for Central States Title, 6—1, 6—3.

SINGLES SET FOR MONDAY

Winning Doubles Partners Will Be Opponents in Individual Championship.

Miss Corinne Gould of St. Louis and Mrs. Adelaide Yeager of Kansas City, paired as partners in the Central States women's tennis championships, easily won the final round and the doubles title yesterday afternoon at the Triple A courts, 6—1 and 6—3, from Misses Angela Henske and Miss Olinda Stricker, municipal champions of this city.

Misses Henske and Stricker, displaying much less science and force than their opponents, seemed outclassed at practically all stages of the contest. In the first set they won only one game, the fourth; and in the second set they took three games, two of them being won by Miss Stricker on good service.

The point scores follow:

FIRST SET.
Mises Gould and Mrs. Yeager—
6 5 4 2 4 4 5—29—6
Misses Henske and Stricker—
4 3 2 4 1 1 3—18—1

SECOND SET.
Miss Gould and Mrs. Yeager—
5 4 4 5 4 3 2 4 5—36—6
Misses Henske and Stricker—
3 6 2 3 2 5 4 1 3—29—3

Winners Not Extended.

At no time during the contest did the victors appear to be extended. Though Miss Gould and Mrs. Yeager throughout played a severer game and pounded their opponents both on returns and service with hard drives, they never gave the impression of "pressing" their efforts.

The slight Miss Gould as usual was very accurate and reliable, placing carefully. If she displayed somewhat less vim than her more rugged partner, she had fewer "outs" and "nets." On the other hand Mrs. Yeager played a fine net game and her smashes counted more points than Miss Gould's and more frequently broke up the defense of Misses Henske and Stricker.

Municipal Stars Outclassed.

The municipal champions showed very little free swinging and played a "push" game that lacked punch. Miss Stricker's backhand needs developing and her foes speedily found out the weakness, playing it strongly throughout the match. Miss Henske played a good net game, but as a whole the municipal champions of 1917 were outclassed—and this by a team that had never player together before this week.

About 50 persons were interested enough to witness the final contest which was played on an ideal court in weather a trifle too warm to suit the contestants.

Miss Gould vs. Mrs. Yeager.

The most attractive match of the entire week of playing will be witnessed beginning at 4 p. m. tomorrow afternoon when the victorious partners in yesterday's doubles final will meet as opponents for the Central States singles laurels. Because of her greater experience and more rugged strength Mrs. Yeager is favored by most of the experts who have witnessed her play. Mrs. Yeager is the present Missouri State champion, although Miss Gould won that tournament last year when it was conducted as a nontitle bearing "patriotic" event.

Miss Gould is very slight but she is active, cool and dependable. Mrs. Yeager's superior net work is likely to be the factor that overthrows the St. Louis girl, if fortune goes against her.

TRIPLE NET TOURNEY MATCHES START TODAY

Pairings for the annual Triple A Tennis championship were completed last night, and the first round will be begun today. Teh round must be completed by Sunday night.

None of the potential winners has been matched with a dangerous opponent, so that the best man will survive at least one round. Fifty-four entrants will compete.

Ted Drewes, considered the leading player of the city at this time, meets McMahon; Roland Hoerr, former city, State and Central States champion, opposes Cunningham. Drummond Jones and Kupferle, Billy Connett and C. Bernet, Fred Jostles and Manton, Gautier and Valier and Obear and Hess are some of the best of the pairings.

ENGLAND ASKS EQUIPMENT FOR 2000 BALL PLAYERS

NEW YORK, June 15.—England wants to buy baseball uniforms and equipment for 2000 aspiring ballplayers. From time to time it was understood that our national game was obtaining a foothold on the tight little isle, but none of us was prepared for this overwhelming evidence of the same. The American soldiers training there, however, have brought about the change.

There are many things about baseball which will puzzle the British, but in time they will solve its mysteries. For one thing, they will have to give up their tea-drinking habits during play.

The Phony Kaiser.

The Kaiser had a trophy that he said was solid gold;
But when converted into scrap, for forty bucks it sold.
The cup was sold at auction for the Red Cross over here
And found to be but pewter with a coating of veneer.

CHORUS.
It was the Kaiser! It was the Kaiser!
The man who in contempt the world will hold;
This kingly looter gave cups of pewter
And tried to palm them off for solid gold.

The Kaiser had an army of a million fighting Huns;
Upon the Red Cross hospitals he made them train their guns.
And when Red Cross nurses and the wounded had been slain,
He gave them all an iron cross and marched them back again.

CHORUS.
It was the Kaiser! It was the Kaiser!
The bravest man the country ever knew.
By other nations for generations
The Kaiser and his gang will be taboo.

Cornell Athlete Wins 800 Event in Italian Meet

Other Americans Score in "International Military Games" in Rome.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Private letters from Italy make mention of a recent track meet held in Rome, at which some former prominent athletes figured, in what, at war-time, was a series of remarkable performances. The games, which were designated as an international military track meet, attracted a number of entries from American college athletes attached to the American aviation camp.

The latter entrants did not, however, find the winning of points or places an easy affair for several competitors other than the Americans proved to be exceptionally fast in the various track events.

Lieut. L. V. Windnagle, the former Cornell half miler and championship holder of 1916, won the 800 meter run after a hard struggle against Lieut. Lunghi, who formerly ran for the New York Irish-American A. C. and was holder of the American and Canadian half mile record. Lunghi, who is past thirty, was in splendid physical condition and forced Windnagle to travel at top speed to win.

The third runner to finish was an Englishman named Hays who had never figured in running races previous to the war. Although in service for three years, during which time he had been gassed, shot through the leg and had his knee dislocated, he was but a few spaces in the rear of Windnagle and Lunghi which is another indication of the physical condition of the men who are playing a part in the European war.

What may be expected of some of these men in international athletics after the present conflict is over can be foreseen in the sprinting of Crocci, an Italian, who won the hundred meter race from an extremely fast field in 10 4-5 seconds. Allowing for possible faulty timing, his performances was a most remarkable one in war time, when the opportunity for special athletic training is lost in the greater duties which fall to the lot of soldiers.

MUNICIPAL QUOIT GAINS.

Municipal "horseshoe" or quoit pitchers will enter the fifth round, Sunday morning, at the Fairgrounds Court. Games start at 10 a. m. sharp. The first five teams are closely bunched. The schedule follows:

Fairgrounds vs. O'Fallons; Libertys vs. North Ends; Ringers vs. Missouri; St. Louis vs. Baden; Central vs. Frisco.

Miss Minneapolis Again to Try for Motor Boat Title

Defeat Last Year by Miss Detroit Charged to Belated Change of Motors.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 15.—"Miss Minneapolis," the fastest boat in the world until last September, when she was defeated by her twin, "Miss Detroit II," left here by express today for Algonac, Mich., to be "tuned up," preliminary to the reenactment of the world championship race to be staged in July at Moline, Ill., on the Mississippi River.

It is easy to get "even money" from the backers of either of these world champions on the outcome of the Moline race.

Both of these boats were designed and built by Chris C. Smith, the Algonac builder. They are almost counterparts, are each powered with an identical 8-cylinder Sterling racing engine.

In 1916 "Miss Minneapolis," owned by a syndicate of Minneapolis sportsmen, won all the big races and at Detroit set up a speed record of 63.63 miles per hour. During the 1917 race for the championship, however, the Miss Minneapolis engine broke down and another motor had to be hurriedly reinstated. This, say her backers, cost her the championship, for there remained insufficient time to "tune up" the motor.

In the Minneapolis races last year "Miss Detroit II," while winning away the title held by "Miss Minneapolis," did not equal the speed made by "Miss Minneapolis" at Detroit the year previous. The fastest downstream mile of "Miss Detroit II" at Minneapolis was at the rate of 62.59 miles an hour, whereas "Miss Minneapolis" had made an official record for a downstream mile at the rate of 63.63 miles an hour.

BURNS TAKES LEAD OVER SISLER; RUTH DROPS IN BATTING

First Baseman Sold to Mack by Detroit Is Whaling the Ball at .359 Rate.

McHENRY LEADS IN HOMERS

Cards' Newest Purchase Is Also Hitting .331 Against Association Pitchers.

"Babe' Ruth, the Boston pitcher, whose hitting was the sensation of the American League, and resulted in his playing in the outfield so as to add hitting strength to the Red Sox, ran into a slump in the last week. He has dropped to sixth place among the batters who have played in 25 or more games, according to unofficial averages today, and which include games of Wednesday. Burns of Philadelphia has batted his way into the lead with a mark of .359. Ty Cobb of Detroit is batting .292, while his base stealing mark is an even dozen.

Harry Hooper, newly appointed captain of the Boston club, has jumped into the lead as the leading run-getter. He has counted 37 times. Ruth's mark of seven home runs remains high. Shean of Boston has broken the tie for sacrifice hit honors, held with his team mate, McInnis, last week. He leads with 18. Sisler of St. Louis continued to set the pace among the base stealers with 23. New York, with .271, leads in team batting. Leading batters for 25 or more games:

Burns, Philadelphia, .359; Sisler, St. Louis, .355; Walker, Philadelphia, .349; Baker, New York, .346; Hooper, Boston, .337; Ruth, Boston, .323; E. Collins, Chicago, .317; Speaker, Cleveland, .313; McMullin, Chicago, .312; Gilhooley, New York, .302.

Merkle Heads National.

In the National League, Fred Merkle of Chicago continued his slugging and added another point to his average. He now is batting .377, which is 13 points better than J. C. Smith of Boston. Doyle's mark, however, .426, made in 15 games, still remains high; the New Yorker continues out of the game on account of an operation.

Max Carey of Pittsburg has been dethroned by George Burns of New York, as leader of the base stealers. The New York outfielder has pilfered 22 to Carey's 21. Cruise of St. Louis chalked up two more circuit drives for himself and pulled away from Wickland of Boston for home-run honors. Cruise has made five homers. Benny Kauff of New York, who soon will be a member of the National Army, is leading scorer of the league, having registered 33 times. Chicago, with a mark of .281, leads in club batting. Leading batters for 20 or more games are:

Merkle, Chicago, .377; J. C. Smith, Boston, .364; Mann, Chicago, .345; Daubert, Brooklyn, .336; Wickland, Boston, .333; Kauff, New York, .326; Paskert, Chicago, .323; Hollocher, Chicago, .322; Groh, Cincinnati, .318; Paulette, St. Louis, .314.

McHenry Hitting Well.

Johnston of Milwaukee continued to lead the American Association batters with .378. Wagner of Columbus, who was pushing him, has dropped to twelfth place, while Lelivelt of Louisville, who was in fifth position, has moved to second.

McHenry of Milwaukee, signed by the Cardinals recently, retains the lead among the home-run getters with five. Riggert of St. Paul has broken the tie for stolen bases and has a mark of 13 thefts. Taggart of Columbus broke the triple tie for sacrifice honors, and is out in front with 14. Bescher of Louisville is the leading run getter with 29. Kansas City, with a mark of .268, leads in club batting. Leading batters who have played in 20 or more games:

Johnston, Milwaukee, .378; Lelivelt, Louisville, .350; Good, Kansas City, .346; Lajoie, Indianapolis, .339; Kores, Louisville, .333; McHenry, Milwaukee, .331; Riggert, St. Paul, .325; Huhn, Milwaukee, .319; Bronkie, Indianapolis, .312; Cochrane, Kansas City, .312.

NEW TENNIS LUMINARY IS HOLDING FORTH IN EAST

NEW YORK, June 15.—Lawn tennis officials are taking account of the game as it is played by William T. Tilden II, the star from Pennsylvania, who has made so brave a start toward capturing honors in New York. For spread eagle style Tilden surpasses any competitor now in action in the local tournaments. He plays the California type of game. Overhead he is relatively the most formidable player in this section of the country. When he is compelled to dig the ball off the ground he is by no means so dangerous.

PUBLIC MEETING ON GARBAGE BILL IS REQUESTED

West End Business Men's Association Says Passage of Measure as Drafted Would Be Unsatisfactory Solution of Problem.

WANT ALL CIVIC BODIES TO ATTEND

Society Contends That Instead of Paying 87 Cents a Ton City Should Receive 50 Cents a Ton for Refuse.

The West End Business Men's Association has written President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen requesting that a public hearing be held on the proposed garbage bill so that the association and all other civic organizations may have an opportunity to oppose the bill.

It is admitted, the letter states, that the passage of the measure would settle the garbage problem "in an unsatisfactory and extremely unprofitable manner." The text of the letter follows:

"The West End Business Men's Association appreciates the deferring of action on the garbage bill, and now requests that a public hearing may be given us and all other civic bodies which are opposing the bill in its present form.

Want Pay for Garbage.

"It is admitted by all of you and by all of the Board of Public Service that the bill would settle the garbage problem in an unsatisfactory and extremely unprofitable manner; that it means the city will pay at least 87 cents per ton to the garbage contractor in addition to giving him the garbage, where, following the example of New York and other cities, St. Louis should be paid for its garbage as much as 50 cents per ton; that although garbage in these war conditions has everywhere else a cash value, in St. Louis we will still be giving it away and paying the contractor to take it; that this injustice is caused by the clause in the bill which eliminates all but one bidder.

"The board has nevertheless favored the bill, believing that the evil in the bill is unavoidable and that there is and can be only the one bidder to deal with. There is, in truth, only one bidder who can dispose of garbage 'by the reduction method'(these are the words in the bill which tie the city hand and foot). But there are plenty of other bidders who can dispose of the garbage once you remove the restriction upon the method.

"We suggest that the city is interested only in the actual disposal and absolute removal of the garbage. Let the contractor agree to take all the city's garbage, remove it all promptly several miles from the city limits and give $50,000 bond, all as now required by the bill, and your concern is at an end. What the contractor does with the garbage is immaterial. It is wholly unnecessary and in this case altogether improper to restrict him to the 'reduction method' where that will rule out all but one bidder.

For Feeding of Hogs.

"If, however, the city is concerned in any way as to what ultimately becomes of its garbage, for patriotic reasons it might be suggested that at this time it should be devoted to the feeding of hogs. The 45,000 tons of garbage yearly will help in large measure in the solution of food problems, and we are told that food will win the war.

"There are responsible St. Louis citizens begging to bid against the exhorbitant offers of the Indiana Reduction Co. They will give the same $50,000 bond and will guarantee absolute removal of all garbage. They are excluded by those words of the joker: 'By the reduction method.'

"There is, too, a chemical process which would bring better bids, but which is excluded by that vicious joker.

"Full proof of our statements is hereby offered your honorable board, and we ask the opportunity to present it.

"For that reason we respectfully ask that before proceeding further you give us a public hearing."

Mrs. Alfred Buschman, chairman of the Boys' and Girls' War Canning Clubs of the food administration, has obtained the consent of the Board of Education to use the domestic science rooms of the following schools during the summer for the clubs: Bates, Blair, Bryan Hill, Cote Brilliante, Yeatman High, Madison, Mullanphy, Shepard, Cleveland High, Emerson, Marquette and Eads.

The boys and girls in each unit will spend one day every week canning and drying fruits and vegetables, and an exhibition and pageant will be given on Municipal Play Day at Forest Park. The best team of three children in a competitive demonstration of all the children of the city will be given a trip to Springfield, Mo., in October, and the three State winners will be sent to Washington in January.

NATIONAL REALTY BOARDS TO MEET HERE TOMORROW

Advance Guard of Delegates, to Come From Every Quarter of U. S. and Canada, Will Arrive Today.

THREE LUNCHEONS PRECEDE SESSIONS

"Patriotic Night" to Feature First Day of Gathering—Auto Tour of City and County on Tuesday.

By Berry Moore.

The eleventh annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will be inaugurated tomorrow at 2 p. m., at the American Theater, Seventh and Market streets, and will hold supremacy as a local event for four days. James M. Franciscus, chairman of the Executive Committee, estimates that more than 2000 will be in attendance, including delegates from all parts of the United States and from Canada.

The conventioners, the advance guards of whom will arrive today, will be met at Union Station by committees of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and escorted to their respective hotels. There has been erected in the midway of Union Station a "welcoming booth," beautifully decorated, and it will be in charge of a Reception Committee headed by Martin L. Newberry, vice president of the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co.

The American Theater will be headquarters of the convention, while the registration headquarters will be at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, in the Wainwright Building, Seventh and Chestnut streets, with Charles C. Kunz of Franciscus & Kunz in charge.

$5 Fee From Delegates.

Every delegate attending the convention will be required to pay a registration fee of $5, which will entitle him or her to attend every session, as well as all the entertainment features, which will include "Patriotic Night," at the American Theater Monday night, an automobile tour through the city and the county Tuesday afternoon, a dinner at the Sunset Hill Country Club Tuesday evening, the Chicago silver trophy cup contest at the American Theater Wednesday night and a trip to the Anheuser-Busch Brewery, where a cold luncheon will be served Thursday afternoon.

This will be the first convention in the history of the association at which the delegates will have to pay a registration fee. Half of the amount will be turned over to the national association and the remainder to the local exchange.

St. Louis real estate agents have vied with one another in decorating their offices, and Chestnut street from Sixth to Twelfth street is in holiday attire, with national and allied colors. The exteriors of the offices in many instances have been painted or cleaned, while the interiors have been redecorated and appointed.

Luncheons to Guests.

Preceding the launching of the big convention, William A. Giraldin, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, and General Chairman Franciscus will entertain the Board of Managers and the Executive Committee of the National Association at a luncheon at the Planters Hotel. As secretary of the local exchange, Joseph M. O'Reilly will entertain the visiting secretaries with a luncheon at the American Hotel Annex. A rose luncheon will also be given coincidentally by the Ladies' Committee, of which Thomas M. Grace is chairman, to wives and the delegates and other women attending the convention, each of whom will be given a handsome souvenir with the compliments of the Convention Committee.

The convention will be called to order by William M. Garland of Los Angeles, Cal., president. The invocation will be delivered by Archbishop John J. Glennon. Addresses of welcome will be delivered by Gov. Fred D. Gardner, for the State of Missouri; Henry W. Kiel for the City of St. Louis, and President W. A. Giraldin on behalf of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange. The response will be by President Garland, after which he will make his annual report. This will be followed by the reports of the national vice presidents, board of managers and other officers.

"Patriotic Night" will begin at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the entire audience, led by Songmaster John Adams. Short patriotic addresses will be made by former Judge Thomas L. Anderson and L. L. Leonard, chairman of the Four-Minute Men of Missouri. Fifteen minutes will be devoted to pictures from the old "family album."

All of Thursday morning will be devoted to business sessions. At 11:30 a. m. John C. Van Riper, president of the American Trust Co., St. Louis, will speak on "Some of our war problems."

Tour and Supper Tuesday.

At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon delegates will be taken on an automobile tour of St. Louis and St. Louis County, terminating at the Sunset Hill Country Club, where dinner will be served. The club has been turned over to the realtors and the evening will be spent with dancing and other features.

At 12:30 p. m. Wednesday women delegates will be taken in automobiles to the Bellerive Country Club for luncheon, after which they will be taken for a tour through the county, visiting all points of interest. A feature of Wednesday's program will be the address by Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois.

Wednesday night, starting at 3 o'clock, the five-minute talk contest for the Chicago Real Estate Board silver trophy cup will take place at the American Theater. The cup will be awarded to the board making the best five-minute talk on what these boards have done for their respective cities. The judges will be Prof. Isaac Lippincott of Washington University, the Rev. Robert S. Johnston S. J., St. Louis University, and George W. Luebke Jr., an attorney.

Thursday's business session will open with a conference on "How We Can Patriotically Better Real Estate Conditions." The conference will be led by M. J. Upham of Duluth, Charles C. Rogers, Chief Field Officer of the United States Internal Revenue Service, St. Louis, will speak on "The Income Tax."

The convention will adjourn following a trip through the Anheuser-Busch Brewery.

VISITING REALTORS TO STUDY ST. LOUIS SUBDIVISION ART

Hi-Pointe on Itinerary of Auto Tour of City and County Tuesday Afternoon.

Subdivision development as it has been carried to perfection in St. Louis, will be one of the matters of interest brought to the attention of delegates and visitors to the National Convention of realtors here this week. The example will be found in Hi-Pointe.

Tuesday afternoon the real estate fraternity, local and guests, will devote to sight-seeing in autos, the itinerary of the tour including Hi-Pointe, a 50-acre tract lying on the west side of Skinker road and extending south to Clayton road. Laid out along lines mapped by Henry Wright, landscape architect, with sweeping curves, parks and other unusual features, the work of improvement has been pushed by the Broadway Savings Trust Company, through its real estate officer, Charles De-Largy, until the subdivision is in splendid shape for inspection by men and women who can speak with authority as to its natural and artificial qualities.

PERTINENT SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED BY REALTY CONVENTION LEADERS

Colonization and Railway Terminals Among Subjects of Peculiar Present Interest, Pointed Out by General Chairman Franciscus.

According to James M. Franciscus, general chairman of the committees of the eleventh annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in St. Louis beginning tomorrow, will be notable for the importance of the subjects to be considered and the prominence of the men who will lead the discussion of them.

"'Colonization' will be taken up for discussion at 8:30 Tuesday morning by Ben F. Faast of Eau Claire, Wis., a leading authority on that subject," said Franciscus. "Consideration of this subject at this time will be most appropriate, while Secretary Franklin K. Lane is outlining plans to assist returning soldiers to get a piece of land. Faast's methods contemplate a 'ready-made' farm to be purchased on terms that will permit the settler, by making a small cash payment to step into a home already built, with cows, pigs, chickens and the like.

"There is a growing demand in all our larger cities," continued Franciscus, "for small acreage upon which the man of moderate means can rear his family with an acre or two of ground for garden, orchard, etc. D. C. Kimball of Salt Lake City, who has specialized in this class of development, will lead a conference on it here.

Railway Terminals Problem.

"The inadequacy of our railway terminals, which has been so pronounced by reason of the war, makes the subject of Wednesday morning's conference, 'Development of an Industrial Section,' a most practical one. It will be led by James Carey Martien, who has had exceptional experience in this class of work in Baltimore, and who doubtless will make this subject intensely interesting.

"Joseph R. Murphy, assistant manager of the real estate division of the Alien Property Custodian, will tell the convention how 130 Real Estate Boards have volunteered the service of a Government valuation service committee, to appraise any real estate without compensation on request of the Alien Property Custodian, for the duration of the war. The Alien Property Custodian in Washington is head of probably the largest trust company in the world.

"There has been so much talk throughout the country about the so-called rent profiteering in the city of Washington that the talk to be given Wednesday afternoon by Charles W. Fairfax, president of the Washington Real Estate Brokers' Association, as to the situation there, will be full of valuable information. Mr. Fairfax has been before the Senate and House committees having charge of the District of Columbia legislation, and he speaks with authority.

"Another important conference for Wednesday afternoon will be State regulation, or license of real estate brokers, which will be led by W. W. Mines of Los Angeles, who believes in such legislation, and who was active in the movement in California which resulted in the passage of the license law. The idea of this legislation is not to keep anyone from engaging in the real estate business but to protect the public by throwing a safeguard around the business, so that a purchaser will be absolutely assured of satisfactory service when dealing with a licensed broker.

"These are a few of the subjects to be discussed, and it is worth while to call attention to the fact that all of them defer to the desire to be of greater service to clients."

WRIGHT BUILDING SOLD FOR $865,000 TO ARCADE OWNERS

18-Story Structure at Eighth and Pine Streets Will Form Integral Part of Arcade Building.

IMPROVES LIGHT AND VENTILATION

Improvement Under New Arrangement Will Cover More Than Half of Olive-Pine Block.

The 16-story Arcade Building, under construction at Eighth and Olive streets, and the 18 story Wright Building at Eighth and Pine streets, will be joined and operated as one building, the Jane Holding Co., owners of the Arcade Building, announcing yesterday its purchase of the Wright Building. The consideration was about $865,000, and did not include the site. Edward Mallinkrodt of 16 Westmoreland place is the dominant stockholder of the Jane Holding Co.

The present plans of the Arcade Building called for construction from Olive to Pine streets in an L-shape created by the presence of the Wright Building. Now that the latter is to be made an integral part of the Arcade Building, there will be a shop and office building running from Olive to Pine from Eighth street toward ninth occupying more than half a block.

The lower seven floors, basement and sub-basement of the Arcade Building, together with the basement and first and second floors of the Wright Building will be occupied by shops. The other floors of both buildings will be used for offices.

There will be a two-story arcade running through the Arcade Building from Olive to Pine streets, with another arcade running in from Eighth street along the present north line of the Wright Building. The lower seven stories of shops will be served by elevators west of the Olive-Pine arcade and the upper office stories of the Wright and Arcade buildings will be served by the present Wright Building elevators with the addition of three. In this way the office portion of the buildings and the shop portions will be as two distinct units, though both will use the same entrances.

The purchase of the Wright Building was made because, through the union of the two buildings, superior lighting and ventilation for the new Arcade Building will be obtained. Two light courts will be constructed giving air and light to all offices and shops.

The Wright Building formerly was owned by the Wright Building Co., of which Guy H. Wright is president. The officers of the Jane Holding Co. are Edward Mallinckrodt, president; Daniel N. Kirby, vice president; James J. Grover, treasurer, and A. H. Stille, secretary.

The combined buildings will be under the management of Isaac T. Cook. Guy H. Wright, who has been associated with Cook in the management of the Wright Building, will devote his time wholly to the management of the Third National Bank Building.

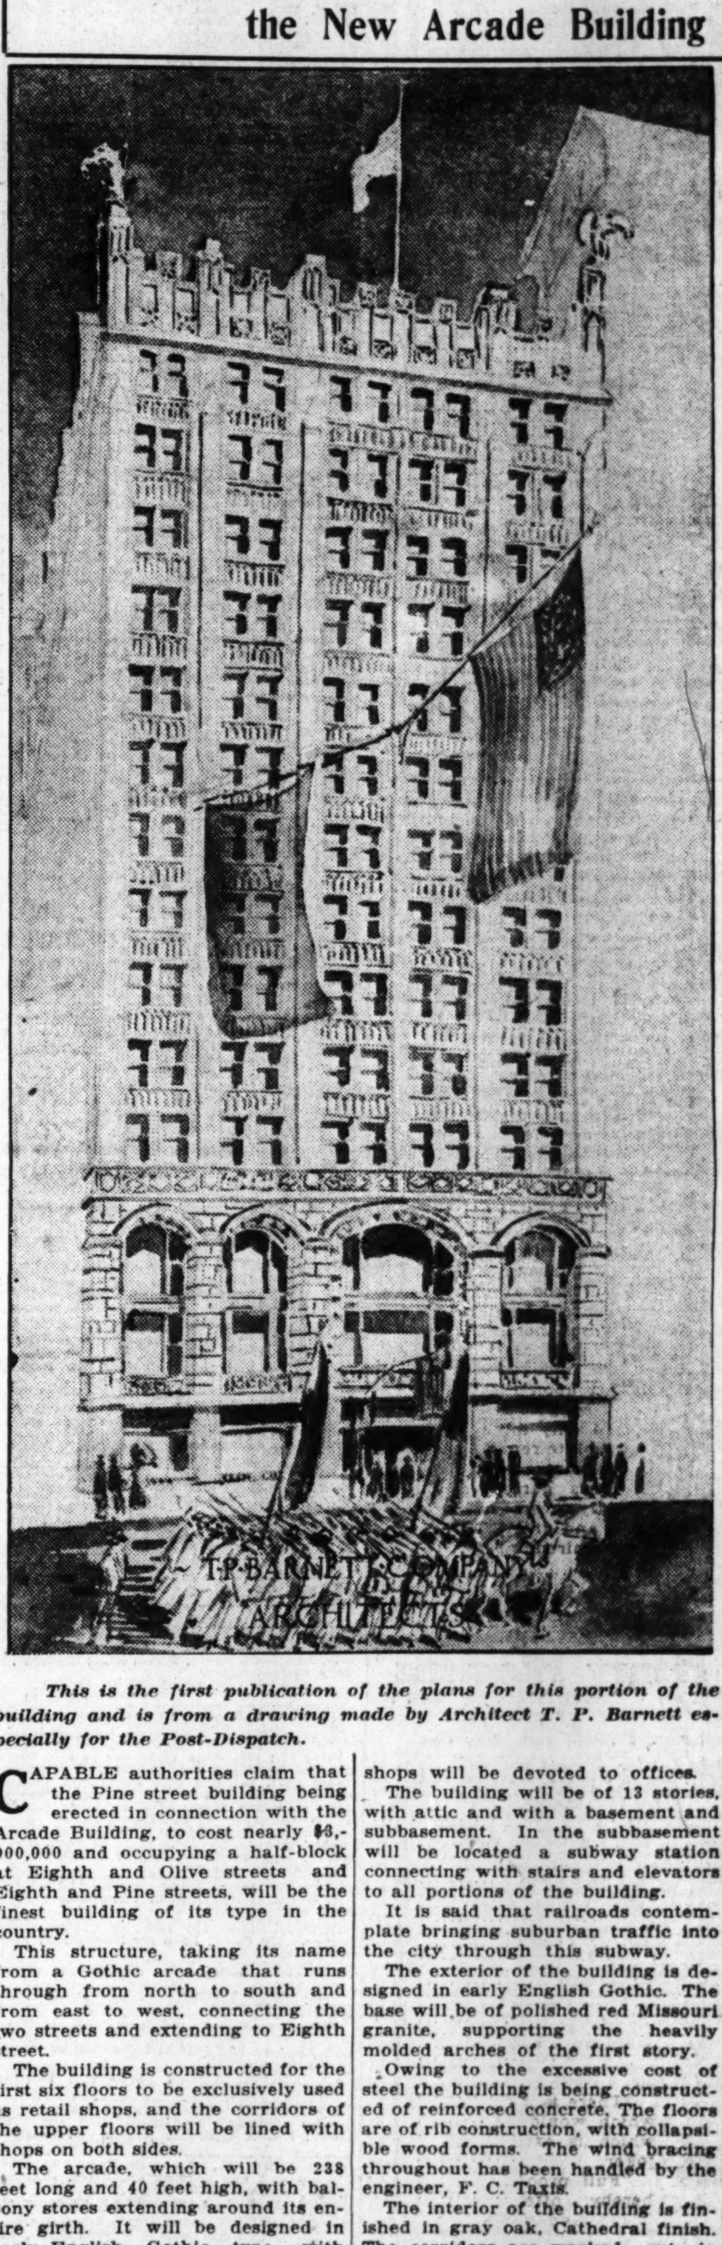
Pine Street Elevation of the New Arcade Building



This is the first publication of the plans for this portion of the building and is from a drawing made by Architect T. P. Barnett especially for the Post-Dispatch.

CAPABLE authorities claim that the Pine street building being erected in connection with the Arcade Building, to cost nearly $3,000,000 and occupying a half-block at Eighth and Olive streets and Eighth and Pine streets, will be the finest building of its type in the country.

This structure, taking its name from a Gothic arcade that runs through from north to south and from east to west, connecting the two streets and extending to Eighth street.

The building is constructed for the first six floors to be exclusively used as retail shops, and the corridors of the upper floors will be lined with shops on both sides.

The arcade, which will be 238 feet long and 40 feet high, with balcony stores extending around its entire girth. It will be designed in early English Gothic type, with vaulted and groined ceilings executed in Caen stone. The show windows of polished plate glass will be framed in marble and bronze in Gothic design. The floors above the shops will be devoted to offices.

The building will be of 13 stories, with attic and with a basement and subbasement. In the subbasement will be located a subway station connecting with stairs and elevators to all portions of the building.

It is said that railroads contemplate bringing suburban traffic into the city through this subway.

The exterior of the building is designed in early English Gothic. The base will be of polished red Missouri granite, supporting the heavily molded arches of the first story.

Owing to the excessive cost of steel the building is being constructed of reinforced concrete. The floors are of rib construction, with collapsible wood forms. The wind bracing throughout has been handled by the engineer, F. C. Taxis.

The interior of the building is finished in gray oak, Cathedral finish. The corridors are worked out in marble, plate glass and bronze.

The structure was promoted by Isaac T. Cook and is being erected under the supervision of the T. P. Barnett Co., architects.

LIBERTY PLACE AGENT REPORTS TEN LOTS SOLD PAST WEEK

Lively Interest Manifested in New Residence District in North End, Near Big Factory Sites.

The John C. Greulich Realty and Investment Co. reports a very active demand for home sites in Liberty Place, at Goodfellow and Florissant avenues. About 16 lots were sold to prospective home buyers the past week, they having been attracted by the low prices and by the favorable restrictions placed on the property, which gives assurance of the subdivision being developed along permanent and substantial lines.

The subdivision is in the center of a new residence district, which is rapidly developing in the north end, adjacent to the Pullman shops, Certainteed Products Co., Bridge & Beach Stove Co., General Motors Co. and other factory sites.

During the first five months of 1918 the Post-Dispatch printed 6698 Horses and Vehicles Want Ads—1492 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

WASHINGTON AVENUE VACANCIES ARE BEING RAPIDLY ABSORBED

Lease by Wholesale Dry Goods Firm Leaves but Two Buildings in Central Section.

A lease has been closed for the seven-story and basement building, 50x50 feet, at 1206 Washington avenue, to L. Herzog & Bros. Dry Goods Co., which for 32 years has been doing a jobbing business in dry goods in this city.

This lease, through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., fills the last building available on Washington avenue between Third and Eighteenth streets, except the former Lindell store at the southwest corner of Eighth street and Washington avenue, and the building at the northwest corner of Seventh street, the Martin-Breitt company having the agency for both of these properties. There are also only one or two lofts and stores available.

The building leased by Herzog & Bros. is owned by Lindell Gordon.

REALTY MEN WILL SAVE MILLIONS TO PUBLIC ON LAND

President of National Association of Boards Tells Luncheon Audience of Expert Appraisal Benefit.

SERVICE TO U. S. IS VOLUNTARY

Purchases During and After War to Be on New Business Basis, William M. Garland Says.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards is the only national business organization that has offered its services free to the Government in war work, said William M. Garland, the president, at a luncheon given him yesterday at the Missouri Athletic Association, by the general committee that is preparing for the convention this week.

Garland is a dollar-a-year man at Washington. He is assistant manager of the real estate division of the Bureau of Housing and Transportation of the Department of Labor. He asserted that all the land to be purchased for the Government in the future will be first appraised by real estate men who are giving their services to the Government.

"While I cannot tell you the difference in some of the prices asked of the Government and those actually paid, after our appraisal, I can say that we have saved the treasury many hunrded thousand dollars, and will save millions more," he said. Three other real estate men are assisting Garland in this work.

"There will not be any more land bought, either during or after this war, by the Government that will not first be appraised by trained realty men," he continued. "The public does not realize the enormous amount of land being purchased. One of the greatest items has been for housing men employed at ship yards."

He asserted that "while there was some scandalous talk about the Hog Island ship yards, all scandal, if there was any, has been cleared up and righted long ago, and the Government now has a great plant there." He says he saw 50 ships under construction there last week.

Garland quoted President Wilson as approving conventions, as a medium of discussion for the various elements of the country, through which national coherency will be promoted.

East St. Louis Items

The members of the grand jury of the United States District Court in East St. Louis were relieved of their duties yesterday until June 25, that they might tend to the urgent needs of their harvest fields. Court adjourned until June 25. The majority of the jurors being farmers, and the scarcity of farm labor were the reasons given for the early arjournment. There were 23 grand and 24 petty jurors.

A meeting of 175 drafted men, who will depart for training camps during the five-day period beginning June 24, will be held Friday evening at the St. Clair County branch of the Illinois State Council of Defense. Speakers will deliver addresses on the legal, military and medical sides of the war, in compliance with instructions recently issued by the National Council of Defense.

A resolution eulogising Federal Judge J. Otis Humphrey, who presided at two sessions of the Federal Court at East St. Louis, and who died Friday night, at the age of 64, will be drawn up by a committee of five appointed by Judge George W. English, recently appointed Judge of the East Side Court. Members of the committee are C. B. Thomas, Referee in Bankruptcy, Silas Cook, Judge Joseph Messick of the County Court of St. Clair County, John Hamlin, Judge in Chancery, and McCawley Baird, assistant United States District Attorney.

The board of directors of the Visiting Nurses' Association of St. Clair County will meet Tuesday afternoon at the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce to discuss plans for the extension of the national "Save the Babies" campaign through Illinois.

Hearing of the motion for a new trial of William Ehrhardt, 1126 Missouri avenue, who was found guilty of violating the espionage act by a jury in the Federal Court at East St. Louis, has been continued until June 25, while his attorney investigates recent evidence. Ehrhardt [illegible] released on $2500 bond.

A RESPONSIBLE N. Y. CORPORATION WANTS DISTRIBUTORS

PROFITS $10,000 TO $30,000 YEARLY. Having expanded our facilities and being able to make prompt shipments of our product, we are now in a position to arrange a few additional contracts, in unoccupied territories, with men of ability and hustle. Our product sells to motor car owners at $215 and $270—two models. Our product is badly needed. It materially reduces the cost of hauling anything, anywhere, and is closely allied with the motor truck industry. Both the congestion of transportation and scarcity of labor contribute to stimulate sales. Our business is regarded as being in about the same position, at the present time, as was the automobile business 10 years ago. This opportunity is only for men with good general business ability, who will use that ability and who will work and hustle and who are particularly suited to act in the capacity of distributor for our product in a large territory. Distributor must appoint, supply and look after dealers and give the business his undivided attention. It is not a "side line." Distributors have practically no overhead expense. To qualify for this opportunity $4000 working cash capital is needed—if you can qualify and are in a position to take on a big proposition. Write us now. Address N. T. CO., Box 185, East Rochester, N. Y. (c)

$200 AN ACRE FROM SUGAR BEETS THIS YEAR

Yellowstone Valley Farmers Have 10,000 Acres in and Crop Is in Good Condition.

BILLINGS, Mont., June 15.—Farmers in the Yellowstone valley from Miles City to Belfrey, whose product goes to the local plant of the Great Western Sugar Co., will receive as high as $200 an acre for their yield this year. Despite the smaller acreage, there will be a heavier production than last year, both because of better weather conditions and the fact that the tillers are paying far more attention to the crop with the aim of securing a limit yield. There has been little or no trouble with pests that usually affect beet fields, and where discovered, the areas have been replanted. This, in essence, is the report of C. S. Milhiser, agriculturist for the Billings factory, submitted to the executive officials of the Great Western company, who are here on a tour of inspection of the Montana and Wyoming districts.

In the territory tributary to the Billings factory, it is estimated that there has been an area of 10,000 acres planted to beets this year. There is every indication that the yield in many fields will run from 18 to 20 tons, which under the flat rate of $10 a ton to be paid for beets this year, will give a return of from $180 to $200 per acre.

While disappointed at the decreased acreage, the officials are pleased with the condition of the crop and the efforts being made to produce a bumper yield. The sugar shortage will become pronounced before this year's crop can be transformed into sugar.

During the first five months of 1918 the Post-Dispatch printed 6279 Lost and Found Want Ads—972 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined—and more than three times as many as the nearest competitor.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

GOVERNMENT WHITEWASH.

J. J.—Take of fresh rosendale cement 3 parts and of clean, white sand, 1 part, and mix with fresh water very thoroughly. This gives a gray or granite color, dark or light, according to color of cement. If brick color is desired, add enough venetian red to the mixture to produce the color. To obtain a very light color use lime with the cement and sand. Care must be taken to have all ingredients well mixed together. In applying the wall must be wet with clean, fresh water; then follow immediately with cement wash. This prevents the bricks from absorbing the wash too rapidly and also gives the cement time to set. The wash must be well stirred during the application. The mixture is to be made as thick as can conveniently be applied with whitewash brush. * * * An excellent wash, also used for Government work, may be made in the following manner: Take ½ bu. of freshly burnt lime and slack in boiling water, covering during process to keep in steam. Strain through fine sieve and add 7 lbs. salt, previously well dissolved in warm water; 3 lbs. ground rice, boiled in a thin paste and stirred in boiling hot water; ½ lb. clean glue, that has been previously dissolved by soaking it well and then hanging it over a slow fire in a kettle, with a large one filled with water. Add 5 gal. of hot water to the mixture, stir it well and let stand 5 days covered with dirt. It should be kept in a kettle or a portable furnace when used.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

MUCH OBLIGE.—Strawberry preserves: Wash the fruit and drain thoroughly. Measure and put it into brand-new granite kettle, or into one not stained or cracked. Put in an equal amount of sugar (not equal weight), and no water. Cook moderately fast until juice jellies when cooled. Stir occasionally, and do not let fruit boil any longer than is absolutely necessary, as overboiling tends to darken. Take out a little juice and cool off every little while, so you get it just as firm as you want it. If you want to spread over bread and butter, you want less firm. Do not cook so long in that case. If you want to serve as ornamental as well as a delicious dish, cook longer, and put into glasses or bowls, so that they will fall out of bowl or glass upon plate in pretty, firm mold. When cooked in this way and served with whipped cream they are delicious. * * * Preserved, uncooked strawberries: Cap berries and allow pound granulated sugar to each pound fruit. Put sugar, any juice that may have exuded and a very little water—enough to moisten sugar—into preserving kettle and cook just long enough to dissolve sugar, then lay in berries. Bring to boil, then take from the fire and pour into shallow agate pans. Cover each pan with a pane of glass and set in hot sun every day until sirup is thick and rich. * * * Grape jelly: Put grapes over fire in large double boiler, without water. Cover closely and cook until fruit is broken to pieces. Rub through colander, then squeeze through flannel bag. Measure juice, and to each pint allow pound sugar. Put sugar in pans and set in oven to heat, but not melt. Stir from time to time to prevent scorching. Return juice to fire in porcelain-lined kettle, and bring to boil. Cook 20 minutes, add the heated sugar, boil up just once and pour jelly into glasses set in a pan of hot water. * * * To prevent mold on top of glasses: Lay lump of paraffin on top of hot jelly, letting melt and spread over it. No brandy paper and no other covering is necessary. If preferred, the paraffin can be melted and poured over after the jelly is cold. (No fully ripe fruit for jelly.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

L. A. L.—It is not expected that Class 1 will be called this year. There are 4 divisions in Class 1—A, B, C and D.

JASPER.—It is a cryptocrystalline variety of quartz distinguished by its opacity, due to presence of clay and other substances. The ancients used it for ornamental purposes, owing to the high polish it takes. Still used for rings, seals, pillars, mantels, table tops. Different varieties are reddish brown, dark green, grayish blue, brownish black.

M. M. C. H.—There is an oversupply of stories. Typewrite. Mail to editor. He should know your real name. If agreed between author and publisher, sending to different publications would not be wrong. Munsey's, the Century, Ahlantic Monthly, Bookman, Everybody's, Harper's, Scribner's, McClure's, the Deliniator and a host of other magazines publish short stories.

COLONIAL.—In replying to request "to name the principal landmarks of St. Louis still in existence and to name as many old residences as possible," I wish to say that this would take more time and research than it is possible for us to give. Offhand I will mention the following: Courthouse, Old Catholic Cathedral, Christ Church Cathedral, Bellegarde of Crisis fame near Grand av. and Bissell, Dent House, southeast cor. 4th and Cerre st., Grant's log cabin, Judge W. C. Carr house, Main and Spruce sts., Gen. W. T. Sherman house, 912 Garrison av., and the William Russell house at 90 Russell av.—Stella M. Drumm, Librarian, Missouri Historical Society.

P. W. K.—Large experience with chiggers impels Secretary C. E. Hutchings of Tower Grove Park to say: For the bitten spot that is already sore, nothing is better than a touch of chloroform. Hyposulphite of soda (the common "hypo" of the photographer) is the most generally useful substance, but should be applied as a preventive or deterrent, if possible. A strong solution should be rubbed all over the body and permitted to dry, before one goes into the grass or weeds. Or, on coming home from a place known to be infested, one can strip and apply hypo, thus killing the chiggers before they burrow in. To kill them before they have begun their painful work is infinitely better than to treat the sore spots afterwards. Out in the country, if hypo cannot be had, bacon rind can be used on the body, or even kerosene. Some skins are too tender for the use of coal oil, but the hypo is not irritating. One should carry a pound or 2 of dry hypo when he goes into the tall grass. A small handful can be thrown into a basin of water and used when needed. It is to be noted that hypo in solution, even if bottled, is not efficacious after a few weeks. For those who are willing to forego certain comforts thought essential in the city, for the sake of immunity from chigger bites and the attacks of insects in general, there are varnishes that are guaranteed to give complete protection. If tick gets himself established in the skin, he should be twisted out, carefully. If pulled out, the head is likely to remain in the skin.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Lena Niemeyer, who departed this life one year ago today. Sadly missed by her CHILDREN. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my beloved husband, dear father and son and brother, Gus Echterhoff, who departed this life June 13, 1913:

A shadow fell upon upon our lives
When death, the reaper, came
And took our father, dear,
Away from earthly care and pain.
But some time, some day, our eyes shall see
The face we love so well;
Some time our hands shall press in his
And never say farewell.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, SON, MOTHER AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Barbara Goebel, who departed this life one year ago, June 15, 1917.

In the graveyard softly sleeping
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
In her lonely, silent grave.
Peaceful be your sleep, dear mother,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name;
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
Just one year ago you left us;
How we miss you, mother dear,
And remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Edna Browne, who departed this life April 14, 1918:

Dear Edna, how we miss you
Since that day you left us all;
You are sadly missed by others,
But we miss you most of all.

In memory of John Browne, who departed one year ago June 14, 1917:

Just one year ago you left us,
How we miss you, Johnnie, dear,
And remember all your kindness,
As we drop a silent tear.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather round our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The sweet face we see no more.

More and more each day we miss you,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies in our hearts concealed.
FATHER, MOTHER AND SISTERS.

Because it took from us away
Our dear Charlie just two years yesterday.
God called him home, it was his will,
But in our hearts he lingers still;
For all of us he did his best,
May God grant him eternal rest.
Sadly missed by his mother,
MRS. KATE NEWMEN AND SISTER,
MARGARITE STOCKLE.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Lydia Schaumann, who departed this life June 6, 1917.

Just one year ago you left us.
How we miss you, mother dear,
And remember all your kindness,
As we drop a silent tear.
Sad and sudden was the call
Of our dear mother, loved by all;
We little thought that on that day
Our dear mother would be called away.
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But little know the grief within our hearts concealed.
She shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where she is laid.
Sadly missel by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

UNDERTAKERS.

Why Does a Mouse Spin?

Has just as much logic as the theory that a used car is junk. This feeling carried in the hearts of many people is a delusion as statistics prove that the average used car delivers more mileage in proportion to its cost than new ones do.

POULTRY, BIRDS and ANIMALS

FRENCH "MUTILES" ARE TURNING TO POULTRY

Disabled Soldiers Are Rehabilitating Selves by Small Flocks.

The French are good poultry raisers. They do not devote as much attention to the fancy as England, Canada or the United States, but they go in strongly for utility. They are experts in providing fowls for market, and they know how to prepare them for the table. A French statesman, who was seeking to increase the prosperity of the French peasants and working men, said once that he wanted every family in France to be able to have "one pullet a week." Now poultry is playing a considerable part in the rehabilitation of some devastated portions of our ally.

When a family is put back on its little farm, it is given a tiny shack of a house, a horse, cow, a few tools and a small flock of chickens. From this flock the family begins to make its contribution to the new family effort at once. Some of the crippled French soldiers are taking up poultry as a chief means of livelihood. There is no great industry probably which is available to so many kinds of people as the poultry industry. And in the present emergency in America the poultry business is capable of the quickest kind of response and increase. It offers the finest opportunity especially to women and children on our farms and in our villages, to take part in increasing the food supply, as well as to add materially to the family and personal income.

CRUDE OIL IS GOOD PREVENTIVE OF MITES

New Fowls Should Be Isolated Before Being Placed With Flocks.

Chicken mites, the night pest of poultry, may not always leave the fowls before daylight, as commonly supposed, but may remain in the feathers in such numbers as to make poultry possible carriers of this pest to uninfested places. This fact was brought out recently by an entomologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the course of a study of the life history and habits, of the chicken mite, undertaken to discover principles on which combative measures might be based. A report of the study, which includes much other information of interest to poultrymen, has just been published as Bulletin 553 of the Department, "The Chicken Mite: Its Life History and Habits," by H. P. Wood.

To prevent the introduction of this serious pest in mite-free flocks by means of new stock, the specialist suggests these precautions: New stock not know to be free of mites should be isolated the first few nights and allowed to roost on new roosts wrapped with pieces of folded paper. The object of using the paper is to furnish a convenient place for mites to hide. The paper should be examined and if mites are found, the fowls should be kept on these roosts five or six days, or until no more mites come off the fowls. Removing and destroying the papers and treating the roosts thoroughly with kerosene or crude oil, will prevent an infestation

Methods of combating this pest, as announced recently in Farmers' Bulletin 801, include the spraying of the roosts and living quarters with scrude petreleum or coal-tar products. One of the most effective sprays is a so-called wood preserver, consisting of anthracene oil with zinc chloride added. The cost of this spray is about $1 a gallon but twice the quantity may be obtained by reducing with equal parts of kerosene

HOW PROFITEERS WORK IN POULTRY MARKET

One Shipment in Chicago Was Sold 15 Times Without Removing an Egg.

W. F. Priebe of Chicago is head of the firm of W. F. Priebe Co. This firm deals extensively in poultry and eggs. It has 17 plants in Iowa, Missouri and Illinois, for the purchase, fattening, killing, dressing and selling of fowls. Priebe has volunteered his services to the food administration at Washington, and his services have been accepted by Hoover. He is adviser to the food administration on all questions relating to the buying, selling, storage and distribution of poultry and eggs as market commodities

Priebe is seeking to cut out speculation in these products. This sort of speculation is the worst sort of profiteering. It adds nothing to the value of the products but does add greatly to their cost. Priebe said recently: "What is required of me is truly staggering. I am expected to help the U. S. food administration to cut out all speculation in the buying and re-selling of poultry and eggs, as now carried on extensively by brokers. In Chicago there are at present large consignments of eggs in cold storage, that have been resold as many as 15 times without being moved from their present storage."

Last week I talked with a Chicago broker who told me he had just sold a certain large consignment of storage eggs the seventh time. Poultry and egg brokers do not, as a matter of course, do business for nothing and every time a consignment of storage eggs is sold on an upward market, a quarter of a cent or half a cent margin is added to the profit of the owner who consents to the sale.

Back Yard Production Results Remarkable

Four district men and 36 State leaders, all trained poultry specialists, are carrying out the Department of Agriculture's program to secure large increases in poultry and egg production this year. In addition to these workers there are 11 extension poultry club men who are encouraging more efficient poultry production among the boys and girls in their various States.

Recent reports from these poultry extension specialists indicate that normal production will be maintained in practically every section of the country this year, in which they are working, and in many localities an increase over previous years is expected. The appeal made by department specialists to city people to increase food production by utilizing their table scraps in feeding small backyard flocks of hens is meeting with marked success.

Missouri State Fair Poultry Show Plans

SEDALIA, Mo., June 15.—Never in the history of the Missouri State Fair has there ever been a more liberal offer to the breeders of standard bred poultry than is offered this year, and the patriotic and progressive breeders of the Middle West should take advantage of this opportunity by making a large entry, directors are urging. The Missouri State Fair poultry department is a regular fall poultry show, with all the features of the largest winter exhibitions. It will be held from Aug. 10-17.

T. W. Noland, director of the State Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove, is superintendent of the poultry department, and Fred Crosby will have charge of the office. For premium list and further information apply E. G. Bylander, secretary, Sedalia, Mo.

Chicks Need Plenty of Shade and Fresh Water

Provide plenty of shade and fresh water for late hatched chicks this year, is the suggestion of Ernest H. Wiegand, state poultry club leader, division of extension, Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan.

Chicks suffering from exposure to the sun during the summer do not make profitable gains from the food given them. Pull the coops out into the orchard, near the berry bushes, or out to the edge of the corn field. The corn will not suffer because the chicks are ranged there, and at the same time the chicks are protected from the sun and from the hawks. They will find many grubs and insects and will make a good healthy growth. Do not waste good feed by neglecting to supply the growing stock with shade.

HELD ON NEIGHBOR'S COMPLAINT

Henry Moehle, a wealthy farmer residing at Worden, Ill., was put in jail at Edwardsville yesterday on instructions from the Federal authorities at Springfield.

Moehle's attitude concerning the war had attracted the attention of his neighbors, and recently, wehn a flight of airplanes from Scott Feld passed over his place, he is said to have threatened to shoot at them if they reappeared. Four persons made affidavit to his threats, and the order for his arrest followed. When taken in custody, Moehle was found to be carrying $400.

Charges Man He Aided Robbed Him.

Frank Griffith was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out by William Canham, an Alton carpenter, who charged that Griffith stole all his clothing and pawned it. Canham told the police he had shared is room with Griffith, who was in need, and had paid for his meals.

NEED MORE ATTENTION OF FORCEFUL FEEDING

Farmers Should Get Rid of Their Broilers Early or Caponize Them.

That the forcing of early broilers should receive more attention in Kansas than it has in the past, is the opinion of W. A. Lippincott, professor of poultry husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural College.

Every farmer ought to dispose of his surplus male birds as early broilers or else caponize them. Early broilers bring fancy prices. In the forcing of them it should be remembered that the quickest gains are also the cheapest.

The feeding of broilers may be divided into three periods—growing, forcing and fattening. The growing period usually lasts four weeks. A regular growing ration should be fed until the chicks are well established and past the critical stage.

The length of the forcing period is variable. The ration differs from that of the first by carrying a large proportion of protein. If possible the increase in protein should be brought about by adding cottage cheese, rather than by increasing the meat scraps. Too much protein causes digestive disorders.

The fattening period is generally of eight or 12 days' duration. The time of feeding depends upon how long the chicks "stand up" to the fattening ration without losing their appetite. In case the broilers are not intended for private trade they should not be milk fed, but penned up and corn fed for a period of two or three weeks. They will then be in good shape for milk feeding at the packing house.

Higher Price Probable for Infertile Eggs

Kansas is organized against the production of fertile eggs in summer. Hundreds of roosters have been removed from the flock. Valuable breeding birds have been removed to separate pens and saved for the next year. Males, worthless from the breeding standpoint, have been sold on the market. This aids in producing better eggs, and feed is saved.

Infertile eggs are better for human food and they store better. It is a common statement that food will win the war . Production of infertile eggs is one way of producing food. Fertile eggs develop rots in the summer months, and rots are usually a total loss.

Infertile eggs do not command a higher price on the market at present but such an effort will soon be started to bring this about. In certain localities the produce dealers pay a higher price for roosters during Rooster week and thus help with the campaign.

Some farmers want to hatch longer this year than usual in order to produce more meat. The eggs remain fertile for 10 days or two weeks after the cock is removed and can be used for hatching purposes in this time.

Store Eggs Now for Use Next Winter

Preserve eggs now for use next winter. Eggs are cheap and plentiful and can be stored without waste to the consumer at this season. This prevents flooding the large markets with the product in the season when losses are unavoidable. Every consumer should store away at least 30 dozen eggs in the next month for home use. This can easily be done by the water glass method of preserving.

For 30 dozen eggs use two five-gallon crocks—capacity 15 dozen each. Boil 18 quarts of water and cool. Mix with two quarts of sodium silicate. Place the eggs as collected, fresh and clean, in the crocks previously scalded, keeping them covered to a depth of two inches with water glass solution. Place this crock in a cool, dark, well ventilated cellar, and cover it with a waxed paper to prevent the evaporation of the solution.

June Is Good Month to Begin Culling Flocks

June is a good month to begin culling the young birds. Feed is high and prices will probably be lower later on, as the cull hens will soon be placed on the market, as well as the rush of fryers.

Look the birds over carefully for disqualifications, and symptoms of low vitality. Cockerels, not promising enough to keep as breeders, should be sold now, if weighing from 1½ to 2 pounds. This will give more room for the pullets, and everyone is urged to keep all the pullets they have accommodations for.

Feed them all they can eat, keep them growing that they may begin producing eggs as early as possible.

138 Eggs From Pen of White Leghorns in May

Pen 36, S. C. White Leghorns from Missouri, won the cup for May with a record of 138 eggs in the annual egg laying contest at the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Mo. This is the highest record ever made by any pen in one month during the seven national egg laying contests. The total number of eggs laid in May was 5920 or an average of 19.7 per hen.

CORPORATIONS FILE UNDISTRIBUTED PROFITS RETURN

Must Be Detailed for Federal Levy of 10 Per Cent by Aug. 29, Unless Special Fiscal Year Is Established.

STOPS ACCUMULATION TO DODGE INCOME TAX

Income of Firms Invested in Liberty Bonds Issued After Sept. 1, '17, Exempted; C. of C. Men Prepare Data.

Information of interest to all corporations, joint stock companies and insurance companies, in regard to the Federal tax on undistributed profits, has been compiled by Scott R. DeKins, Secretary of the War Tax Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, and Ralph R. Neuhoff. Their summary of the requirements of the law, and the method in which business men should comply with it, is as follows:

"Forms have just been issued for the Federal tax of 10 per cent on undistributed profits, provided for by the act of Oct. 3, 1917. Every domestic and foreign corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company with a taxable net income which is required to file a return of net income under the Federal income tax law must also file its undistributed tax return on the new Form, No. 1112. This return must be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the return of annual net income is filed within 60 days after the expiration of six months from the close of the last taxable year. Unless the corporation has established a fiscal year for income tax, its last taxable year would end Dec. 31, 1917, so Aug. 29, 1918, is the last day for filing for all corporations except those which have established a fiscal year different from the calendar year. There is a penalty for refusing or neglecting to file a return in time and for making a false or fraudulent return.

"The tax for which report is made, is assessed at the rate of 10 per cent on the portion of the net income of the last calendar or fiscal year remaining undistributed six months after the end of such year which is not actually invested in the business, nor retained for employment in the reasonable requirements of the business, nor invested in obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 1, 1917. There is a further provision that 'If the Secretary of the Treasury ascertains and finds that any portion of such amount so retained at any time for employment in the business is not so employed or is not reasonably required in the business, a tax of 15 per cent shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid thereon.'

"When the income tax on individuals was increased last year, it was feared that some corporations might be tempted to accumulate profits in the business, although they were not needed there, because if they were declared out in dividends now the stockholders might have to pay a heavy tax on them. It is believed that the 10 per cent tax was designed to counteract this tendency by levying an extra tax on such accumulations. It will be seen that the liability to the tax depends on the disposition which the corporation has made of its profits at the expiration of six months after the close of the taxable year. For corporations which have not established a different fiscal year this period will end June 30.

"While the 10 per cent tax will be assessed according to the true financial statement of the company at the end of the six months period, it has been ruled that amounts of undistributed net income not subject to additional tax at that time because of employment in the business or investment in certain obligations, become subject to the 15 per cent additional tax if retained after investment or employment has ceased.

"The form 1112 above mentioned has a line for deduction of 'amount of excess profits tax assessed for taxable year if paid out of net income of taxable year,' and another line for 'amount of income tax assessed for taxable year if paid out of net income of taxable year (or amount of income tax paid within the year).' For all that appears it would seem that the taxpayer may pay the income and excess profits tax out of the profits of the table year or of the year when paid, according to how it keeps its books, but this is a doubtful point.

"It is plain that if the income has been disbursed as dividends it will not be 'profits remaining undistributed.' The law provides that dividends shall 'be deemed to have been made from the most recently accumulated undivided profits or surplus.' Therefore, if a corporation should attempt to distribute any of its 1917 earnings as a dividend, it will first have to distribute all of the earnings of the current year up to the date of payment of the dividend (Treasury Division 2700).

"Most business men claim to need no assistance to determine whether 'money' is used or employed in the business,' but doubtful cases will arise. For instance, the Treasury Department has stated in response to inquiry that investment of earnings of the taxable year in outstanding accounts receivable does not necessarily relieve from the tax. The department also stated that earnings of the taxable year which are invested in inventories necessary for the conduct of the corporation's business are not liable to this tax.

"The form has a line for deduction of amount 'retained for employment in the reasonable requirements of the business.' The footnote states, 'If any portion of the net income of the taxable year reported to be retained for employment in the reasonable requirements of the business shall not be so employed a tax of 15 per cent shall be collected thereon.'

"The tax does not apply to that portion of the net income invested in obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 1, 1917. The 3½ per cent Liberty Bonds were issued before Sept. 1, 1917, so investment in them will not exempt, but investment in 4's or 4¼s will relieve from the tax. Four per cent or 4¼ per cent Liberty Bonds obtained by converting previous issues will also exempt. Treasury Decision 2700 rules that "The restrictions as to the distribution of earnings of previous taxable years resulting from the presumption that all current distributions are from current earnings, do not apply to the use of earnings for investments by corporations. There is in the statutes no limitation or restriction as to the source from which may be taken earnings used for this purpose. Amounts invested in obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 1, 1917, may thus be treated as made from such earnings as the corporation may designate."

"In addition to the information mentioned above the form also calls for a supplementary statement giving further details of the disposition of the earnings."

MAN, 66, STUNG BY BEES, DIES ALMOST IMMEDIATELY

Unusual Physical Condition Probable Cause of Fatality, Physicians State.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 15.—Ten minutes after he had been stung on both wrists by bees, Clark L. Hume, 66, a resident of Santa Ana, died.

The bees' sting acted as a violent poison, physicians stated, probably because of Hume's unusual physical condition. Hume was stung by the bees when he attempted to destroy a hive close to his home.

Physicians, when told of the peculiar case, stated that there was a probability that the poison injected by the bees struck an artery and was immediately conveyed to the heart, causing the death. It was also said that the bees' sting may have acted as a violent poison because of an unusual physical condition.

The physicians said that so sudden a death from bees' sting was very unusual.

BLIND MAN WINS DIPLOMA AT UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

Benjamin Rustan Declared Never to Have Been Below Grade in Any Class.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 15.—Among the graduates of the University of Minnesota this week was Benjamin Rustan of Underwood, Minn., who is totally blind. Rustan received his diploma as a student of law. He has been blind since a small child.

Rustan was graduated from Faribault High School in 1909 and from Fargo College in 1913. During 1916 and 1917 he was president of his class in the college of law. Since he entered the university in 1915 he never was below grade in any class.

Rustan wrote all his quizzes on a typewriter. The only assistance he received in school was from his roommate, Harold W. Johnston, who read the cases aloud. Johnston and Rustan announce they will open a law office in Nashwauk, Minn.

RED CROSS DRIVE IN CHINA

Plans Afoot to Add 1,000,000 Names to Society.

SHANGHAI, June 15.—It is believed that a campaign begun by the Society for Constructive Endeavor will result in boosting the membership of the American Red Cross by 1,000,000 Chinese names. After a talk before the society by Chairman C. T. Wang explaining the general character of the work of the Red Cross, a great deal of enthusiasm was shown by the audience over the opportunity to affiliate themselves with such an organization, and a committee was immediately appointed consisting of 100, including practically all the prominent Chinese business men in Shanghai. The work of the great drive in China will be distributed among the members of this committee.

Julean Arnold, American Commercial Attache, has undertaken the task of enlisting the interest of all the American business concerns of Shanghai with a view to getting the compradores of the firms to co-operate. This new campaign will in no way interfere with the work of the existing Chinese Red Cross established in Shanghai for the relief of local districts.

FATHER'S MODEL LETTER TO HIS SOLDIER SON

Gives Advice About Worrying to Camp Funston Boy and Says "Beat Kaiser."

CAMP FUNSTON, Kan., June 15.—Here is a letter from "Dad" with a real punch in it. It's a model, declares the Y. M. C. A. secretary into whose possession it came accidentally.

"A reassuring message like that would put the right kind of fighting spirit in any American son," asserted the secretary. "I recommend that other fathers of soldier boys read it and absorb the spirit."

The secretary obtained permission from the recipient of the letter, C. J. Hoy of the supply company of the Three Hundred and Fifty-fourth Infantry, to give the letter out for publication. Extracts of the letter follows:

Your letter of May 8 at hand this morning and glad to hear from you and to learn you are well and all right. You must not think of worrying as it is no good in war or out of war, or any place else. Just make up your mind to make good, and make good without fail. One can do a world of things if he or she will just make up their minds to do so.

Have full confidence in yourself first of all and make up your mind that you are going to make good. Watch out for yourself at all times, look ahead. Keep cool-headed and watch out well and carefully and observe what is taking place and what may take place. In short, look well ahead at all times.

Do your full duty always, regardless of any one or anything. This war is going to make many a big man, men who will come home with honor and credit not only to themselves but to their country as well, and we look for you to be one of them. Now is your time. We all hope you can come home to make us a visit before you go across.

Please write often. We are having fine weather here now. The country is fine, so green and nice.

Now, I don't think the war will last long. We will clean those Germans up in short order after we get started, and I want you to be a lot of help to your country in licking them good and hard. FATHER.

The Salvation Army

Has 201 Huts in Operation Behind the Trenches on the Western Front.

And in each of these 201 War Huts there is a large restaurant or canteen, where the cooking and serving is done by the women of the Salvation Army from the United States. And when our boys cannot come into the Hut for their meals, they are delivered to them in their trenches.

In each Hut there is also a Club Room for the soldiers. Here they find the heartiest of welcomes, help when they need it and an opportunity to rest and enjoy themselves. These Huts in the battle area are always crowded with boys gathered there enjoying the music and singing, reading the magazines and newspapers provided, and writing their letters home.

Short, bright religious meetings are held in each War Hut, but the attendance is entirely voluntary—all creeds and nationalities are welcomed.

The Salvation Army Does Not Duplicate or Interfere With the Work of Any Other Organization

At the American War Huts, where the women of the Salvation Army are in charge, there have been prepared special quarters to take care of the visiting mothers, wives and other relatives of the soldiers. This service is highly appreciated by the boys.

We Need $5,000,000 to Extend Our Work Among Our Soldiers and Sailors

And We Are Asking for $200,000 in the State of Missouri.

This money will be used to erect additional War Huts for soldiers and sailors in both the United States and France, and to maintain and operate them. Not a penny will be wasted—every dollar given will be spent for needed material and labor. Our campaign for funds is backed by the State Council of Defense, all Government and War Officials.

THE RED CROSS NEEDS TRAINED NURSES

NOW that the nation has responded so generously to the Second War Fund of the American Red Cross, that organization is turning its attention to the enrollment of trained nurses for duty at the front and in the war hospitals abroad. Twenty-five thousand must be had this year, if our wounded soldiers and sailors are to receive proper care.

It has been suggested that we at home can help fill this need, by dispensing with the services of trained nurses except when absolutely necessary. Many persons who have them in their homes in far from serious illnesses could be cared for virtually as well by members of their families.

As in the drive for funds, American artists are turning their talents to a visualization of the need in the form of paintings and drawings distributed in poster form. Here is Harrison Fisher's conception of a mute appeal for the release of women in this country, needed infinitely more just now on the other side.

ARE YOU GOING IN FOR SWIMMING THIS SUMMER?

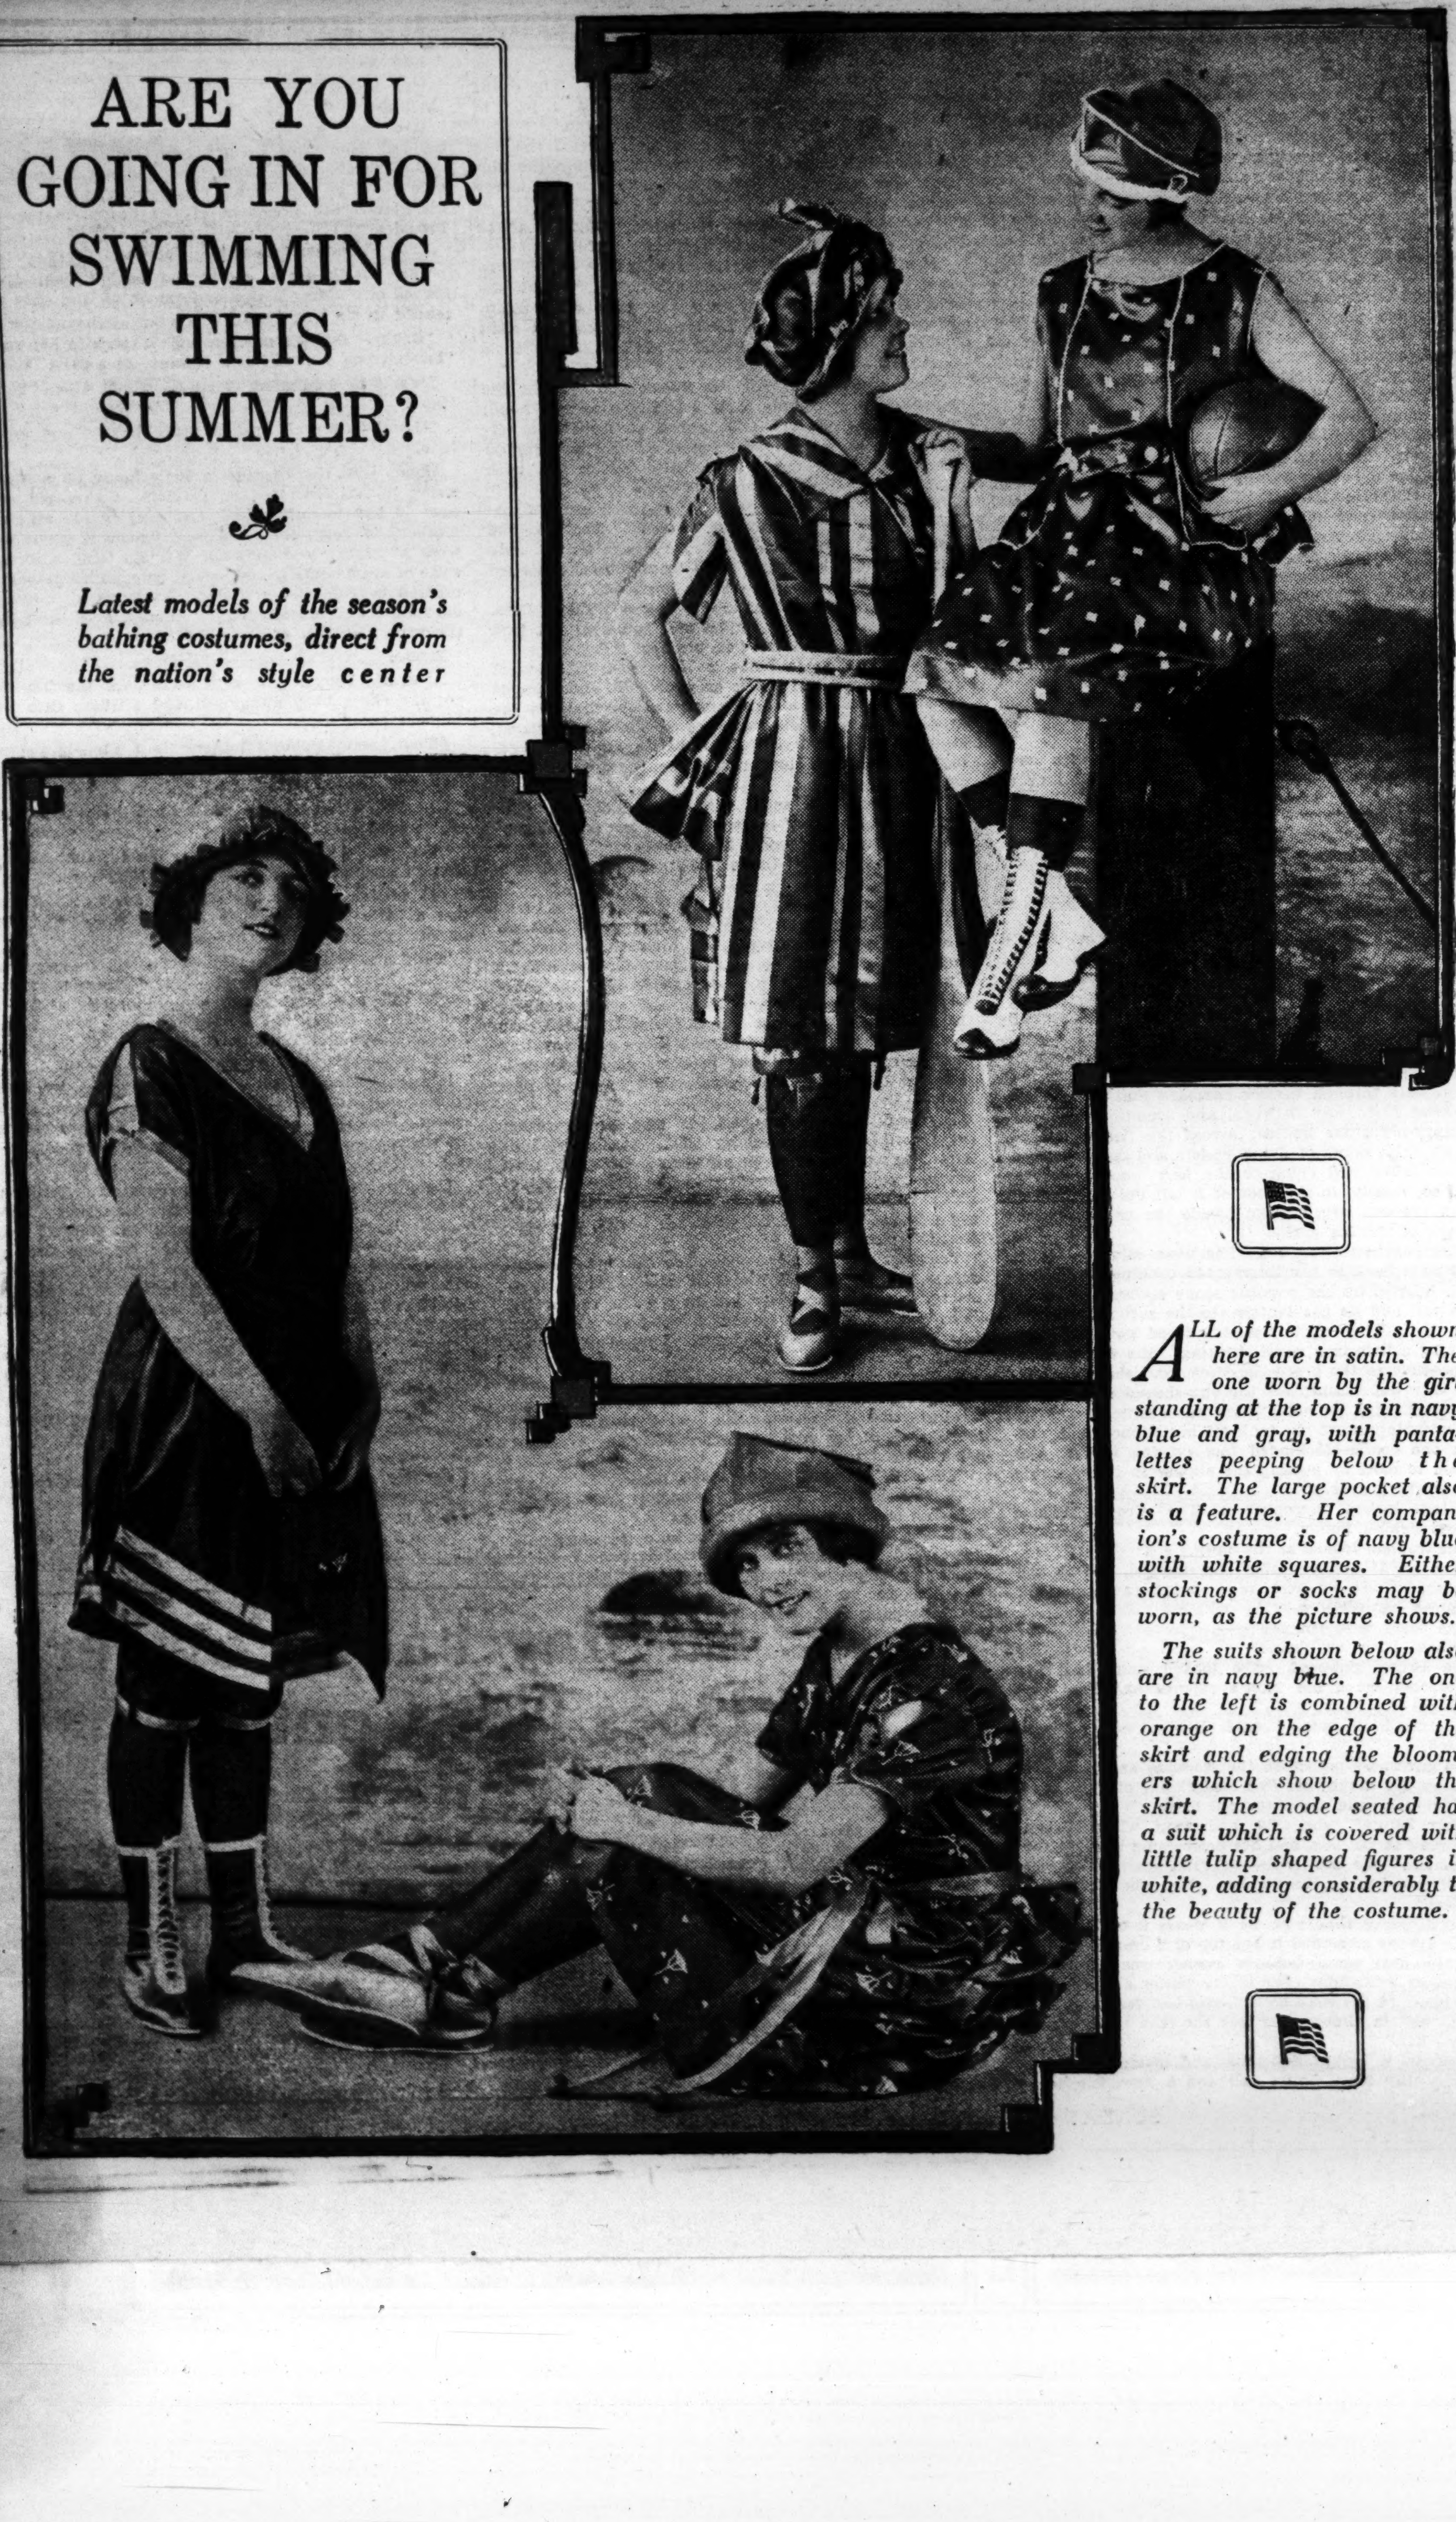
Latest models of the season's bathing costumes, direct from the nation's style center



ALL of the models shown here are in satin. The one worn by the girl standing at the top is in navy blue and gray, with pantalettes peeping below the skirt. The large pocket also is a feature. Her companion's costume is of navy blue with white squares. Either stockings or socks may be worn, as the picture shows.

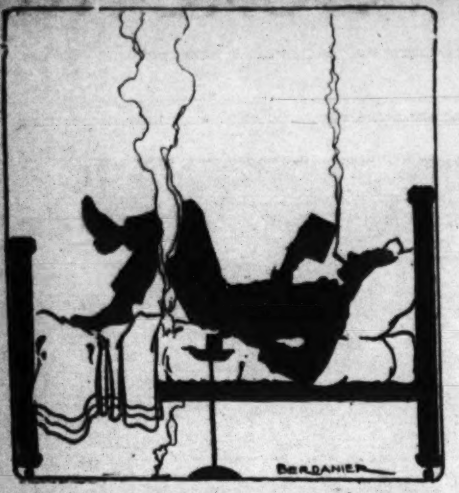
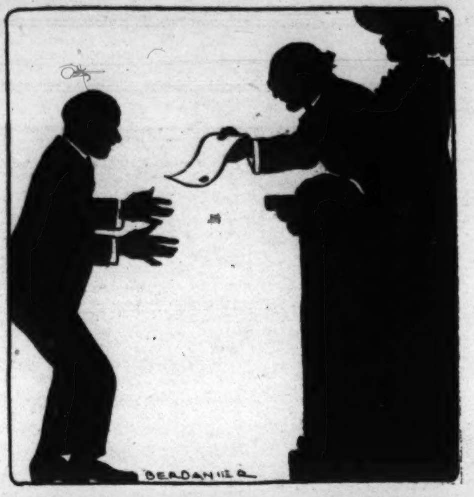
GETTING RID OF COURTS AND LAWYERS IN SETTLEMENT OF PETTY CASES



Provided himself with several packages of cigarettes, crawled into bed with his boots on and smoked away; the mattress caught fire and was totally damaged and destroyed.

Courts of Conciliation, established in Norway more than a century ago, have been adopted in some American cities in modified form with much success — Concrete examples of how persons who have rushed into litigation over a few dollars, have been brought together in a few minutes' time, saving many dollars in lawyers' fees and court costs :: :: :: ::



"That's fine; I got my reputation back."

MORE than a century ago—in 1797, to be exact—there lived a good and a wise King, one who had a real fatherly solicitude for his subjects. One day he issued a royal edict, the preamble of which read as follows:

"Inasmuch as it has come to our notice that peasants and other loyal, good and true subjects in our dominion are incited to quarrel about trifling things by dishonest lawyers, who generally get their clutches on their unsuspecting clients till they have robbed them of their property, we have, in our fatherly wisdom and for the protection of our loyal subjects, evolved a reform of the law of procedure designed to abate and check the monstrous evil."

The King was the ruler of Norway, then an absolute monarchy, and the royal edict established what was called the Court of Conciliation. This court was designed as a tribunal before which petty quarrels involving small sums of money, or the ownership of a stray dog, or the depredations of chickens in a neighbor's garden, or any of the thousand and one other things which cause ordinarily sane persons to rush into court, could be adjudicated. Here is a brief outline of how the kingly idea worked out.

Separate "districts of conciliation" were created, consisting of every city, every village containing at least 20 families, and every parish. The districts were made small so that it would be easy to attend court, personal attendance being the main feature of the proceedings.

Two members constitute the court, or commission, one of them acting as chairman or clerk. They are chosen for a term of three years, at a special election, by the voters of the district, from among three men nominated by the City or Parish Council. Only men above 25 years of age are qualified, and it is expressly stipulated in the laws that only "good" men may be placed in nomination.

The court meets at a certain place, day or hour, every week in the cities and every month in the country districts. Proceedings are strictly private and the commissioners bound to secrecy. And a most remarkable feature is that lawyers, in their professional capacity, are strictly barred.

The Court of Conciliation has jurisdiction in all civil or private cases. Appearance before the commissioners is compulsory in all such cases and the first step in a proceeding. The law court will dismiss every case of this class which does not come up from the Court of Conciliation with a certificate of the commissioners attesting that an effort at a conciliation of the parties has been duly made before them.

The mode of procedure is simple. The plaintiff states his case in writing, reciting in plain, everyday language the facts upon which he bases his complaint, and what he wants the defendant to do or refrain from doing, and requesting that the latter be cited to meet the plaintiff in the court to try to reach an agreement. The senior commissioner writes the court's summons on the complaint, citing both parties to appear at a subsequent sitting. A fee of 25 cents is charged for issuing the summons, to which is added 50 cents in the event a conciliation is effected. These comprise all the court costs. The commissioners receive no other compensation than these small fees.

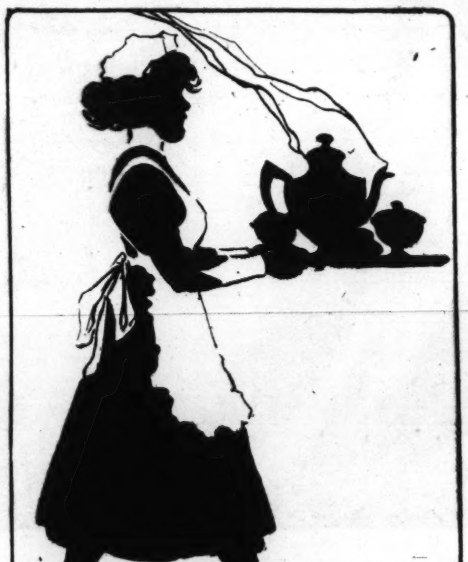
The litigants must appear in person, except in case of sickness or very pressing business engagements, when the use of a representative is allowed, providing he is not a practicing attorney. If a party fail to appear in person without a good excuse he is adjudged to pay the costs, even if he should win the case.

The Judges are selected with a particular view as to their fitness as peacemakers. Legal wrangling is discouraged. The commissioners always are ready to sacrifice the letter to the spirit of the law, when deemed advisable, and as there are no intricate formalities to becloud the issue, no array of lawyers to confuse the litigants, and no crowd on hand to gloat over the discomfiture of the loser, everything induces to an open, frank and dispassionate discussion of the points at issue.

There have been established in at least four cities of the United States a modification of Norway's Court of Conciliation, which also was made a part of the legal machinery of Denmark. In Cleveland, the evils arising out of the justice court system caused the establishment, in 1913, of the Conciliation Branch of the Municipal Court of Cleveland. All claims under $35, all cases of attachment and garnishment less than $35 and all cases of replevin are entered upon the conciliation docket.

In Minneapolis much the same system was put in effect, the Conciliation Court being made merely a branch of the existing Municipal Court. The court's summary powers of disposition are limited to claims not exceeding $50, but it may serve in a conciliatory capacity in cases involving more than $50 up to $1000. In Chicago was established the Small Claims Branch of the Municipal Court, and in New York the Conciliation and Arbitration departments of the Municipal Court, all modeled after the Norwegian system, with a view of quickly and amicably settling small claims with the least expense to the litigants and preventing a certain class of lawyers from keeping the flames of hatred alive.

Now let us see how the system works out. The best way to do this is to cite concrete examples of how small quarrels have been amicably adjusted—quarrels which, had they been allowed to grow, would have resulted in the litigants carrying their cases to higher courts, cost them possibly hundreds of dollars in lawyers' fees and finally taken from their pockets sums manyfold greater than the original trifling amount in dispute. The following cases were disposed of in the Conciliation Court of Cleveland:



Mrs. C. instructed her that in order to eliminate the noise of her squeaky shoes, she would be obliged to walk on her toes while waiting on the table.

Mrs. D. kept a boarding and lodging house; Mr. G. was one of the lodgers. Mrs. D. claimed $10 for damage to a mattress. She complained that on various occasions she had warned the young man not to smoke cigarettes while in bed, but, contrary to her warning, on the evening of Memorial day he provided himself with several packages of cigarettes, crawled into bed with his boots on and smoked away; that, just as she feared, the mattress caught fire and was totally damaged and destroyed. The defendant admitted his fault, but maintained that the landlady wanted too much money for the old mattress. Instead of calling witnesses to testify as to the value of the mattress, the Judge called the manager of a wholesale mattress concern by telephone, gave him a full and complete description of the mattress and asked for the price. The Judge was informed that the same could be had for $2.50. The young man gladly paid that amount to the woman, who immediately proceeded with a note from the Judge to the manager of the mattress concern and received a brand new mattress for $2.50.

Mrs. A. is a widow and mother of three children. Mr. B. is a grocery man. He came to court demanding an immediate garnishment of Mrs. A.'s wages on a claim for necessaries, in the sum of $19. Her wages were $7 per week. Instead of issuing such garnishment, the grocery man was persuaded to have his matter disposed of in the Conciliation Court. Both parties appeared at the appointed hour. It was subsequently disclosed that owing to sickness of one of the children, the widow ran short of money, but that she was perfectly willing to pay all that she could. An agreement was entered into between the parties whereby the grocery man was to receive $2 per month. Both parties left the courtroom quite satisfied.

Miss G., a servant, sued a Mrs. C. for a week's wages, amounting to $9. Mrs. C. had wrongfully discharged Miss G. before the week was up. She was willing to pay the servant for the actual time, but no more. The cause of the discharge, it appeared, was due to a failure on the part of the servant to follow instructions. Mrs. C. instructed her that in order to eliminate the noise of her squeaky shoes, she would be obliged to walk on her toes while waiting on the table. The servant claimed that she did her best to follow out the instructions of her mistress for several days, but that she found it impossible to continue that way on account of the swollen condition of her limbs. When Mrs. C. was told that failure to follow such instructions was not good cause for a discharge of the servant, she seemed surprised, but a few minutes' talk convinced her of her foolhardiness and she gladly paid the bill.

Here is an instance of greater importance and involving a much larger amount of money. Mr. S., a young man of 22, brought suit against Mrs. F. for $1000. Both were represented by counsel. In his statement of claim, drawn by his attorney, the young man complained that on several occasions the defendant called him a thief; that she told the neighbors that he was a thief and that he stole her money; that because of that his reputation was injured and he estimated his damage in the sum of $1000. Mrs. F. answered by a general denial. There was a veritable army of witnesses waiting to testify on the one side or the other. Both sides were waiting for stenographers. The battle array was drawn up and they were ready to fight the case to the last ditch. After some inquiry on the part of the Judge, it appeared that

"'Fifteen men on a dead man's chest—
Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum.'"

They marched up the steps and out through the opening at the top. If there were any who watched, outside the encircling growth of evergreens, they were not on the lookout for two small boys and a dog. And, as became pirates, the children made a stealthy exit.

Then began, for the Crown Prince, such a day of joy as he had never known before. Even the Land of Delight faded before this new bliss of stalking from tree to tree, of killing unsuspecting citizens who sat on rugs on the ground and ate sausages and little cakes. Here and there, where a party had moved on, they salvaged a bit of food—the heel of a loaf, one of the small country apples. Shades of the court physicians, under whose direction the Crown Prince was daily fed a carefully balanced ration!

Around them circled the gayety of the carnival, bands of students in white, with the tall peaked caps of Pierrots. Here and there was a scarlet figure, a devil with horns, who watched the crowd warily. A dog, with the tulle petticoats of a dancer tied around it and a great bow on its neck, made friends with Dick Deadeye, alias Tucker, and joined the group.

But, as dusk descended, the crowd gradually dispersed, some to supper, but some to gather in the place and in the streets around the palace. For the rumor that the King was dying would not down.

At last the senior pirate consulted a large nickel watch.

Prince Ferdinand Otto consulted his own watch, the one with the inscription: "To Ferdinand William Otto, from his grandfather, on the occasion of his taking his first communion."

"Why can't you come home to supper with me?" asked the senior pirate. "Would your folks kick up a row?"

"I beg your pardon?"

"Would your family object?"

"There is only one person who would mind," reflected the Crown Prince, aloud, "and she will be angry anyhow. I—do you think your monther will be willing?"

"Willing? Sure she will! My governess—but I'll fix her. She's a German, and they're always cranky. Anyhow, it's my birthday. I'm always allowed a guest on birthdays."

So home together, gayly chatting, went the two children, along the cobble-paved streets of the ancient town, past old churches that had been sacked and pillaged by the very ancestors of one of them, taking short cuts through narrow passages that twisted and wormed their way between, and sometimes beneath, century-old stone houses; across the flower market, where faint odors of dying violets and crushed lilies-of-the-valley still clung to the bare wooden booths; and so, finally, to the door of a tall building, where, from the concierge's room beside the entrance came a reek of stewing garlic.

The concierge was out. His niece admitted them, and went back to her interrupted cooking. The children hurried up the winding stone staircase, with its iron rail and its gas lantern, to the second floor.

In the sitting room, the sour-faced governess was darning a hole in a small stocking. She was as close as possible to the green-tile stove, and she was looking very unpleasant; for the egg-shaped darner only slipped through the hole, which was a large one. With an irritable gesture she took off her slipper, and, putting one coarse-stockinged foot on the fender, proceeded to darn by putting the slipper in the stocking and working over it.

Things looked unpropitious. The Crown Prince ducked behind Bobby.

The fraulein looked at the clock.

"You are 15 minutes late," she snapped, and bit the darning thread—not with rage, but because she had forgotten her scissors.

"I'm sorry, but, you see"——

"Whom have you there?"

The Prince cowered. She looked quite like his grandfather when his tutor's reports had been unfavorable.

"A friend of mine," said Bobby, not a whit daunted.

The governess put down the stocking and rose. In so doing, she caught her first real glimpe of Ferdinand William Otto, and she staggered back.

"Holy Saints!" she said, and went white. Then she stared at the boy, and her color came back. "For a moment," she muttered—— "But no. He is not so tall, nor has he the manner. Yes, he is much smaller!"

Which proves that, whether it wears it or not, royalty is always measured to the top of a crown.

In the next room Bobby's mother was arranging candles on a birthday cake in the center of the table. Pepy had iced the cake herself, and had forgotten one of the "b's" in "Bobby," so that the cake really read: "Boby—XII."

However, it looked delicious, and inside had been baked a tiny black china doll and a new American penny, with Abraham Lincoln's head on it. The penny was for good fortune, but the doll was a joke of Pepy's, Bobby being aggressively masculine.

Bobby, having passed the outpost, carried the rest of the situation by assault. He rushed into the dining room and kissed his mother, with one eye on the cake.

"Mother, here's company to supper! Oh, look at the cake! 'B-O-B-Y'! Mother! That's awful!"

Mrs. Thorpe looked at the cake. "Poor Pepy," she said. "Suppose she had made it 'Booby'?" Then she saw Ferdinand William Otto and went over, somewhat puzzled, with her hand out. "I am very glad Bobby brought you," she said. "He has so few little friends"——

Then she stopped, for the Prince had brought his heels together sharply, and, bending over her hand, had kissed it, exactly as he kissed his Aunt Annunciata's when he went to have tea with her. Mrs. Thorpe was fairly startled, not at the kiss, but at the grace with which the tribute was rendered.

Then she looked down, and it restored her composure to find that Ferdinand William Otto, too, had turned eyes toward the cake. He was, after all, only a hungry small boy. With quick tenderness she stooped and kissed him gravely on the forehead.

Caresses were strange to Ferdinand William Otto. His warm little heart leaped and pounded. At that moment he would have died for her!

Mr. Thorpe came home a little late. He kissed Bobby 12 times, and one to grow on. He shook hands absently with the visitor, and gave the fraulein the evening paper—an extravagance on which he insisted, although one could read the news for nothing by going to the cafe on the corner. Then he drew his wife aside.

"Look here!" he said. "Don't tell Bobby—no use exciting him, and, of course, it's not our funeral anyhow—but there's a report that the Crown Prince has been kidnaped. And that's not all. The old King is dying!"

"How terrible!"

"Worse than that. The old King gone and no Grown Prince! It may mean almost any sort of trouble. I've closed up at the park for the night." His arm around his wife, he looked through the doorway to where Bobby and Ferdinand were counting the candles. "It's made me think pretty hard," he said. "Bobby mustn't go around alone the way he's been doing. All Americans here are considered millionaires. If the Crown Prince could go, think how easy"——

His arm tightened around his wife, and together they went in to the birthday feast. Ferdinand William Otto was hungry. He ate eagerly—chicken, fruit compote, potato salad—again shades of the court physician, who fed him at night a balanced ration of milk, egg and zwieback! Bobby also ate busily, and conversation languished.

Then the moment came when, the first cravings appeased, they sat back in their chairs while Pepy cleared the table and brought in a knife to cut the cake. Mr. Thorpe had excused himself for a moment. Now he came back, with a bottle wrapped in a newspaper, and sat down again.

"I thought," he said, "as this is a real occasion, not exactly Robert's coming of age, but marking his arrival at years of discretion, the period when he ceases to be a small boy and becomes a big one, we might drink a toast to it."

"Robert!" objected the big boy's mother.

"A teaspoonful each, honey," he begged. "It changes it from a mere supper to a festivity."

He poured a few drops of wine into the children's glasses and filled them up with water. Then he filled the others, and sat smiling, this big young man, who had brought his loved ones across the sea, and was trying to make them happy up a flight of stone stairs, above a concierge's bureau that smelled of garlic.

"First," he said, "I believe it is customary to toast the King. Friends, I give you the good King and brave soldier, Ferdinand of Livonia."

They stood up to drink it, and even Pepy had a glass.

Ferdinand William Otto was on his feet first. He held his glass up in his right hand, and his eyes shone. He knew what to do. He had seen the King's health drunk a number of times.

"To his majesty, Ferdinand of Livonia," he said solemnly. "God keep the King!"

Over their glasses Mrs. Thorpe's eyes met her husband's. How they trained their children here!

But Ferdinand William Otto had not finished. "I give you," he said in his clear young treble, holding his glass, "the President of the United States—The President!"

"The President!" said Mr. Thorpe.

They drank again, except the fraulein, who disapproved of children being made much of, and only pretended to sip her wine.

"Bobby," said his mother, with a catch in her voice, "haven't you something to suggest—as a toast?"

"Well," he meditated, "I guess—would 'Home' be all right?"

"Home!" they all said, a little shakily, and drank to it.

Home! To the Thorpes, a little house on a shady street in America; to the fraulein, a thatched cottage in the mountains of Germany and an old mother; to Pepy, the room in a tenement where she went at night; to Ferdinand William Otto, a formal suite of apartments in the palace, surrounded by pomp, ordered by rule and precedent, hardened by military discipline, and unsoftened by family love, save for the grim affection of the old King.

Home!

After all, Pepy's plan went astray, for the fraulein got the china baby and Ferdinand William Otto the Lincoln penny.

"That," said Bobby's father, "is a Lincoln penny, young man. It bears the portrait of Abraham Lincoln. Have you ever heard of him?"

The Prince looked up. Did he not know the "Gettysburg Address" by heart?

"Yes, sir," he said. "The—my grandfather thinks that President Lincoln was a very great man."

The festivities were taking a serious turn. There was a little packet at each plate, and now Bobby's mother reached over and opened hers.

"Oh!" she said, and exhibited a gaudy tissue-paper bonnet. Everybody had one. Mr. Thorpe's was a dunce cap, and fraulein's a giddy Pierrette of black and white. Bobby had a military cap. With eager fingers Ferdinand William Otto opened his; he had never tasted this delicious paper-cap joy before.

It was a crown, a sturdy bit of gold paper, cut into points and set with red paste jewels—a gem of a crown. He was charmed. He put it on his head, with the unconsciousness of childhood, and posed delightedly.

The fraulein looked at Prince Ferdinand William Otto, and slowly the color left her lean face. She stared. It was he, then, and none other. Stupid, not to have known at the beginning! He, the Crown Prince, here in the home of these barbarous Americans, when, by every plan that had been made, he should now be in the hands of those who would dispose of him.

"I give you," said Mr. Thorpe, raising his glass toward his wife, "the giver of the feast. Boys, up with you!"

It was then that the fraulein, making an excuse, slipped out of the room.

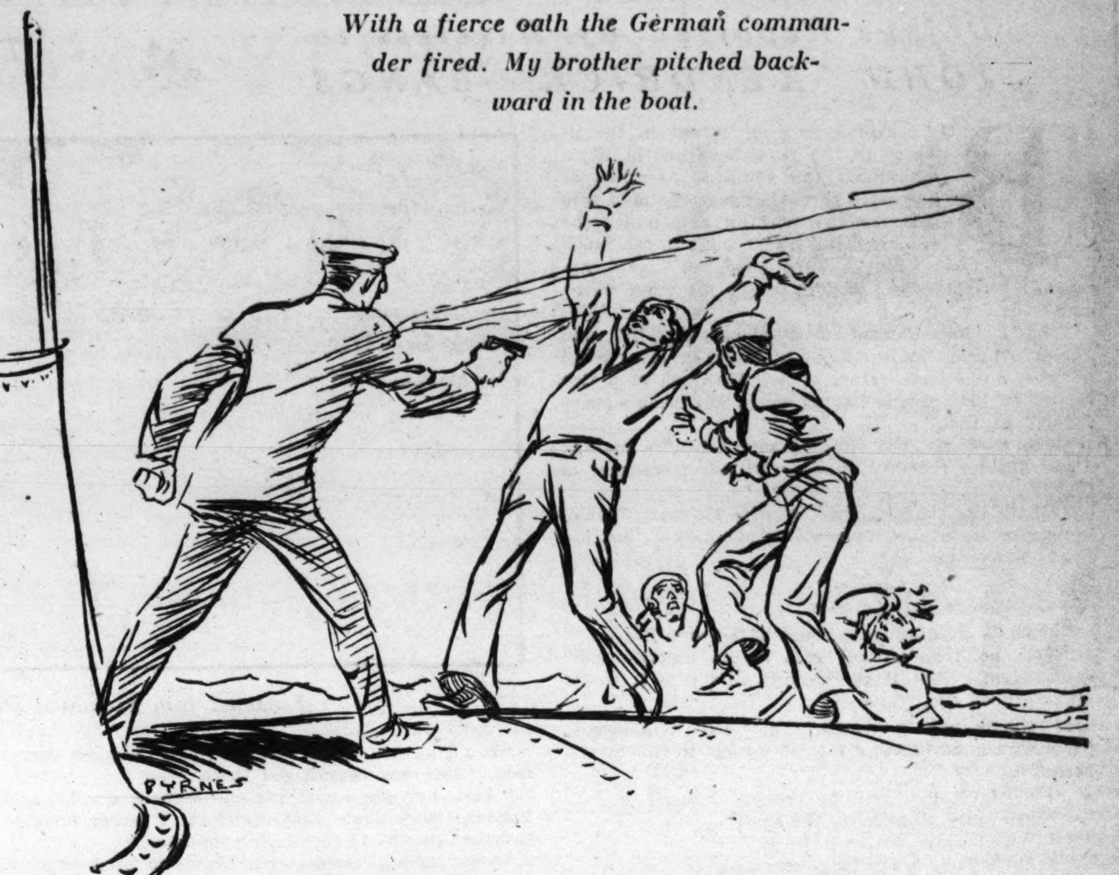
La-May Face Powder Does Not Contain Any White Lead

Thousands of women have unsightly complexions because they use injurious face powder. A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that really stays on. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it stick. Five thousand dollars is offered any chemist who analyzes it and finds it contains any white lead. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. This formula contains a medicinal powder doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. It is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because it is pure and because it stays on better than any other, it is already sold everywhere. The large size is only fifty cents and the half size twenty-five cents. When you see how wonderfully it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.

The Seven Heroes of Ostend

Five American seamen and two Englishmen, prisoners from a torpedoed ship, helped make possible the recent raids on German submarine base by drawing plans of fortifications before making their escape—Yankee sailor's story of how his brother was shot down by U-boat commander and of cruelties practiced aboard submersible :: ::



With a fierce oath the German commander fired. My brother pitched backward in the boat.

IT was the desperate heroism of five American seamen and two Englishmen, a Lieutenant and a Sergeant, in making maps of the fortifications of the German submarine base at Ostend and stealing other papers from a German officer, which to a large extent made feasible the recent raids on the dens of the iron sharks—those brilliant feats which rocked the allied world with huzzas.

Such is the thrilling story brought back to this country, and related in person to President Wilson, by Yeoman Henry Priesman of San Francisco. Because Priesman is only 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs but 130 pounds, the President is quoted as saying to him:

"If a little bit of a chap like you could outwit the Germans, what can we expect from those other big giants of men whom we are sending over by the tens of thousands."

Yeoman Priesman here tells his narrative to the readers of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine—how he was taken prisoner by a U-boat, whose commander wantonly murdered his brother and drowned 50 civilian captives; how he was held a prisoner for 72 days at Ostend and savagely mistreated, his front teeth being knocked out and his face scarred with Prussian boot heels; how he and six companions, killing two sentries, escaped to Holland and thence to London; and how there they laid their information before Admiral Sims and the British Admiralty.

By YEOMAN HENRY PRIESMAN.

I HAVE been in the navy five years, and I used to be Admiral Sims' yeoman. My brother—a braver fellow never went to sea—was in the same gun crew. We were assigned to the Arcadia last fall and made a number of trips over there. On our last trip in November we took over 500 Red Cross nurses and landed them safely. On the return trip they got us, off Brest, France.

Without warning we were torpedoed about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The Arcadia stayed up only eight minutes. The torpedo landed amidships and went right through her. Eleven of our crew were lost in the explosion. There were scores of civilians on board and they stood by with the rest of the crew to go off in the small boats.

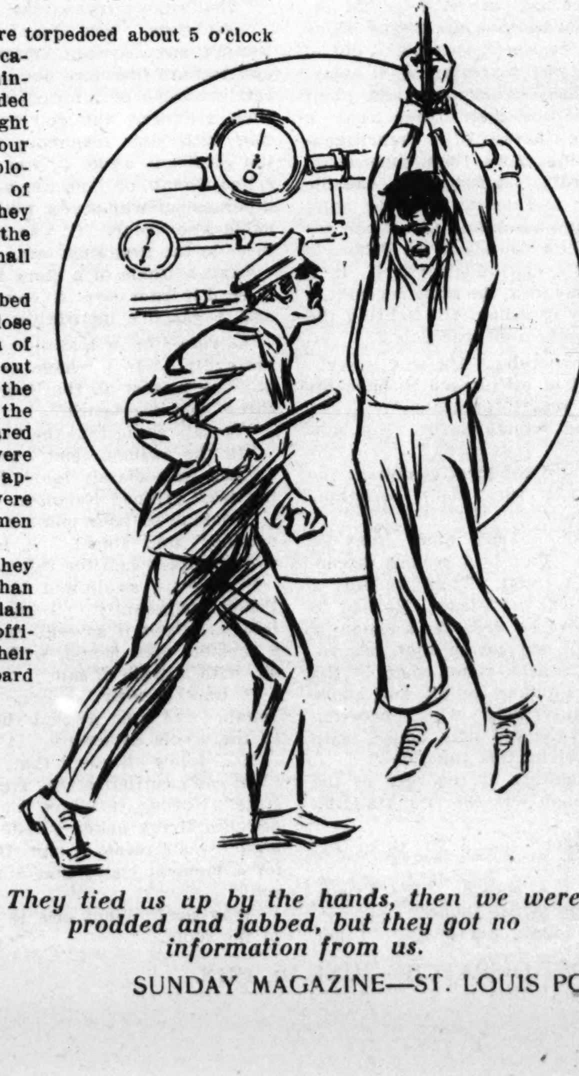
The U-boat suddenly bobbed up out of the water very close to us. Up went the hatch of the conning tower and out came the bearded face of the U-boat commander. As the deck of the submarine cleared the waves other hatches were thrown open and the crew appeared on deck. There were two officers and 15 men aboard the German rat.

A fine bunch of pirates they were! They were worse than that—they were just plain butchers. The German officers, big automatics in their hands, ordered us all aboard the U-boat. Our boats were bobbing around in the sea, and when our boys didn't pull up alongside the U-boat fast enough to suit the German commander, he shot at several of them while bellowing in rage. I never found out whether anyone was hit.

My brother and I were in the same boat. As we came alongside we were ordered to stand up and throw up our arms. The German commander spoke in guttural English that was hard to understand. Apparently my brother understood the Hun to say that we were to disarm ourselves. At any rate, his right hand went down to his side and he began to fumble at his belt as though to loosen his sidearms.

With a fierce oath the German commander fired. Just one shot. My brother pitched backward in the boat, his arms high over his head, without a word. The bullet went through his heart. I jumped to keep him from falling in the water.

Another shot, and I felt a stinging pain in the calf of my left leg. The German officer was swearing and told me to get on deck or he would give me the same dose. My brother pitched overboard before my eyes.



They tied us up by the hands, then we were prodded and jabbed, but they got no information from us.

But those Huns will pay dearly. Already I've settled a few scores, and I'll get some more. And my four brothers, sworn to revenge, will do their part when they get over the German lines with our new air fleet.

Everybody was ordered aboard the U-boat, civilians and American gunners. And then the Huns scuttled every single one of our lifeboats. One small life raft was left floating. The bullies elbowed and pushed us about like so many cattle.

Next the Germans ordered the American gunners below. We didn't move fast enough to suit them and a German fist caught me full on the jaw and knocked me below. For a few minutes I was out completely, and when I came to the conning tower had been closed and the U-boat was in motion. One of the fellows told me that all the civilians had been left on deck. There were about 50 of them.

For two miles the U-boat tore along the surface, and then began slowly to submerge. The Germans drove us along into the control chamber and ordered us to look out through the periscopes at the scene above.

Through the drumhead mirror, when it came my turn, I could see the waves splashing across the deck forward. One at a time the poor civilians were being washed off into a watery grave.

The civilians had a single life raft and but 11 men remained on it when it was picked up by a British destroyer.

For 64 hours we were prisoners aboard the U-boat. The first thing they did was to give us the third degree. They plied us with a hundred questions, asking how many men the United States had sent to France, how many were in camps, where our fleet was located, how many destroyers we had, and all kinds of questions. But we absolutely refused to give up in any way.

The German commander became incensed at my silence, and, with a terrific smash full in the face, knocked me back against the control levers that operate the submerging tanks. I crumpled up on the floor, and while I was down a German "unteroffizier" kicked me several times in the face with his heavy boot. All my front teeth were kicked out.

They refused to give us food. They put tourniquets on our arms and legs and pulled them tight until our limbs became numb. They tied us up by the hands, so that we hung with our feet five or six inches above the floor. Then we were prodded and jabbed, but they got no information from us.

After two nights and three days the submarine put into port. It was not long before we learned that we were in Ostend.

They put me in the officers' mess, and I was compelled to wait on table for them. The food was rotten. Thin barley soup, even for the officers. Bread that was impossible. Coffee mixed with acorns. I saw very little butter, and, of course, got none of it. Nor much in the way of meat. They gave us meager portions of wretched food and I soon lost weight.

American and allied wounded brought in were left without medical attention, many of them to die. One American sailor had not had a shave for several weeks. One of the German officers said: "Don't you want a shave?" The American replied that he did. Thereupon the German drew out a razor, sliced off both ears and then tore off the skin on his face with the beard.

They tried to bribe me with an offer of a commission in the German navy if I would come across with information about our fleets and armies, but I always shook my head—and then went through another siege of blows and tourniquets. But we stuck to our guns and they soon learned that it was useless to ply us with questions.

Plans for escape were first broached by an English midst of a rushing mass from above three human figures detached themselves, shooting downward, limp as dolls made of rags, yet dignified into supremest tragedy.

"A few seconds and we shall be like that," were the words that flashed through Belever's brain.

Hardly had the thought of what might come printed itself before his eyes, when the whole great overhanging mass of cliff broke away and fell headlong. It descended upon the platform they had left, and swept it out of existence, carrying it down the mountain with bounding rocks and stones. Belever saw no more; he only heard and felt. With every step he took the earth seemed to fall away behind him.

Now they were in the chapel. It was like a dream to be there. The soft dusk, the peace, the faint suggestion of incense, the lighted candles—in honor of the Christmas season—on the altar, and dotted about among the quaint little Oriental figures of the "crib" or "prescripio," all seemed unreal, a mirage of peace in the presence of great danger. The rushing noise, like an advancing tidal wave, grew louder. From the doorway through which he had just come, Belever could see what was happening. He saw a huge flying boulder strike the roof of the hotel, crush it in and break away the wall beneath as if the solid, ancient structure, which had weathered the storms of 800 years, had been a house of cards, set up by the hands of a child.

For a moment he believed that the whole building would go, and the girl he loved with it. But he heard the thunder of the landslide as it swept down to the sea, engulfing the Santa Caterina as it went, and throwing a towering wall of water that rushed in upon the beach. Then a great silence fell, broken only by the far-away shouting of human voices, sounding strangely small and feeble after nature's savage uproar. Nothing more happened. They were saved.

Lesley had clung to him, speechless, almost breathless, and Belever had clasped her tightly, hardly knowing how tightly. But now he gently released her. As he did so, she fell away from him, half fainting, and he caught her again, with his arm around her waist.

"For heaven's sake tell me that you're not hurt—that no stone struck you as we came?" he stammered.

"No," she whispered, for all strength was gone from her, and she could not speak aloud. "No—but you—there's a streak of blood on your forehead. Oh, how can I ever forgive myself. You might have been killed. It was all—all my fault. I was a wretch. You ought to have gone and left me."

"I'd rather have been killed than to do that," said Belever. He had forgotten to let her go. She had forgotten to draw herself away, and so they still stood together, these two enemies, she leaning slightly against him, he with his arm round her waist.

"Oh, why do you say that?" she faltered. "I was so obstinate—so wicked. I deserved anything. I wonder you cared."

"But, you see, I loved you," said Belever, quite simply. "If the end had to come, I wanted it to come for me, too."

She did not answer, or even appear surprised; but, when her eyes had left him, they wandered all about the chapel thinking how beautiful it looked, and how sacred it seemed, and how good it was to be there.

"I hope," she began; but what she hoped Belever was not to know, for a pale woman appeared at the door leading into the chapel from the hotel, opposite the entrance from the cloisters, and, at the sight of the two figures standing together in the jeweled twilight, broke into sobs.

"Lesley—thank heaven!" she ejaculated. "I've searched everywhere for you. They tried to keep me from coming back to the house, but I would."

Lesley ran to her mother. "He saved my life," she said.

The elder woman held out both hands to him.

"How can I thank you?" she cried.

"By forgiving me—if you will." He spoke to her, but he looked at Lesley.

"We start newly from this moment," said the girl. Her eyes were wondrously soft and sweet in the chapel's dusk, jeweled by the candle lights.

"Come away quickly," implored her mother. "Who knows yet if it is safe even here? It has all been so sudden, so horrible. I saw everything from the terrace—the peasants falling over the cliff from above, the fishing boats crushed—oh, I shall dream of it always. Signore Vozzi says, even if all is well after this, everyone must leave the hotel as soon as we can get our things together. Do come!"

She turned toward the door again, drawing Lesley with her. Belever followed, and at the door Lesley looked back. He hardly dared to believe that he read aright what her eyes said.

The Seven Heroes of Ostend

army Lieutenant. An English Sergeant was a party to the plans, and eventually four American sailors were taken into the scheme.

They came to me one night and the Lieutenant said: "You're a good kid and we're going to take you along with us." All this time we had a pretty good sight of the place. They used to take us out once in a while and parade us around to be made the sport of the Germans in Ostend. We were able to make some notes. The Lieutenant had some drawings showing the fortifications and the general lay of the harbor.

It was on the night of March 13 that we made our getaway. One of our menial jobs in Ostend was the care of the clothing of the German officers, and so it was possible in the course of our more than two months' imprisonment to smuggle into a hiding place complete German outfits. We had seven of them. Because of our close contact with the Germans in their mess halls we knew what was going on all the time. I knew, perhaps, more than the rest, because I understand the German language.

But I never spoke a word of German while I was in Ostend, for the reason that the Germans have a fashion now of splitting the tongues of American soldiers or sailors who can speak German. I was put wise to that soon after I arrived in Ostend, and so made no break that would have cost me my tongue.

"It is not permitted me to tell all that happened in connection with the plans of Ostend that we carried to London. But let me hint just how it worked out by saying that one of our party watched his chance while a high German officer was sleeping and stole from under his pillow a wallet containing very important papers concerning the defenses of Ostend and its general line of operations.

When we made our breakaway, we dressed in German uniforms and boldly set forth out of Ostend. Sentries? Of course, but the way we walked right up to them took them off their guard. That was once I spoke in German. When they started to ask questions, for passes and passwords, we let them have it. Two sentries were killed and I think several others are loitering somewhere in a hospital.

It was cold weather and the going was not so good. By day time we hid away and rested. In the nights we walked or rode with Belgian peasants. The Belgian girls gave us food and extra clothing. Our course lay due north, this side of Bruges toward Blankenberghe and Antwerp, and we had a fine time getting across the canals back of Zeebrugge. Eventually we got to the border and cut our way through the famous barbed wire wall into Holland. From there we managed to escape into London. It's a long, ugly story, that trip from Ostend to England, and I'm not going into all the details. We got there, and that's what counts.

We saw them all—the King and the Queen and the gentlemen in Parliament and the Lords of the Admiralty. I saw Admiral Sims, under whom I served as a yeoman only a few years ago, and when he heard my story he chuckled and said some nice things. We told them all we knew about Ostend, and it must have been pretty good, for they took it all in great detail. And you know what happened recently around Ostend!

At the Houseboat on the Styx

"That's it," said Jonah. "What else is it? If a whale is not a submarine, what else is it? You wouldn't exactly call it an airplane, would you? Anybody here ever see a whale soaring the heavens?" he added, turning and addressing the others.

"I did, once," said Bacchus. "I caught him in a butterfly net, but when I tried to stuff him and pin him on a cork, I found he wasn't there."

"Exactly," said Jonah. "He wasn't there because whales never are there—they are submarines, and not superterrains—and at least one of them carried human freight, and stayed under water for days and days, and came to the surface when he got good and ready."

"Well, even at that," said Priam, his eye lighting with hope as he thought of one last point. "I'll bet you 40 cents you don't dare stand up before this gathering of truth-loving spirits, and, with the fate of Ananias staring you in the face, tell us that that whale, or submarine, as you choose to call it, was equipped with a torpedo tube."

"I don't know what that old Standy was equipped with," began Jonah.

"Old who?" cried Napoleon.

"Standy," said Jonah. "I named him Standard Doyle, he was such a gusher—but as I say—I don't know what old Standy was equipped with, but if he DIDN'T have a torpedo tube he had a synthetic substitute that made the real thing look like 29 cents, and you'd have admitted that yourself, Brother Priam, if you'd been in my place the morning the old boy hove to a mile and a half off shore, and shot me out into the ambient atmosphere to land sprawling on the beach 40 yards beyond tide water somewhere in Assyria. Gosh all fish-hooks, but that was some projection, and I wonder I lived to tell the tale."

"In other words," said Dr. Johnson, "in the days of Jonah there WAS a submarine, that carried human freight and ruthlessly fired a fairly good imitation of a torpedo, in utter disregard of the life of the innocent noncombatant."

"You said something that time, Doc!" ejaculated Jonah, with fervor.

"The parallel," said Blackstone, "is complete. The plaintiff loses, and is hereby ordered to defray the costs of liquidation. I'll take a schooner of chili sauce."

It was at this point that Solomon entered the room.

"Anybody asking for me?" he said.

"Not that I know of," growled Priam, sulkily.

"Ascanius said somebody wanted to speak to the chap who said, 'There's nothing new under the sun,'" said Solomon, "and so I came."

"O—are you it?" said Priam.

"Yes," said Solomon. "I said it in my little book called Ecclesiastes"——

"Well," said Priam, "I just wanted to tell you that when you said that, Solomon"——

The old fellow hesitated as if reluctant to give in.

"Go on," said Solomon.

"You spoke the truest word you ever spoke in all your life," said Priam.

"And I could make it untrue in a minute!" said Shylock.

"You?" said Priam. "How?"

"By buying somepotty a drink," said Shylock. "I'll do it for $10."

"No," said Priam. "It would be novel, Shy, but it would be too much of a shock to everybody."

AT THE HOUSEBOAT on the STYX

Doings Reported by Wireless to JOHN KENDRICK BANGS

The Antiquity of the New

"BOY," said Priam, as he sat in the library of the Houseboat on the Styx, addressing the youthful Ascanius as he passed through, "page the man who said 'There's nothing new under the sun,' and tell him I want to see him."

"Yessir; very good, sir," said Ascanius. "Right away, sir, but what's his other name, sir?"

"That's what I want to find out myself," said Priam. "I don't know who he is, where he is, or when he was, but I have rather a nice specimen of a flea to put in his ear for having made any such absurd remark as that."

"Very good, sir; I'm off, sir," said Ascanius, making a bee line for the door, like a veritable messenger to Garcia.

"What's the big idea, Pri?" queried Homer. "You're not going to write a topical song about that line, are you? Something like:

"'O tra-la-loo
There's nothing new.
There's nothing new beneath the sun.'"

"Well, no, I hadn't any such notion in my mind," said Priam. "But if the saying were true it would make a good one."

"I should say it would," chortled Shakspeare. "Wouldn't mind tackling the job myself, in this strain, perhaps:

"'Old Kaiser Bill, he thought himself
The only jam-pot on the shelf,
And sang, "O tra-la-lee—
Since Time began long years ago,
And mortal life began to flow,
There's not been sitch as ME!
I am the first of all my kind,
Search every age and you'll not find
On land or on the sea,
On earth, in air,
Or anywhere,
Another one like ME."
But Bill was thinking in the dark.
He'd clean forgot the hungry Shark;
And losing sight of his own shape,
Completely overlooked the Ape;
And never dreamed that in mere sin
Beelzebub was his own Twin;
And that for lecherous intent
Pop Tarquin was his precedent;
And that for things of murderous strain
He was the duplicate of Cain;
That Ananias long before
His very self-same laurels wore,
And name and reputation won
Along the lines that Bill has run—
Yet' tis a fact
Far too exact,
There's nothing new beneath the sun—
Alas, how true!
There's nothing new,
There's nothing new beneath the sun.'"

"That's not bad for an Impromptu," said Homer. "Rewritten 30 or 40 times, and set to music by the composer of Salome, and sung by a Swedish tenor who has lost his voice, it might get by."

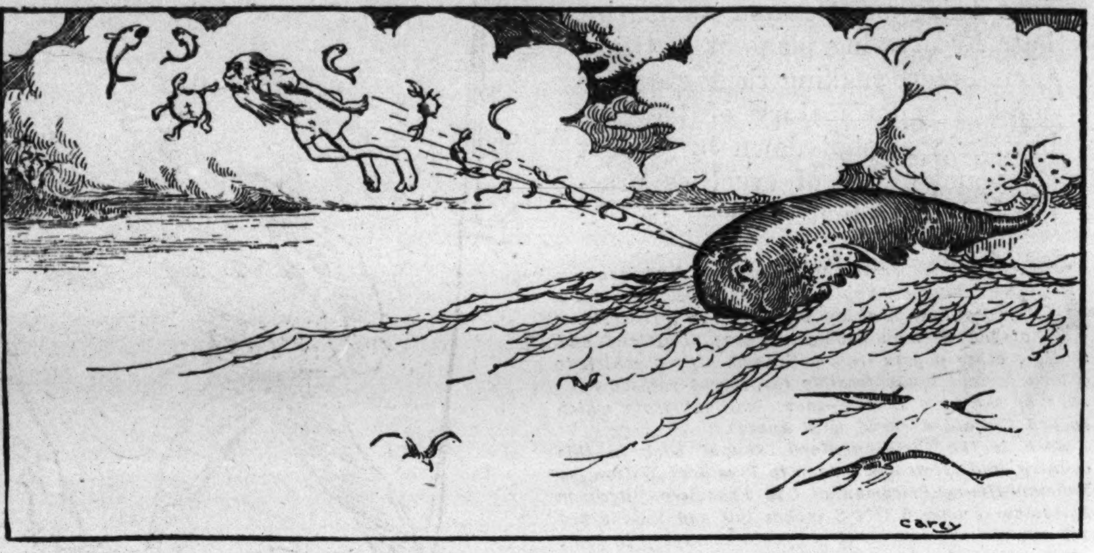
"Unfortunately, the ultimate sentiment is not true," said Priam. "That's why I wanted to see the chap who first said it. I want to show him how everlastingly wrong he was."

"O, I'm not so sure about that," said Diogenes. "I'm a pretty old guy and I've been looking for something new for ages, and haven't found it yet—not even an honest man. Show me that, and I may agree with you."

"What's the new thing you think you discovered, Pri?" asked Socrates. "If you have really found it you ought to be able to prove your case."

"Well, this war has brought out a lot of new things," said Priam. "Take this new German gun that shoots 75 miles, for example."

"Stuff and nonsense!" said Ajax. "New? Why, Priam, Vulcan was making that sort of thing for Jupiter way back in the days of the Mythologians, aeons before Methuselah was born. I guess I ought to know; it was a long-range shot that knocked me out. I don't know the exact distance it traveled, but I heard Mercury say once that that old thunderbolt of Jove's traveled 8,752,000 miles before it plunked into me. The thing is older than the hills. Your vaunted 75-mile gun is only the practical application of another stolen idea—as usual."



I named him Standard Doyle—he was such a gusher.

"You'll have to guess again, Priam," laughed Socrates. "Ajax has caught you there."

"Well, I've got another right here at hand," said Priam. "How about the Zeppelin? I rather imagine Brother Ajax won't be so flip about that."

"Ajax mayn't," said Aeschylus, "but Zeus save us, Pri, you must be in your thirty-second childhood to talk about Zeppelins being something new in the presence of Homer and myself. I admit that the Zeppelin has proved itself to be one of the filthiest birds that ever flew the air, dropping death and destruction upon innocent children and old men and women everywhere, but there's nothing new about it. If you don't believe it, ask Achilles here, or Ulysses, or Homer, about the Harpies. I guess you'll find that we old Greeks knew a thing or two about your Zeppelins back in the days when the Huns were swinging by their tails in the African jungle."

"Perfectly true," said Achilles, "and they were the most offensive weapons of offense ever invented. They were worse than buzzards and condors and other dirty birds that only eat carrion. The buzzard and the condor eat carrion because they like it, but the Harpy, like the Zeppelin, used to come racing along through the heavens at a breakneck speed, and out of sheer love for mean, malicious depravity, spoil everything they touched, and making no more ado about soiling whatever came within their reach than a Hohenzollern Prince in the Chateau of a French gentleman. They were nothing more than supermean, superdastardly, supercowardly, superbeasts, capable of flying through the air and loving nothing quite so much as to spread ruin and desolating filth wherever they went. This war Zeppelin you speak of, Priam, is only a modern instance [illegible] a mythological fact. It is the dirigible Harpy; the same idea, the same degenerate purpose, the same cowardly expedient for fighting the helpless noncombatant meanly and obscenely."

Priam rubbed his brow ruefully. He was a stubborn old man, and was not at all pleased to have his kingly pronouncements so readily gainsaid.

"Well, anyhow," he said triumphantly, "the submarine"——

"Noah has already told us of the giraffes dotting the silvery surface of the deluge with their periscopic heads," interrupted Barnum.

"O, tutt!" laughed Priam. "That story may be humor, but it isn't history. This is a serious discussion. Noah's giraffes don't count. They are only a part of the Admiral's nautical persiflage. He had to spin a yarn like that to prove he was ever a sailor. I mean the REAL thing—the submarine that can remain under water for days at a time, come to the surface when it wills, carries human freight, and, above all, can shoot a torpedo unerringly when occasion arises. How about that?" the old man added, with a loud laugh. "I guess I gotcha this time, eh?"

There was a slight commotion at the rear of the group, and in a moment Jonah was observed standing on his feet.

"For the benefit of our good friend Mr. Omar Pri Yam," he began.

"Sh! Sh!" admonished Shakspeare. "It's Priam, not Khayyam, and his name is not Omar."

"Well, I'm sorry," said Jonah, nervously. "I get terribly mixed on this Who's Who in Hades business. What with Priam and Khayyam and Homer and Omar and the Lord knows what else, it's a terrible mixup to me. At any rate, whoever the dear old top may be who says that the modern submarine is a new thing because it carried human freight and could stay under water for days at a stretch whenever it wanted to, I'd just like to ask him if he ever heard of ME!"

"Sure I have," said Priam. "You were the original Jinx. I'll admit that since your time there has been nothing new in luck, but I am talking about submarines that carried human freight and could stay under water for days whenever they got good and ready to do it."

"That's what I'm talking about, too," said Jonah.

"Well, what's the idea? Were you a submarine that carried any human freight?" demanded Priam.

"No," said Jonah. "I've had hard luck in my day, but it wasn't as bad as that. But I AM the human freight that was carried by a submarine ages and ages ago. I was the first known cargo of the first subaqueous common carrier."

"That's news to me," said Priam.

"Doubtless," said Jonah. "I understand there weren't any Carnegie libraries in Troy in your day, and you are therefore not exactly what anybody would call a bureau of information. But if there had been such a library, and you could have stopped quarrelling with your neighbors long enough to look into the catalogue under J, you would have found a book called 'Jonah, or Four Days Behind the Blubber,' from a perusal of which you would have gained much valuable knowledge. It was about ME and my adventures in the first submarine oil tank in history."

"And a whale of a story it was!" said Dr. Johnson. "I read it from cover to cover with breathless interest, and a gasping incredulity."

"O, yes—I know that old yarn," laughed Priam, good-naturedly. "As I remember it, you were such an ingrowing mascot on the liner you sailed on the sailors threw you overboard."

"Yezza! Plum into the briny!" said Jonah.

"In the swim at last," suggested Beau Brummel.

"And immediately taken in by the first families of the sea," grinned Napoleon.

"Sticking to your point, I was swallowed by a submarine," said Jonah. "I hadn't been in the water two minutes when the thing happened."

"You were swallowed by a WHALE, sir," roared Priam, indignantly. "I know the story—Munchausen told me about it several years ago, and I took it, as a sensible man would, with a grain of salt, sir—yes, sir, with a grain of salt."

"I took it with several hogsheads of salt," said Jonah, "and even at that there wasn't a dry moment in the whole adventure. It was perfectly awful"——

"O, I know all about that," said Priam, impatiently. "You can't cuttlefish this argument with gassy camouflage. Nobody imagines for a minute that your experience living inside a fish for three days and three nights was a pleasant one. But the point is, you don't for a moment claim that a whale is a submarine, do you?"

"Why not? What else is it?" came from all parts of the room.

riage moving through the streets, and people showering him with fresh flowers. He rather glowed at the memory. Then he recalled that the Chancellor had said he needed fresh air.

Something occurred to him, something which combined fresh air with action, yet kept to the letter of his promise—or was there a promise?—not to leave the palace.

The idea pleased him. It set him to smiling, and his bright hair to quivering with excitement. It was nothing less than to go up on the roof and find the ball. Nikky would be surprised, having failed himself. He would have to be very careful, having in mind the fate of that unlucky child at the Crystal Palace. And he would have to hurry. Nikky would be sure to return soon.

He opened the door on the great corridor, and stepped out, saluting the sentries, as he always did.

"I'll be back in a moment," he informed them. He was always on terms of great friendliness with the guard, and he knew these men by sight. "Are you going to be stationed here now?" he inquired pleasantly.

The two guards were at a loss. But one of them, who had a son of his own, and hated the whole business, saluted and replied that he knew not.

"I hope you are," said Ferdinand William Otto, and went on.

The sentries regarded one another. "Let him go!" said the one who was a father.

The other one moved uneasily. "Our orders cover no such contingency," he muttered. "And, besides, he will come back." He bore a strong resemblance to the boy, who, in the riding school, had dusted the royal hearse. "I hope to God he does not come back," he said stonily.

Five minutes to four.

The Crown Prince hurried. The corridors were almost empty. Here and there he met servants, who stood stiff against the wall until he had passed. On the marble staircase, leading up, he met no one, nor on the upper floor. He was quite warm with running and he paused in his father's suite to mop his face. Then he opened a window and went out on the roof. It seemed very large and empty now, and the afternoon sun, sinking low, threw shadows across it. Also, from the balustrade, it looked extremely far to the ground.

Nevertheless, although his heart beat a trifle fast, he was still determined. A climb which Nikky with his long legs had achieved in a leap, took him up to a chimney. Below—it seemed a long way below—was the gutter. There was a very considerable slant. If one sat down, like Nikky, and slid, and did not slide over the edge, one should fetch up in the gutter.

He felt a trifle dizzy. But Nikky's theory was that if one was afraid to do a thing, better to do it and get over being afraid.

"I was terribly afraid of a bayonet attack," Nikky had observed, "until I was in one. The next one I rather enjoyed!"

So the Crown Prince sat down on the sloping roof behind the chimney, and gathered his legs under him for a slide.

Then he heard a door open, and footsteps. Very careful foosteps. He was quite certain Nikky had followed him. But there were cautious voices, too, and neither was Nikky's. It occurred to Prince Ferdinand William Otto that a good many people, certainly including Miss Braithwaite, would not approve of either his situation or his position. Miss Braithwaite was particularly particular about positions.

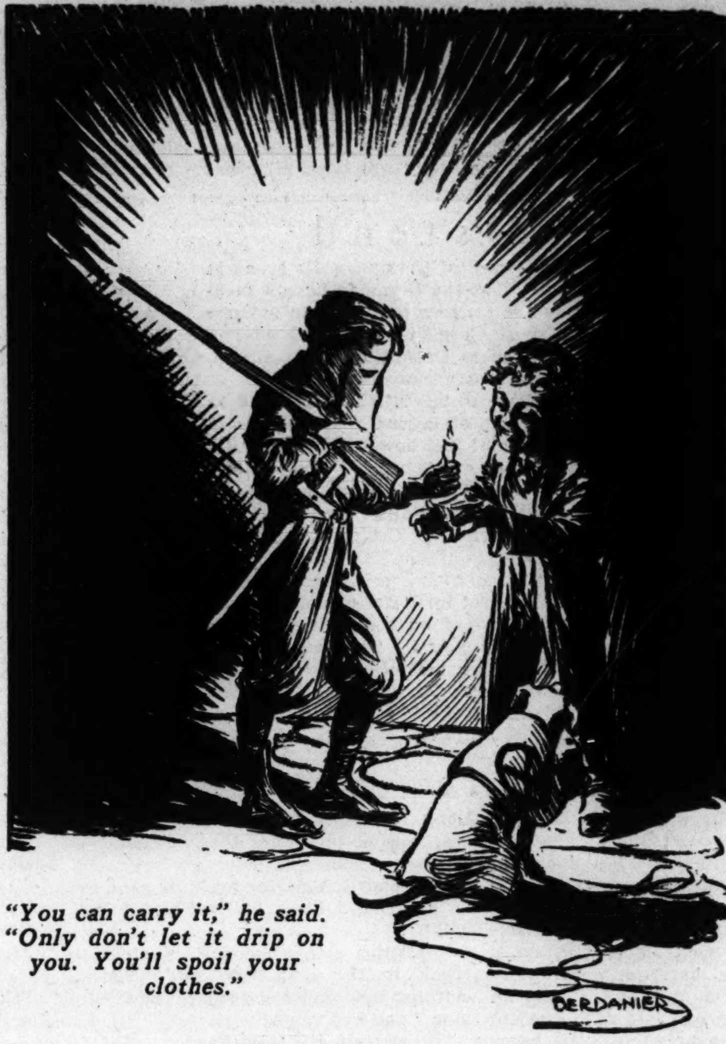
So he sat still beside the chimney, well shielded by the evergreens in tubs, until the voices and the footsteps were gone. Then he took all his courage in his hands, and slid. Well for him that the ancient builders of the palace had been reckless with lead, that the gutter was both wide and deep. Well for Nikky, too, waiting in the boudoir below and hard-driven between love and anxiety.

The Crown Prince, unaccustomed to tiles, turned over halfway down, and rolled. He brought up with a jerk in the gutter, quite safe, but extremely frightened. And the horrid memory of the Crystal Palace child filled his memory to the exclusion of everything else. He sat there for quite a few minutes. There was no ball in sight, and the roof looked even steeper from this point.

Being completely self-engrossed, therefore, he did not see that the roof had another visitor. Had two visitors, as a matter of fact. One of them wore a blanket with a white "O" over a white "X" on it, and the other wore a mask and considerable kitchen cutlery fastened to his belt. They had come out of a small door in the turret and were very much at ease. They leaned over the parapet and admired the view. They strutted about the flat roof and sang, at least one of them sang a very strange refrain, which was something about

"Fifteen men on a dead man's chest;
Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum."

And they climbed on one of the garden chairs and looked over the expanse of the roof, which was when they saw Prince Ferdinand William Otto, and gazed at him.



"You can carry it," he said. "Only don't let it drip on you. You'll spoil your clothes."

"Gee whiz!" said the larger pirate, through his mask. "What are you doing there?"

The Crown Prince started and stared. "I am sitting here," explained the Crown Prince, trying to look as though he usually sat in lead gutters. "I am looking for a ball."

"You're looking for a fall, I guess," observed the pirate. "You don't remember me, kid, do you?"

"I can't see your face, but I know your voice." His voice trembled with excitement.

"Lemme give you a hand," said the pirate, whipping off his mask. "You make me nervous, sitting there. You've got a nerve, you have."

The Crown Prince looked gratified. "I don't need any assistance, thank you," he said. "Perhaps, now I'm here, I'd better look for the ball."

"I wouldn't bother about the old ball," said the pirate, rather nervously for an old sea dog. "You better get back to a safe place. Say, what made you pretend that our railway made you nervous?"

Prince Ferdinand William Otto climbed up the tiles, trying to look as though tiles were his native habitat. The pirates both regarded him with admiration, as he dropped beside them.

"How did you happen to come here?" asked the Crown Prince. "Did you lose your airplane up here?"

"We came on business," said the pirate importantly. "Two of the enemy entered our cave. We were guarding it from the underbrush, and saw them go in. We trailed them. They must die!"

"Really—die?"

"Of course. Death to those who defy us."

"Death to those who defy us!" repeated the Crown Prince, enjoying himself hugely, and quite ready for bloodshed.

"Look here, Dick Deadeye," said the larger pirate to the smaller, who stood gravely at attention, "I think he belongs to our crew. What say, old pal?"

Dick Deadeye wagged his tail.

Some two minutes later, the Crown Prince of Livonia, having sworn the pirate oath of no quarter, except to women and children, was on his way to the pirate cave.

He was not running away. He was not disobedient. He was breaking no promises. Because, from the moment he saw the two confederates, and particularly from the moment he swore the delightful oath, his past was wiped away. There was, in his consciousness, no palace, no grandfather, no Miss Braithwaite, even no Nikky. There was only a boy and a dog, and a pirate den awaiting him.

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE PAPER CROWN.

STRANGE that the old palace roof should, in close succession, have seen Nikky forgetting his promise to the Chancellor, and Otto forgetting that he was not to run away. Strange places, roofs, abiding places, since long ago, of witches.

"How'd you happen to be in that gutter?" Bobby demanded, as they started down the staircase in the wall. "Watch out, son, it's pretty steep."

"I was getting a ball."

"Is this your house?"

"Well, I live here," temporized Prince Ferdinand William Otto. A terrible thought came to him. Suppose this American boy, who detested Kings and Princes, should learn who he was!

"It looks like a big place. Is it a barracks?"

"No." He hesitated. "But there are a good many soldiers here. I—I never saw these steps before."

"I should think not," boasted Bobby. "I discovered them. I guess nobody else in the world knows about them. I put up a flag at the bottom and took possession of them. They're mine."

"Really!" said Prince Ferdinand William Otto, quite delighted. He would never have thought of such a thing.

A door of iron bars at the foot of the long flight of steps—there were four of them—stood open. Here daylight, which had been growing fainter, entirely ceased. And here Bobby, having replaced his mask, placed an air rifle over his shoulder and lighted a candle and held it out to the Crown Prince.

"You can carry it," he said. "Only don't let it drip on you. You'll spoil your clothes." There was a faintly scornful note in his voice, and Ferdinand William Otto was quick to hear it.

"I don't care at all about my clothes," he protested. And to prove it he deliberately tilted the candle and let a thin stream of paraffin run down his short jacket.

"You're a pretty good sport," Bobby observed. And from that time on he addressed his royal highness as "old sport."

"Walk faster, old sport," he would say. "That candle's pretty short, and we've got a long way to go." Or: "Say, old sport, I'll make you a mask like this, if you like. I made this one."

When they reached the old dungeon the candle was about done. There was only time to fashion another black mask out of a piece of cloth that bore a strange resemblance to a black waistcoat. The Crown Prince donned this with a wildly beating heart. Never in all his life had he been so excited. Even Dick Deadeye was excited and gave up his scenting of strange footsteps that he had followed through the passage, to watch proceedings.

"We can get another candle, and come back and cook something," said the senior pirate, tying the mask on with pieces of brown string. "It gets pretty smoky, but I can cook, you'd better believe."

"As you haven't got a belt," Bobby said generously, "I'll give you the rifle. Ever hold a gun?"

"Oh, yes," said the Crown Prince. He did not explain that he had been taught to shoot on the rifle range of his own regiment, and had won quite a number of medals. He possessed, indeed, quite a number of small but very perfect guns.

With the last gasp of the candle, the children prepared to depart. The senior pirate had already forgotten the two men he had trailed through the passage, and was eager to get outdoors.

"Ready!" he said. "Now, remember, old sport, we are pirates. No quarter, except to women and children. Shoot every man."

"Even if he is unarmed?" inquired the Crown Prince, who had also studied strategy and tactics and felt that an unarmed man should be taken prisoner.

"Sure. We don't really shoot them, silly. Now. Get in step."

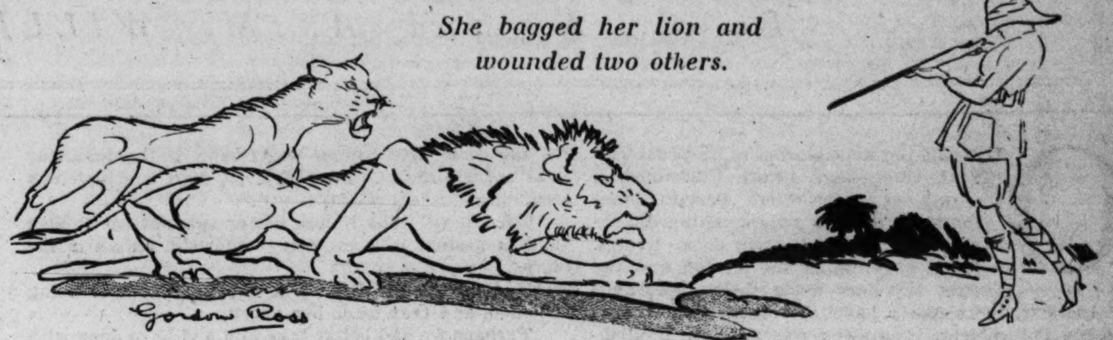
OUR NEWEST RED CROSS WORKER

ENGLAND'S SUPER-SPORTSWOMAN

Mrs. William A. Gavin, granddaughter of the Earl of Harrowby, has played with the best of men golfers of this country and defeated Jerome Travers in a handicap match — In addition she was one of the first women in England to take up flying, and "adores" to hunt lions in South Africa—Now she has gone in for fancy skating and dancing

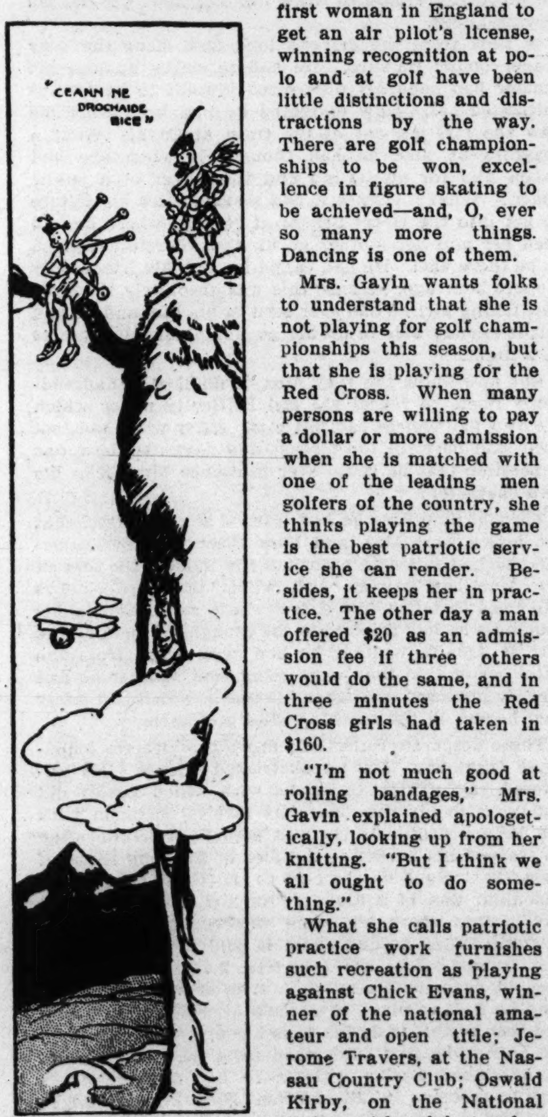


She bagged her lion and wounded two others.

MEET Mrs. William A. Gavin, granddaughter of the Earl of Harrowby and a descendant of the ducal houses of Sutherland and Buccleuch. That introduction might have opened the doors of New York's most exclusive homes to a charming little British woman, but how it would have made Mrs. Gavin laugh. Fancy going through life with your chin in the air because your grandfather was a nobleman!

Mrs. Gavin thinks it is ever so much more satisfying to be known as the metropolitan golf champion. She expects to go on creating her own claims to distinction for many years to come. She admits that she is only getting started. The world is so full of things worth tackling that she is going to be tremendously busy getting all the ambitions on her list checked off. And the trouble is that the list keeps growing, like the list of books one wants to read.

Shooting lions in Africa, careering through the air over the heather-clad hills of Scotland, being the first woman to fly across the English Channel and the first woman in England to get an air pilot's license, winning recognition at polo and at golf have been little distinctions and distractions by the way. There are golf championships to be won, excellence in figure skating to be achieved—and, O, ever so many more things. Dancing is one of them.



She got started through the simple expedient of being pushed off the edge of a mountain.

Mrs. Gavin wants folks to understand that she is not playing for golf championships this season, but that she is playing for the Red Cross. When many persons are willing to pay a dollar or more admission when she is matched with one of the leading men golfers of the country, she thinks playing the game is the best patriotic service she can render. Besides, it keeps her in practice. The other day a man offered $20 as an admission fee if three others would do the same, and in three minutes the Red Cross girls had taken in $160.

"I'm not much good at rolling bandages," Mrs. Gavin explained apologetically, looking up from her knitting. "But I think we all ought to do something."

What she calls patriotic practice work furnishes such recreation as playing against Chick Evans, winner of the national amateur and open title; Jerome Travers, at the Nassau Country Club; Oswald Kirby, on the National links; with club professionals at Piping Rock, Balustrol, Hackensack, Rochester, Montclair, Sleepy Hollow and with her own countryman, "Long Jim" Barnes, on the links of the Wykagyl Country Club.

In that odd, bantering British way of dodging praise, Mrs. Gavin discountenances her past achievements. Admitting that she defeated Jerome Travers in a nine-stroke handicap match last summer, she added:

"I was driving very badly last year. This summer I am doing much better."

She remarked that her average is about 225 yards, setting it down without the faintest suggestion of elaborate emphasis, just as if any woman might send a ball spinning from a tee to a green.

Mrs. Gavin's iron play and her wonderful short game have caused golfers to marvel ever since she came to this country two years ago. When asked to divulge the secret of her iron success she explained:

Mrs. William A. Gavin.

"I cut my teeth on a cleek."

After a while she admitted that her father taught her on the links at Nairn, near Inverness, but she couldn't remember when she began to play. She would like to encourage every woman in the land to play golf, because it is such healthful sport.

Mrs. Gavin likes to surprise people.

"You expected to see an imposing, athletic person, now didn't you? she persisted.

Laughing blue eyes, wayward brown curls, chiffon and French heels, and a peculiarly feminine charm—that is Mrs. Gavin. And she looked so little against the old rose pillows in her pretty apartment.

Getting the famous feminine golfer to talk on how she does it is exhilarating. First thing you know she turns interviewer. She wants to know if you know anything about golf courses in places she has not visited, and you are kept busy answering questions until your little fund of knowledge is exhausted and the information has been indexed beneath the riot of brown curls.

"You Americans are wonderful," she apostrophized. "You got golf from us, and see what you've done with it! I think it is the most amazing thing the way the Americans have left us behind. Your country clubs are the loveliest things in civilization. That sort of thing couldn't flourish in England. If we all got together the way you do, we'd sit around and sniff at each other. We haven't your fine sense of sociability. It appeals to me because it is breezy and healthy and open. I wish we could do that sort of thing well, but we just can't."

"I cut my teeth on a cleek."

Golfers call Mrs. Gavin the greatest British stylist. But she does not know how she acquired her style. She carried off her first honors eight years ago on the Westward Ho course. The next year she played with the English group in the Irish championship at Portrush. She admitted that the American golfers have given her one surprise after another. She likes golf, but thinks it is harder than hunting lions, because it requires more sustained effort.

"I adore lion hunting," she declared.

It was Paul Rainey's aid, Shelly, who conducted the party of hunters with whom she penetrated the African jungles. Shelly is the only man who ever had the nerve to scold little Mrs. Gavin. Seeing a chance for adventure on her own account, she deliberately separated herself from the rest of the hunting party, bagged her lion and wounded two others. When Shelly told her she deserved to be eaten alive for such conduct, she shook her head at him defiantly, pointed to the lion at her feet, and asked him what he supposed she would be doing while the beast was getting ready to eat her.

"I spotted two of them right over to your right," he told her.

"I saw them, too," she protested, "and I wish you'd send the men to bring them in."

When Mrs. Gavin was learning airplaning in Scotland, people thought she was crazy. Navigating the air was more of a novelty in those days. Her first flying was not up, but down. Her practice flights were made off high cliffs, and she got started through the simple expedient of being pushed off the edge of a mountain. By the time the war began she thought she was qualified for military service. But the officials didn't want feminine flyers. Soon after that her husband came to this country on war business and she came along, and likes it so well that she wants to stay.

Getting Rid of Courts and Lawyers

the plaintiff had $200 in a savings bank which he had saved during seven years of hard work; that the defendant had a small home, heavily mortgaged, on which she was paying monthly installments. Instead of allowing the case to proceed in the usual manner, the Judge asked the defendant if it was true she said the young man was a thief and that he stole her money. She emphatically denied this. A statement was then drawn up by the Judge reading as follows:

"I, the defendant, in this case, declare in open court that I never said that the young man was a thief or that he stole my money. In my opinion he is an honest and industrious young man."

She gladly signed it and the Judge signed and attached the seal of the court to it. When the same statement was submitted to the plaintiff he clapped his hands with glee and exclaimed: "That's fine; I got my reputation back." The whole proceeding took five minutes. All the parties involved, including the witnesses, were very happy at the disposition of the case—all except the lawyers. It was reported by the elevator man that what the lawyers said about the Judge could not be safely repeated in polite company or in the presence of ladies.

In Cleveland, around 1200 cases such as these were settled out of court in one year. Since the establishment of the court nearly 7300 cases have been disposed of and the cost to the litigants was between 25 and 55 cents in each case.

LONG LIVE THE KING!

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE PIRATE'S DEN.

MISS BRAITHWAITE was asleep on the couch in her sitting room, deeply asleep, so that when Prince Ferdinand William Otto changed the cold cloth on her head, she did not even move. The Countess Loschek had brought her some medicine.

"It cured her very quickly," said the Crown Prince, shuffling the cards with clumsy fingers. He and Nikky were playing a game in which matches represented money. The Crown Prince had won nearly all of them and was quite pink with excitement. "It's my deal, isn't it? When she goes to sleep like that, she nearly always wakens up much better. She's very sound asleep."

Nikky played absently and lost the game. The Crown Prince triumphantly scooped up the rest of the matches. "We've had rather a nice day," he observed, "even if we didn't go out. Shall we divide them again, and start all over?"

Nikky, however, proclaimed himself hopelessly beaten and a bad loser. So the Crown Prince put away the cards, which belonged to Miss Braithwaite, and with which she played solitaire in the evenings. Then he lounged to the window, his hands in his pockets. There was something on his mind which the Chancellor's reference to Hedwig's picture had recalled. Something he wished to say to Nikky, without looking at him.

So he cleared his throat and looked out the window, and said, very casually:

"Hilda says that Hedwig is going to get married."

"So I hear, highness."

"She doesn't seem to be very happy about it. She's crying most of the time."

It was Nikky's turn to clear his throat. "Marriage is a serious matter," he said. "It is not to be gone into lightly."

"Once, when I asked you about marriage you said marriage was when two people loved each other, and wanted to be together the rest of their lives."

"Well," hedged Nikky, "that is the idea, rather."

"I should think," said Prince Ferdinand William Otto, slightly red, "that you would marry her yourself."

Nikky being beyond speech for an instant and looking, had his royal highness but seen him, very tragic and somewhat rigid, the Crown Prince went on:

"She's a very nice girl," he said. "I think she would make a good wife."

There was something of reproach in his tone. He had confidently planned that Nikky would marry Hedwig, and that they could all live on forever in the palace. But, the way things were going, Nikky might marry anybody, and go away to live, and he would lose him.

"Yes," said Nikky, in a strange voice, "she—I am sure she would make a good wife."

At which Prince Ferdinand William Otto turned and looked at him. "I wish you would marry her yourself," he said with his nearest approach to impatience. "I think she'd be willing. I'll ask her, if you want me to."

Half-past three, then, and Nikky trying to explain, within the limits of the boy's understanding of life, his position. Members of royal families, he said, looking far away, over the child's head, had to do many things for the good of the country. And marrying was one of them. Something of old Mettlich's creed of prosperity for the land he gave, something of his own hopelessness, too, without knowing it. He sat, bent forward, his hands swung between his knees, and tried to visualize, for Otto's understanding and his own heartache, the results of such a marriage.

Some of it the boy grasped. A navy, ships, a railroad to the sea—those he could understand. Treaties were beyond his comprehension. And, with a child's singleness of idea, he returned to the marriage.

"I'm sure she doesn't care about it," he said at last. "If I were King I would not let her do it. And"—he sat very erect and swung his short legs—"when I grow up, I shall fight for a navy, if I want one, and I shall marry whoever I like."

At 3:45 Olga Loschek was announced. She made the curtsy inside the door that palace ceremonial demanded and inquired for the governess. Prince Ferdinand William Otto, who had risen at her entrance, offered to see if she still slept.

"I think you are a very good doctor," he said, smiling, and went out to Miss Braithwaite's sitting room.

It was then that Olga Loschek played the last card, and won. She moved quickly to Nikky's side.

"I have a message for you," she said.

A light leaped into Nikky's eyes. "For me?"

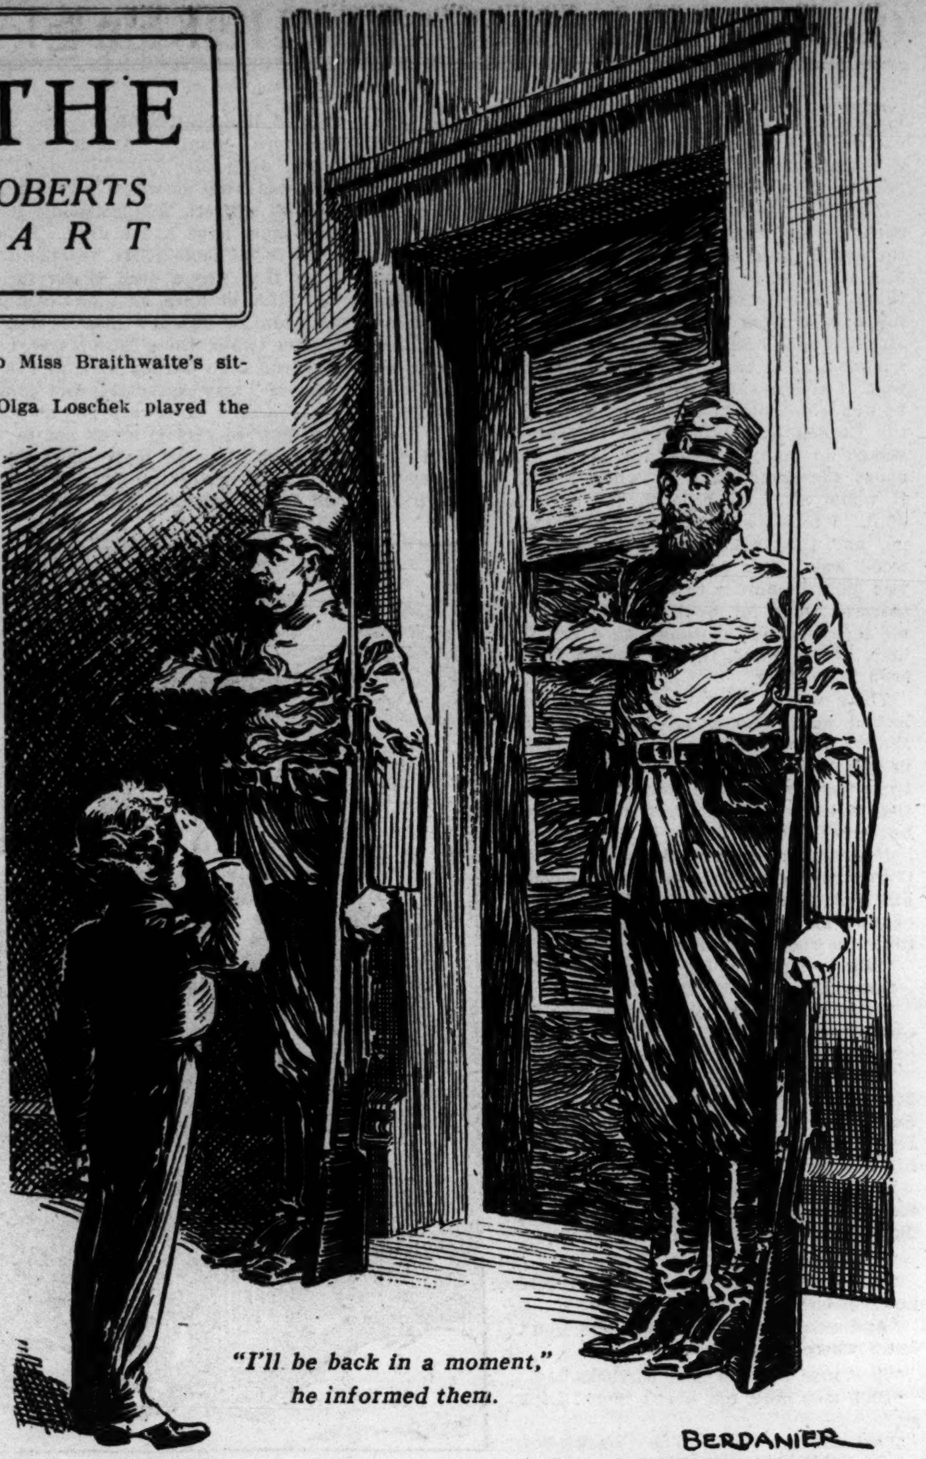
"Do you know where my boudoir is?"

"I—yes, Countess."

"If you will go there at once and wait, someone will see you there as soon as possible." She put her hand on his arm. "Don't be foolish and proud," she said. "She is sorry—about last night, and she is very unhappy."

The light faded out of Nikky's eyes. She was unhappy and he could do nothing. They had a way, in the palace, of binding one's hands and leaving one helpless. He could not even go to her.

"I cannot go, Countess," he said. "She must understand. Today, of all days"



"I'll be back in a moment," he informed them.

"You mean that you cannot leave the Crown Prince?" She shrugged her shoulders. "You, too! Never have I seen so many faint hearts, such rolling eyes, such shaking knees! And for what! Because a few timid souls see a danger that does not exist."

"I think it does exist," said Nikky obstinately.

"I am to take word to her, then, that you will not come?"

"That I cannot."

"You are a very foolish boy," said the Countess, watching him. "And since you are so fearful, I myself will remain here. There are sentries at the doors, and a double guard everywhere. What, in the name of all that is absurd, can possibly happen?"

That was when she won. For Nikky, who has never been, in all this history, anything of a hero, and all of the romantic and loving boy—Nikky wavered and fell.

When Prince Ferdinand William Otto returned, it was with the word that Miss Braithwaite still slept, and that she looked very comfortable, Nikky was gone, and the Countess stood by a window, holding to the sill to support her shaking body.

It was done. The boy was in her hands. There was left only to deliver him to those who, even now, were on the way. Nikky was safe. He would wait in her boudoir, and Hedwig would not come. She had sent no message. She was, indeed, at that moment, a part of one of those melancholy family groups which, the world over, in palace or peasant's hut, await the coming of death.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto chatted. He got out the picture frame for Hedwig, which was finished now, with the exception of burning his initials in the lower left-hand corner. After inquiring politely if the smell of burning would annoy her, the Crown Prince drew a rather broken-backed "F," a weak-kneed "W" and an irregular "O" in the corner and proceeded to burn them in. He sat bent over the desk, the very tip of his tongue protruding, and worked conscientiously and carefully. Between each letter he burned a dot.

Suddenly, Olga Loschek became panic stricken. She could not stay and see this thing out. Let them follow and punish her. She could not. She had done her part. The governess lay in a drugged sleep. A turn of the key, and the door to the passage beyond which Oskar waited would be closed off. Let follow what must, she would not see it.

The boy still bent over his work. She wandered about the room, casually, as if examining the pictures on the wall. She stopped, for a bitter moment, before Hedwig's photograph, and, for a shaken one, before those of Prince Hubert and his wife. Then she turned the key and shut Oskar safely away.

"Highness," she said, "Lieut. Larisch will be here in a moment. Will you permit me to go?"

Otto was off his chair in an instant. "Certainly," he said, his mind still on the "O" which he was shading.

Old habit was strong in the Countess. Although the boy's rank was numbered by moments, although his life was possibly to be counted by hours, she turned at the doorway and swept him a curtsy. Then she went out and closed the door behind her.

The two sentries stood outside. They were of the Terrorists. She knew, and they knew she knew. But neither one made a sign. They stared ahead, and Olga Loschek went out between them.

Now the psychology of the small boy is a curious thing. It is, for one thing, retentive. Ideas become, given time, obsessions. And obsessions are likely to lead to action.

The Crown Prince Ferdinand William Otto was only a small boy, for all his title and dignity. And suddenly he felt lonely. Left alone, he returned to his expectations for the day, and compared them with the facts. He remembered other carnivals, with his car-

The Presumption of Lord Belever

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON

OUTSIDE the little station at Cava del Tirreni, three days before Christmas, a crowd of interpreters, porters, hotel touts and cabmen were awaiting the arrival of the quick train from Naples. As it drew up in the station and the first travelers made their appearance at the exit, there rose a babel of voices. Conspicuous among the vehicles in waiting was a smart English-looking four-in-hand, driven by a handsome, acquiline-faced young man, so dark of skin that he might well have passed for an Italian. At the heads of the impatient horses stood an impassive English groom.

Young Lord Belever, who was driving his own coach, scanned eagerly, from under the brim of his smart bowler, the persons who came crowding out of the station. His eyes lighted with pleasure as a girl appeared in the doorway, followed by an older lady, and two porters, carrying luggage and wraps. A dash of Parisian smartness in the lines of the well-cut traveling dress and the perfectly fitting boots, a more than Anglo-Saxon frankness and independence of carriage, announced the girl as an American. She was slim and tall, with dark-lashed, gray eyes, and chestnut hair that curled upon her white neck in distracting tendrils. She walked with a gracious, elastic step, like one accustomed to admiration and obedience. There was kindliness in the candid gray eyes, determination in the well-formed chin, pride in the haughty curve of the short upper lip. The lady who accompanied the beauty of 19 was 20 years older, and the resemblance in features showed them to be mother and daughter.

A driver bent down from the box of his carriage, and, in answer to a question from the young lady, in elementary Italian, demanded 14 francs for the drive to Amalfi.

"But 'Baedeker' says the tariff is 5 or 6," expostulated the girl. Her Italian was fluent, if the grammar was a little shaky. Lord Belever, from his high box seat, heard every word.

"Baedeker!" The Italian driver snapped his fingers with a gesture of contempt. "Fourteen francs is the fare."

The girl bit her lips. She thought she was being cheated, and that made her angry.

"Perhaps we had better take him and have done with it, dear," suggested the elder lady. "It doesn't matter much, you know. There are not many carriages left. If we bargain too long, we may get none."

"Mamma," exclaimed the beauty, "I hate to be cheated."

She looked round, and, catching sight of Belever's pawing, glossy bays, her pleased eyes traveled in one glance up to the box seat, where the young man sat looking eagerly down on her.

"Why, mamma," exclaimed the girl, "if there isn't a perfectly lovely coach, and I believe the man wants to drive us!"

"It's sure to be more than the cab, dear."

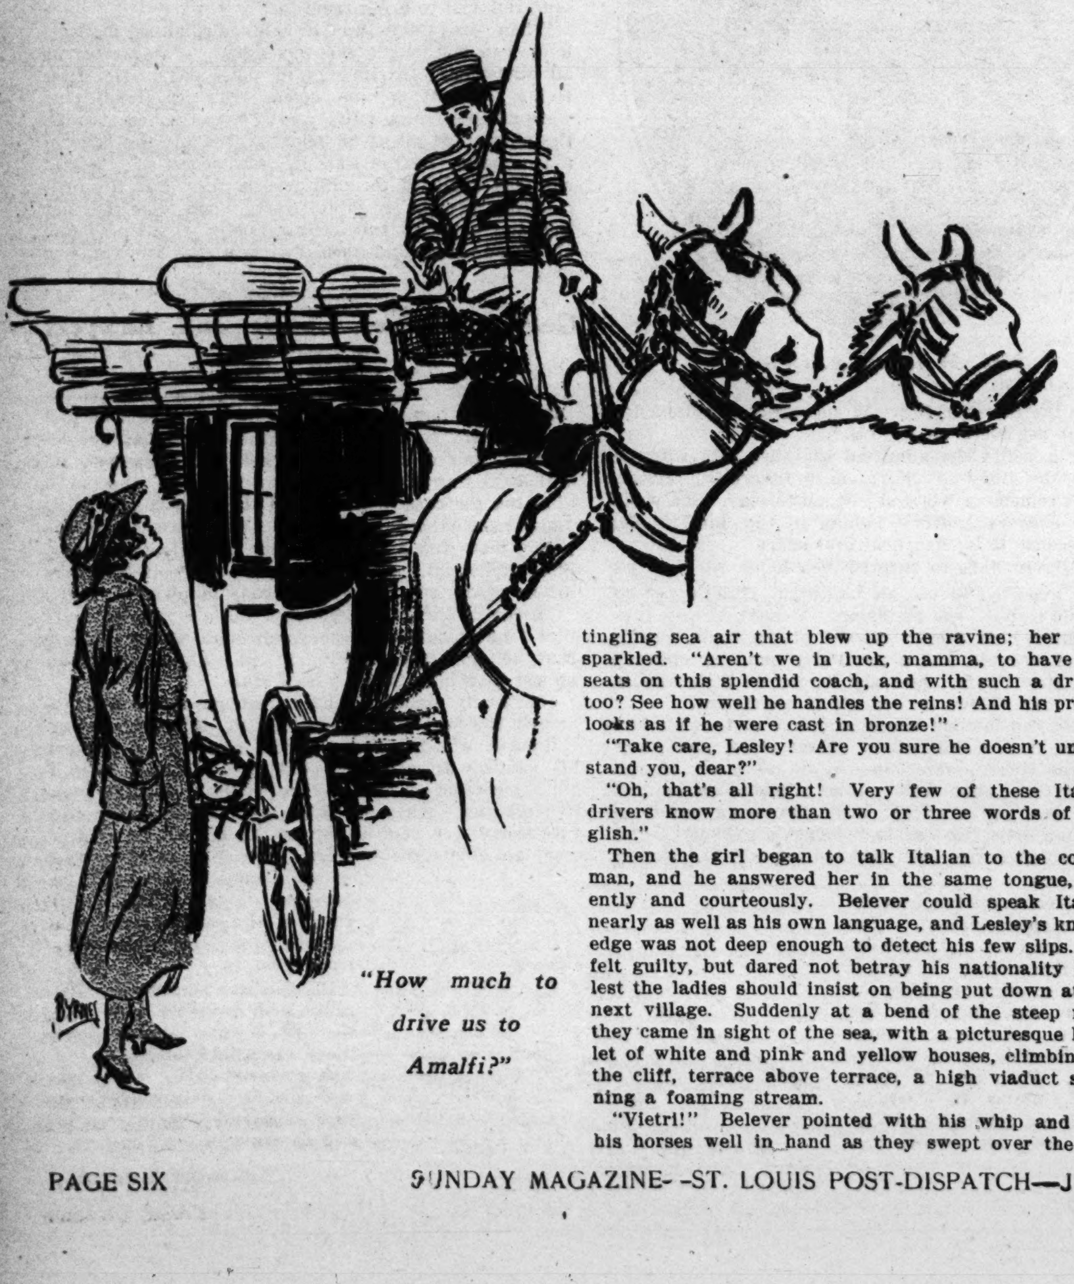
"How much to drive us to Amalfi?" cried the girl.

"Five francs each, ladies," was the prompt answer, in good Italian, the language in which the coachman had been addressed.

"Bene," came the quick reply, and the girl signed to the porters to put the bags and wraps inside the coach.

The groom, hiding a grin, ran with a ladder; the elder lady mounted to a place behind the driver, the beauty climbing to the box seat. With a flick of the long whip the bays dashed forward; in another moment the flashing coach was rattling over the rough stone pavement of the little town of Cava, and down the sloping country road that followed the winding ravine to the sparkling sea.

"I call this too glorious for words!" The beauty's cheeks were tinged with carmine, brought there by the tingling sea air that blew up the ravine; her eyes sparkled. "Aren't we in luck, mamma, to have got seats on this splendid coach, and with such a driver, too? See how well he handles the reins! And his profile looks as if he were cast in bronze!"



"How much to drive us to Amalfi?"

"Take care, Lesley! Are you sure he doesn't understand you, dear?"

"Oh, that's all right! Very few of these Italian drivers know more than two or three words of English."

Then the girl began to talk Italian to the coachman, and he answered her in the same tongue, fluently and courteously. Belever could speak Italian nearly as well as his own language, and Lesley's knowledge was not deep enough to detect his few slips. He felt guilty, but dared not betray his nationality now, lest the ladies should insist on being put down at the next village. Suddenly at a bend of the steep road, they came in sight of the sea, with a picturesque hamlet of white and pink and yellow houses, climbing up the cliff, terrace above terrace, a high viaduct spanning a foaming stream.

"Vietri!" Belever pointed with his whip and held his horses well in hand as they swept over the viaduct, and started at a gallop up the opposite hill. The ladies sat silent, spellbound by the beauty suddenly opened to them.

"Well, mamma," cried Lesley, turning in her place, "we've had a splendid time in Europe, haven't we? We've seen and done such a lot of things. But I believe I like Italy best of all. Of course, Egypt was gorgeous, and Greece was lovely"——

"And England," prompted the mother.

"England was sweet. But it was disappointing in one way. Only fancy our not meeting one single, solitary, real, live Lord. I shall be ashamed to go home. My country expected it of me. And—I failed. Such a shame we should have missed Lord Belever! When I brought three new dresses on purpose, too."

Belever started. This was a nice scrape he had got himself into. But he didn't see any way out of it now. He could not suddenly exclaim: "Behold, I am Lord Belever!" He had seldom been more uncomfortable; but the worst of it was that he found himself base enough to snatch a fearful joy from the situation.

"I dare say he would have been most uninteresting when you came to know him," the girl's mother proceeded to console her.

"But the Dering-Lacys said he was awfully clever and good looking, don't you remember? I was so looking forward to our one country house visit in England; and, of course, it was very nice, but it did seem an anti-climax when the very man I'd been invited to flirt with never turned up after all. Oh, what he missed!" and she laughed.

Belever could cheerfully have kicked himself. To think that he might have met this divine creature in a decent, self-respecting manner, if only he hadn't sent an unworthy excuse to those dull but good people, the Dering-Lacys.

A flick from the driver's long lash made the near leader bound forward. He had to suffer because his master had suddenly discovered himself to be an unmitigated ass. How delighted he had been when he saw the girl get out of the train at Cava! What a magnificent joke he had thought it when she had taken him for an Italian and the driver of a public coach! What a chance it had seemed after his failure to get into the Hotel Bristol at Naples, where he had seen her and her mother go in, and, therefore, longed to be there also. He had called fortune his friend only a short hour ago, because this was absolutely the most bewitching girl he had ever seen in his life, and he had felt it unendurable to let her go like a ship that passes in a night.

But now—now the rosy mist of disillusion had suddenly risen, to reveal the hill Difficulty under which his own foolishness had left him. After what had just been said between the mother and daughter, how was it possible that he could ever introduce himself in his own character?

Through inquiries he had learned at the Bristol that the ladies were Mrs. and Miss Fleetwood, but somehow he had failed to associate the name with that of the American heiress with whom the Dering-Lacys had tried to tempt him a few weeks ago. And in his blindness he had rejoiced in the thought of meeting the girl at Amalfi, whither he had ascertained from the hotel porter that they were going, and whither he had already purposed driving in his coach, which had lately won honors in the coaching meet at Naples.

These desperate reflections drove the hitherto loquacious coachman into an abstracted silence. He answered vaguely the questions with which Lesley did not cease to ply the "perfectly lovely coachman with the bronze profile." He was actually relieved when he stopped his horses at the foot of the long flight of steps that wound up the cliff to the Hotel Cappuccini. His mind was in a tumult. He, too, was due at the Cappuccini, where his room was engaged; but now he hesitated to go and claim it, and to appear in his own person before the American ladies. The craven thought came to his mind that he should run away; then he half resolved to declare himself at once. He had been unable to decide upon a course of action when the ladies prepared to descend from the coach. Then he overheard Lesley whisper to her mother: "He's been so nice and intelligent, don't you think we might give him a couple of francs for himself?" Before he could speak, the girl had placed 12 francs in his hand, wishing him a smiling good-by.

Belever hesitated. To speak, or not to speak—which was wiser in the mind of man? But he found himself maintaining his part by uttering a deferential, "Molte hospital. Swatts kept right along behind me, and every time I would stop to rest he would poke me with a broom—the only broom I saw in Germany—and laugh and point to his ear.

Then I thought it was a frameup and that he was getting even with me, but I was in for it then, and the best I could do was to go through with it. But I was all in when we reached the hospital. The first thing I saw when we got in the door was another negro, also from Barbadoes, and as tall and thin as Jim had once been short and fat. This black boy and I made a great team, but I never knew what his name was. I always called him Kate, because night and day he was whistling the old song, "Kate, Kate, Meet Me at the Garden Gate," or words to that effect. I have waked up many a night and heard that whistle just about the same place as when I had fallen asleep. It would not have been so bad if he had known all of it. I took Swatts' broom and cleaned up, and then asked where the coal or wood was. This got a great laugh. It was quite humorous to the men who had shivered there for weeks, maybe, but to me it was about as funny as a cry for help. I got wood, though, before I had been there long.

There was a great big cupboard, that looked more like a small house, built against the wall of the hospital barracks in one corner of the room, and not far from the stove. Kate was the only patient able to be on his feet, so I thought he would have to be my chief cook and bottle washer for a while; and besides, there was something about him that made him look pretty valuable. I had not recognized his whistling yet, so Slim looked to be the right name for him.

"Slim, what's that big cupboard for?"

"How'd I know? Nuthin' in it."

"Slim, that would make a fine box for coal or wood, wouldn't it?"

"Um. Whar de coal an' wood?"

"I'm going out and take observations, Slim. Take the wheel while I'm gone, and keep your eye peeled for U-boats." So I sneaked out the door, and began looking around.

It did not take me long to see that next to us was a vacated Russian barracks. Back to the hospital and Slim..

"Slim, what barracks are next to us?"

"Russian barracks, only dey ain't dere now. Been sick."

"And you mean to tell me you don't know where to get wood?"

"Sick men been in dem barrucks."

"Sick men here, too, aren't there? Let's go."

That did the trick. The black boy would watch from the hospital windows until he saw the coast was clear, then we would slip into the barracks next door, and he would watch again. When there was no sentry near enough to hear us, crash! and out would come a dividing board from the bunks. When we had an armful apiece and had broken them up to the right lengths, all we needed was a little more watching, and then back to the hospital and the big cupboard. Later on, our men told me they used to watch the smoke that poured from the hospital chimney all the time, and wonder where on earth we got the wood.

We got the same kind of food in the hospital that was served in the other barracks, and I would not have had any more than I used to, except that sometimes some of the 26 patients could not eat their share, and then, of course, it was mine. One day, though, we all had extra rations.

Two Russian doctors came to visit us each day, and once they were foolish enough, or kind enough, to ask if we had received our rations—we had received them earlier than usual and they were finished at the time. Of course, I said no, so they ordered the Russian in the kitchen to deliver 28 rations to us, which was not quite three loaves of bread. We were that much ahead that day, but it would not work when I tried the trick again.

One day a German doctor came to the hospital barracks. He would not touch anything while he was there—not even open the door. All of the patients had little cards attached to their beds—charts of their condition. When the German wanted to see these charts, the Russian doctors had to hold them for him.

I was having a great time at the hospital, wrecking the barracks next door each day for wood, along with Kate, and getting a little more food sometimes, and was always nice and warm. I thought myself quite a pet. Compared to what I had been up against, it seemed like real comfort. But the more food I got, the more I wanted. And it was food that brought me down, after all.

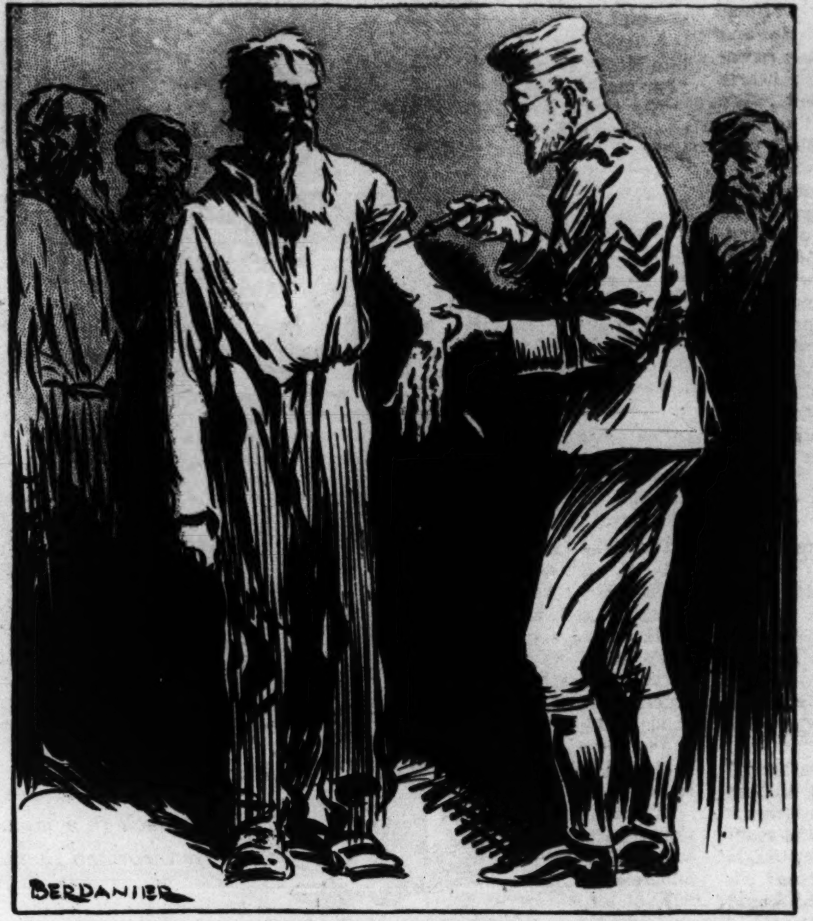
Across from us was a barracks in which there were English officers, and somehow it seemed to me that they must have had a drag. Every once in a while, I saw what looked like vegetables and bags of something that was a dead ringer for brown flour. So I told Slim, or Kate, as I was calling him by then, and with him on guard, I sneaked out.

After two or three false starts, I got over our barbed wire and their barbed wire, and in through a window.

There I saw carrots! And graham flour!

I took all I could carry, to divide up with Kate, and then started eating, so as not to waste anything. It was certainly some feast—the only things besides mud bread and barley coffee and "shadow" soup that I had to eat in Germany. Then I started back to the hospital. I got over their barbed wire all right, and Kate gave me the go-ahead for our entanglements, but just as I was going over them a sentry nabbed me. At first I thought Kate had turned traitor, because we had had a little argument a short time before, when I got tired of his whistling and told him to eat a little cuttlefish and begin molting.

But later on, I figured that he would not have done a trick like that, and besides, he knew I was bringing him something to eat. So the sentry must have sneaked up without Kate seeing him. Who got the carrots and graham flour that I was carrying I do not know. The sentries booted me all the way back to my old barracks.



We heard from the prisoners there before us that the Germans had come through the camps with word that there was an epidemic of black typhus and cholera, and that the only thing for the men to do was to take the serum treatment to avoid catching these diseases.

DESPAIR—AND FREEDOM.

While I was working at the hospital, conditions at my old barracks had been getting worse and worse. Very few of the men were absolutely right in the head, I guess, and almost all had given up hope of ever getting out alive. Though they put up a good front to the Huns, they really did not care a great deal what happened to them. The only thing to think about was the minute they were living in.

The day I came back, two Englishmen, who had suddenly gone mad, commenced to fight each other. It was the most terrible fight I have ever seen. It was some time before the rest of us could make them quit, because at first, we did not know they were crazy. When we had them down, however, they were scratched and bitten and pounded from head to foot. Both of them bled from the nose all that night, and toward morning one of them became sane for a few minutes and then died. The other was taken away by the Germans, still crazy.

Another time an Australian came into our barracks, and very seriously told us that he had a drag with the German officers and that he had been to dinner with them, and had had turkey, potatoes, coffee, butter, eggs, sugar in his coffee, and all the luxuries you could think of. We just sat and stared at him. It seemed impossible that any of our own men would have the gall to torture us like that, and yet, we could not possibly believe that it had really happened. Finally, one fellow could not stand it any longer. He was nothing but skin and bones, but he grabbed a dividing board and there were just two wallops—the board hit the Australian's head and the head hit the floor. Then half a dozen more bounced onto him and gave him a real licking. When he came to, he had forgotten all about the wonderful dinner he did not have.

Not long after this, the Russian doctors proved to the Germans that there was no black typhus in our barracks, and we were allowed the freedom of the camp, except that we could not visit the Russian barracks. That was no hardship to me, nor to the rest of us, except one chap from the Cambrian Range, who had a special pal among the Russians that he wanted to see. And, of course, when it was verboten, he wanted to see him all the more.

A day or two after the order, I was standing outside the barracks door when I saw this fellow come out, with a dividing board in his hand. I thought he was going to smash somebody with it, so I stood by. But he stooped over and jammed one end of the board against the threshhold of the door, scratched the ground with the farther end of the board, and measured again. He kept this up, length by length, in the direction of the Russian barracks. The sentry in the yard stopped and stared at him, but the fellow kept right on, paying no attention to anybody. Pretty soon he was right by the sentry's feet and I thought any minute the sentry would give him the butt, but he just stared a while and let him pass. That lad measured the whole distance to the Russian barracks, went inside, stayed a while, and calmly strolled back with the board under his arm. When he reached our barracks again, he told us he had found a vino mine. What he really had found was something not so unusual—a bonehead German.

There was a lot of bamboo near the Russian barracks, and the Russians made baskets out of it and turned them in to the Germans. For this they got all the good jobs in the kitchen, and had a fine chance to get more to eat. But they were treated like dogs—that is, all except the few Cossacks that were in the bunch. The Huns knew that a Cossack never forgets, and will get revenge for the slightest mistreatment, even if it means his death. I have seen sentries turn aside from the beat they were walking and get out of the way when they saw a Cossack coming. There were very few Cossacks there, however. I do not think they let themselves get captured very often.

We had roll call every morning, of course, and were always mustered in front of our barracks, the middle of the line being right at the barracks door. Sometimes when the cold got too much for them, the men nearest the door would duck into the barracks. As they left the ranks the other men would close up and this kept the line even, with the center still opposite the barracks door. Finally, almost all of the men would be in the barracks, and by the time the roll was over, not one remained outside. This seemed to peeve the German officers a great deal, but they did not punish us for it until we had been doing it for some time.

For several days I had noticed that someone else answered for two men who had disappeared; at least, I had not seen them for some time. I did not think much about it, or ask any questions, and I did not hear anyone else talk about it, but I was pretty sure the two men, a Russian and a Britisher, had escaped. But they were marked present at roll call and all accounted for. Everything went along very well, until one day when the name "Fontaine" got by without being answered. Fontaine was a French fireman from the Cambrian Range, and that was the first time he had not been present.

grazie, signorina." His manner was changed, however, his gaiety eclipsed and his dark eyes fell guiltily before the frank, friendly gaze of the American girl.

Belever turned his smoking team and walked them back to their stable in the town, where he left coach and horses in the hands of his groom. Strolling slowly back to the Cappuccini steps, his courage suddenly returned to him. He would face the music, brave out the situation and trust to his own tact and the ladies' sense of humor to save the position. One thing only was impossible—to give up the adventure and see the girl no more. He mounted the many steps, received a warm welcome from the handsome and effusive Italian landlord, and in the visitor's book set a firm, clear "Belever, England," immediately under the clever, characteristic writing in which Lesley had inscribed the names of "Mrs. and Miss Fleetwood, New York, U. S. A."

Until the gong clashed out the hour of dinner, Belever kept his room, writing letters, slowly changing into his evening clothes, stopping every now and then to lean upon his window ledge and gaze out upon the incomparable beauty of Amalfi. He was among the earliest persons in the long, vaulted dining room, once the refectory of the Capuchins, and a word in the ear and a coin in the hand of the head waiter, procured him a place next to Miss Fleetwood. This arranged, he retired a little and mingled with the throng of English, French and Americans who were trooping in to dinner. In a moment or two he saw Mrs. Fleetwood and her daughter coming in from the reading room, Lesley in a simple but charming white evening dress, shining in his eyes, among the other women, like a rare flower among weeds.

When the two ladies were seated, Belever grasped his courage in both hands, and, with a thumping heart, took the vacant place by Lesley's side. The girl looked up. Her eyes widened with wonder as she gave him a quick, surprised glance; then a gleam of merriment flashed into her face; and a rich, warm blush reddened her cheeks, tinging even the shell-like ear. Belever saw, with infinite relief, that the first encounter was to be decided in his favor. He smiled and bowed, looking very handsome in his evening dress.

"I hope," he ventured, "that you are not tired after your drive."

Mrs. Fleetwood was looking at him across her daughter.

"Is it possible"—— she had begun.

"I'm afraid it is, mamma," Lesley cut in mischievously. "Somewhere there's been a very big mistake. Whether it's our fault or this gentleman's, I don't know."

"Let me take all the blame," said Belever hastily, "if blame there be, for letting myself appear to be what I am not. It was hard to withstand the temptation of having two ladies as companions on the drive."

"And I—made personal remarks, and gave you two francs for yourself!" Lesley threw up two little hands in horror.

"It was the sincerest compliment I ever received," said Belever. "I shall always keep the coin in recollection of the pleasantest drive of my life." He was wonderfully happy again by this time.

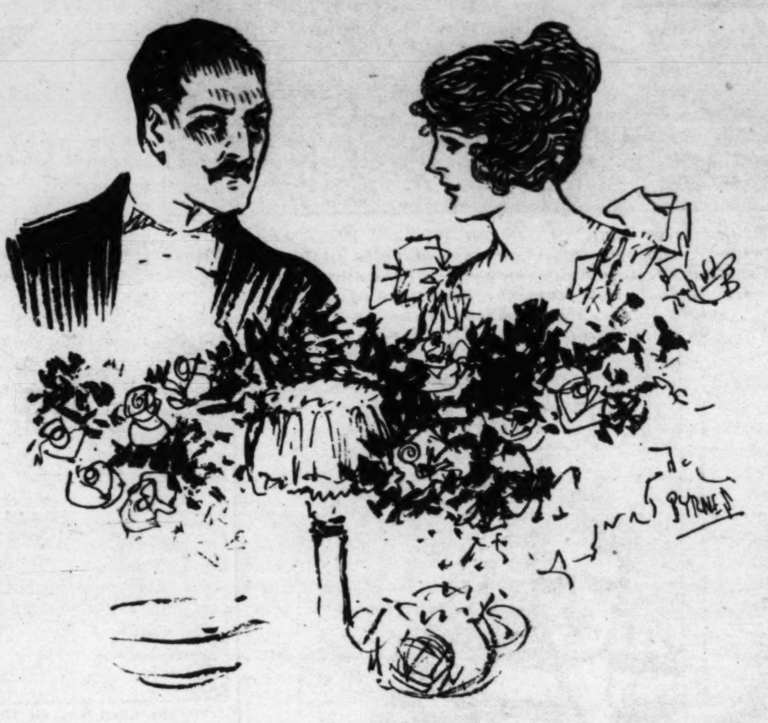
"And that was really your own coach, and you are not an Italian?"

"I am as little Italian as you are. I drive my coach for my own pleasure about this coast. I have rented one of those old watch towers which we passed on the way, and am having it furnished and fitted up for me now. It would give me great pleasure if you will take tea with me there one afternoon."

"That would be delightful," Lesley exclaimed; but her forehead had a little thoughtful pucker, and she spoke abstractedly. Belever feared that she was trying to recall the things she had said in English to her mother in the course of the drive, and to keep her from a reflection that might be dangerous to himself, he dashed into conversation. Belever could talk well; Lesley was witty and bright, and in a few moments they were far on the road toward acquaintance. Mrs. Fleetwood was talking to an English lady on her left, and Belever had the girl all to himself. He was falling in love as fast as a man possibly could, and was congratulating himself on his marvelous luck, when Lesley shot at him a question that set his blood tingling. He had expected it and dreaded it, yet had hoped that it might be put off until he had been able to establish his friendship with the girl on a firm footing.

"By the way," Lesley was saying, "we saw in the visitors' book that Lord Belever is in the hotel. He seems to have arrived today, for his name is just under ours. Do you know him?"

Lesley had glanced curiously as she spoke along the row of diners lingering over their nuts, and now she turned full to her companion. In spite of himself, he flushed scarlet. He was beginning a stammering reply, when the look on the girl's face checked his words. The truth had flashed into her understanding like a lightning stroke, and she was enduring bitter mortification when she remembered how freely she had spoken of him in his own hearing. Her face first crimsoned, then froze into icy haughtiness. Belever looked at her beseechingly and would have spoken had she not stopped him with a gesture. She murmured something to her mother, both ladies rose, and, turning their backs on Belever, without a word or sign, they joined the crowd moving from the room. The young man had risen also and stood helplessly staring after them. At a touch his card-castle had tumbled into ruin.



"By the way, we saw in the visitor's book that Lord Belever is in the hotel."

The lamps in the long white house were nearly all extinguished when, at last, Belever went to bed, but not to sleep. As soon as it was light the next morning, he was dressed and out, and, taking a small boat on the beach, he pulled out beyond the tiny pier that forms the harbor of Amalfi. Resting on his oars, he looked up to the quaint, white hotel.

Suddenly a window was thrown open and a graceful figure, dressed in a loose, white morning wrapper, stepped out on the balcony. It was she! Belever's heart beat fast as he looked up at the girl he had loved at first sight, standing with one little hand shading her eyes from the sun, drinking in the beauty of the scene. Presently she looked down, as it seemed, into his very eyes. He thought she recognized him, for with an impatient movement she hastily went in, closing the window after her.

Dejectedly, Belever rowed ashore and mounted the long flight of steps to the hotel. He thought of packing up his things at once, and finding another lodging until his own place should be ready for habitation; but a certain obstinacy in his nature held him from this course. After all, was he so much to blame? Had he done a thing too bad for forgiveness? If he frankly apologized to the ladies, ought they not to forget his impulsive error of taste and receive him again on a footing of friendship? He determined to seize the first opportunity for an explanation.

He had not long to wait, for as he was passing down the long corridor on his way to the salle-a-manger for breakfast, a door opened in front of him, and Lesley herself appeared from her bedroom in a becoming dress of poppy-colored cloth. She had not seen him, but he overtook her at the head of the stairs that led down to the dining room.

"Miss Fleetwood," he had begun, appealingly, when she turned on him a look so full of resentment that the words died on his lips. She passed him with a hardening of the dainty features, and her pretty chin in the air. Belever fell back, biting his lip. For the next two or three hours he wandered wretchedly about the ancient town and presently found himself again at the little port, where he began to talk with one of the Italian masons employed on the works for the strengthening of the pier. Suddenly this man broke off in an explanation he was giving of the means by which they transported and sunk the heavy blocks of concrete, and raised a warning finger. With startled eyes he was looking up at the great cliff that rose above the harbor.

"Did you hear that, signore?" he asked in an awed whisper. "It is the mountain working. That is the third time since breakfast I have heard it crack and strain. At 6 this morning the Hotel Santa Caterina cracked."

"Good heavens! Do you mean that the cliff will fall?"

"I think there is great danger, signore. We have had a fortnight's rain, and the building of the Hotel Santa Caterina there has weakened the base of the mountain. I shall go and call the Syndic."

The man started at a run along the highway to the town. Belever gazed fearfully up at the huge impending cliff. As he looked, a group of persons ran out from the Caterina and stood on the terrace gesticulating. They, too, had taken the alarm. Suddenly two ladies detached themselves from the group and darted back into the house. The landlord called after them in vain; then, after a moment of irresolution, he and the servants who were with him rushed to the high road, away from the threatening shadow of the cliff.

Far above him Belever could see that many persons had come out of the Hotel Cappuccini and were assembled on the terrace looking toward the overhanging part of the mountain. He recognized the flowing whiskers of old Signor Vozzi, the landlord, and could see the white aprons and the bright dresses of the servants, mingling with the darker costumes of the hotel guests. Then on the terrace to the left of the house, beyond the cloisters, just under the grotto, he detected a gleam of poppy color and, staring hard, he recognized Lesley Fleetwood, walking slowly up and down, all unconscious of the danger that threatened her.

With a shout Belever started for the grotto. It was approached by a long flight of steps, which turned two or three times until they reached the terrace of the grotto. A frightened group of persons on the high road cried to him to come back; people on the terrace above saw him and waved their arms excitedly. He hardly saw or heard, but, springing up the steps with great strides, in a few moments was standing panting by Lesley's side. They were alone on the white platform—alone at this end of the hotel.

The girl looked up suddenly, and her face flushed. She turned from him impatiently.

"Miss Fleetwood, there is great danger; the mountain will fall," he cried, excitedly. "You must come at once."

"Must!" repeated the girl, with a surprised lifting of the eyebrows.

"This is no time for ceremony," he answered. "The peril is near. Your mother and everyone has run out from the hotel."

"Are you afraid?" She looked at him half mockingly, half disdainfully.

"I am afraid for you. I entreat you to come at once!"

"Thank you. I prefer to stay where I am, and to be alone."

With this there came from above a shower of loose stone and dust that poured from the edge of the cliff over their heads.

The man and the girl looked into each other's eyes, defiance in hers, pleading in his. But suddenly a hot wave seemed to rush through Belever's veins. With a wild shout from below ringing in his ears he caught the girl up in his arms as if she had been a child. The mountain groaned. Belever sprang from under the arch of the grotto, and, as if that fettered giant grudged the loss of his prey, there came a great roaring, which filled the air and confused the young man's senses. With a tremendous crash a huge mass of rock plunged down from the foot of the grotto upon the very spot where, an instant ago, the two had stood, smashing into fragments the concrete pavement of the platform. The ground shook under Belever's feet; the earth seemed to quake as if it were turned to a jelly. Deafened, half blind, unable to think, he still ran on, Lesley quiet as death against his shoulder.

Running down the few steps toward the hotel, which lay below the grotto in the rock, he reached the cloisters. Something seemed compelling him to look up. The whole mountain appeared to be falling. In the

Gunner Depew in the "Hell-Hole of Germany"

I WAS pretty thin at this time and getting thinner, so I figured I might just as well have it out before I starved. Besides, I thought he ought to know that we are not used to being bawled out by German swine in this country.

So I told him so. And I said that he should not bawl Americans out, because America was neutral. He then said that as America supplied food and munitions to the allies, she was no better than the rest.

Then I said: "Do you remember the Deutschland? When she entered Baltimore and New London, she got all the cargo she wanted, didn't she?"

"Yes."

"Well, if you send over your merchant marine, they will get the same." For that answer, he gave me 10 days in the guardhouse. He did not like to be reminded that their merchant marine had to dive under to keep away from the Limeys.

I admit I was pretty flip to this officer, but who would not be, when a slick German swine officer bawled him out?

The only fun I had in the camp was while I was in the guardhouse. There were Belgians, Frenchmen, Russians, Montenegrans, Limeys, Australians, Turcos and Canadians, all talking at once and trying to make themselves understood. I could get by with the Britishers, the French, the Belgians and the Russians, but the Turcos and Montenegrans were beyond me. Some of the Britishers could talk a little French, and many of the Russians could. And quite a few of the French and Belgians could talk English, and one or two knew a little Russian. But no one in the bunch, except myself, knew more than one language except his own, so our talks were always three or four cornered, and the last man to get the news generally had it all bawled up by the time it got to him.

It was while I was in the guardhouse that Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador, visited the camp. He came to this camp about every six months, as a rule. Even in the German prison camps, the men had somehow got information about Mr. Gerard's efforts to improve the terrible surroundings in which the men lived. Some of the men at Dulmen had been confined in various other camps, and they told me that when Mr. Gerard visited these camps, all that the men did for a week or so afterwards was to talk about his visit and what he had said to them. We knew Mr. Gerard had got the Germans to make conditions better in some of the worst hell-holes in Germany, and the men were always glad when he came around. They felt they had something better to look forward to, and some relief from the awful misery.

Mr. Gerard was passing through the French barracks, and a man I knew there told him there was an American there. The Germans did not want him to see me, but he put up an argument with the commanding officer, and they finally said he could interview me. I never was so glad to see anyone as I was to see him. The picture is still with me of him coming in the door. We talked for about an hour and a half, I guess, and then he got up to go, and he said I would hear from him in about three weeks. Just think what good news that was to me. They let me out of the guardhouse, and I celebrated by doing all the damage to German sentries that I could do. The men in the camps went wild when they learned that Ambassador Gerard was there, for they said he was the only man in Germany they could tell their troubles to. The reason was that he was strong for the men, no matter what nationality, and put his heart into the work. I am one of those who cannot say enough good things about him. Like many others, if it had not been for Mr. Gerard, I would be kaput by now.

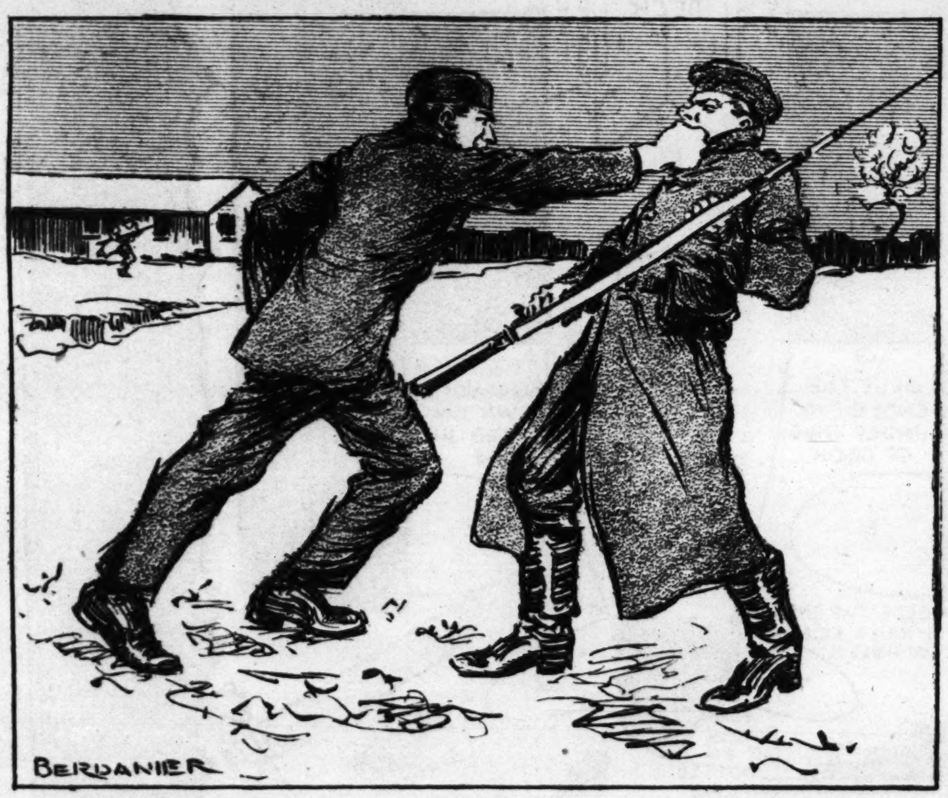
A few days after this, I was slow again as we were marching to the bread house, and the guard at the door tripped me. When I fell, I hurt my wounds, which made me hot. Now I had decided, on thinking it over, that the best thing to do was to be good, since I was expecting to be released, and I thought it would be tough luck to be killed just before I was to be released. But I had been in the American navy, and any garby of the U. S. A. would have done what I did.

He is transferred from Dulmen to Brandenburg, where in one day 400 Russian and Belgian prisoners were buried, having fallen victims to typhus and other diseases—A visit from Mr. Gerard brings him his first hope that he may obtain his release—He gets chummy with a friendly German sentry and as a result is placed on duty in a hospital, with some privileges and better food. :: :: :: ::

It must be the training we get, for when a dirty trick is pulled off on us, we get very nervous around the hands and are not always able to control them.

So I went for the sentry and walloped him in the jaw. Then I received his bayonet through the fleshy part of the forearm. Most bayonet wounds that we got were in the arm. But those arms were in front of our faces at the time. The sentries did not aim for our arms, you can bet on that. A wound of the kind I got would be nothing more than a white streak if properly attended to, but I received absolutely no attention for it, and it was a long time in healing. At that I was lucky; another bayonet stroke just grazed my stomach.

I had been at Dulmen for three weeks when we were transferred to Brandenburg, Havel, which is known as "The Hell-Hole of Germany" to the prisoners. It certainly is not too strong a name for it, either.



So I went for the sentry and walloped him in the jaw.

On the way we changed trains at Osnabruck, and from the station platform I saw German soldiers open up with machine guns on the women and children who were rioting for food.

On arriving at Brandenburg we were marched the three or four miles northwest to the camp. While we were being marched through the streets, a woman walked alongside of us for quite a ways, talking to the boys in English and asking them about the war. She said she did not believe anything the German papers printed. She said she was an English woman, from Liverpool, and that at the outbreak of the war, not being able to get out of Germany, she and her children had been put in prison, and that every day for over a week they had put her through the third degree; that her children had been separated from her and that she did not know where they were.

She walked along with us for several blocks, until a sentry heard her say something not very complimentary to the Germans, and chased her away. When we arrived at the camp, we were put into the receiving barracks and kept there six days. The condition of these barracks was not such that you could describe it. The floors were actually nothing but filth. Very few of the bunks remained; the rest had been torn down, for fuel, I suppose.

The day we were transferred to the regular prison barracks, 400 Russians and Belgians were buried. Most of them had died from cholera, typhoid and inoculations. We heard from the prisoners there before us that the Germans had come through the camps with word that there was an epidemic of black typhus and cholera, and that the only thing for the men to do was to take the serum treatment, to avoid catching these diseases. Most of the 400 men had died from the inoculations. They had taken the Germans' word, had been inoculated and had died within nine hours. Which shows how foolish it is to believe a German. None of us had any doubt but what the serum was poisonous.

The second day that we were in the regular camp the Germans strung barbed wire all around our barracks. They told us we had a case of black typhus among us. This was nothing more nor less than a bluff, for not one of us had typhus, but they put up the wire, nevertheless, and we were not allowed to go out.

One day when I was loafing around our barracks door, and not having anything particularly important to do, I packed a nice hard snowball and landed it neatly behind the ear of a little sentry not far away. When he looked around, he did not blow his whistle but began hunting for the thrower. This was strange in a German sentry, and I thought he must be pretty good stuff. When he looked around, however, all he saw was a man staggering around as if he were drunk. The man was the one who had done the throwing, all right, but the sentry could not be sure of it, for surely, no man would stay out in the open and invite accidents like that. But still, who had done it?

So I just kept staggering around, and the sentry came up to me and looked me over pretty hard. Then I thought for the first time that things might go hard with me, but I figured if I quit play-acting, it would be all over. So I staggered right up to the sentry and looked at him drunkenly, expecting every moment to get one from the bayonet.

But he was so surprised that all he could do was stare. So I stared back, pretending that I saw two of him, and otherwise acting foolish. Then I guess he realized for the first time that the chances of anybody being drunk in that camp were small—at least, for the prisoners. He was rubbing his ear all the time, but finally the thought seeped through the ivory and he began to laugh. I laughed, too, and the first thing you know he had me doing it again—that is, the imitation. One snowball was enough, I figured.

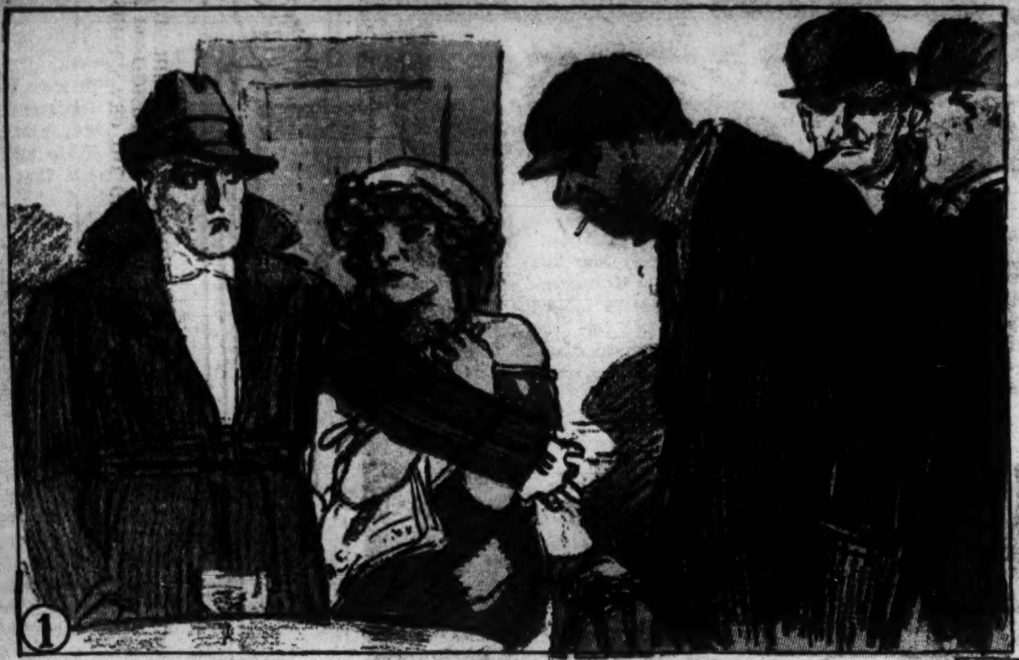
I used to talk to him quite often after that. We had no particular love for each other, but he was gamer than the other sentries, and he did not call me schweinhund every time he saw me, so we got on very well together. His name must have been Schwartz, I guess, but it sounded like "Swatts" to me, so Swatts he was, and I was "Chink" to him, as everybody else called me that.

One day he asked me if I could speak French, and I said yes. Italian? Yes. Russian? Yes. No matter what language he might have mentioned, I would have said yes, because I could smell something in the wind, and I was curious. Then he told me that if I went to the hospital and worked there, I might get better meals and would not have to go so far for them, and that my knowing all the languages I said I did would help me a great ways toward getting the job.

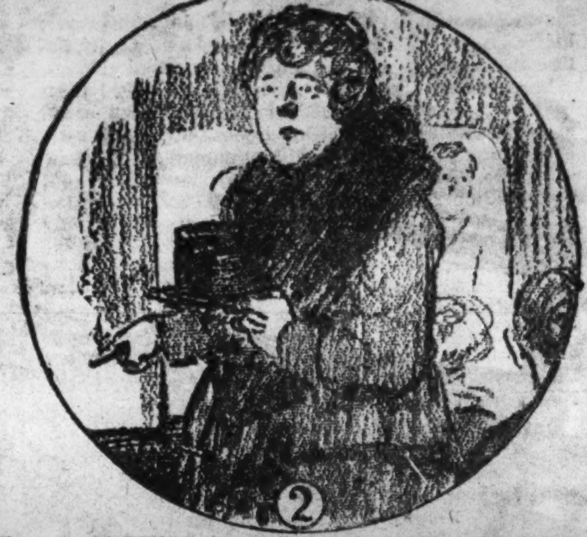
Evidently he had been told to get a man for the place, because he appointed me to it then and there. He put me to work right away. We went over to one of the barracks, where a case of sickness had been reported, and found that the invalid was a big Barbadoes negro named Jim, a fireman from the Voltaire. At one time Jim must have weighed 250 pounds, but by this time he was about two pounds lighter than a straw hat, but still black and full of pep. Light as he was, I was no "white hope," and it was all I could do to carry him to the

THE FEATURE FILM

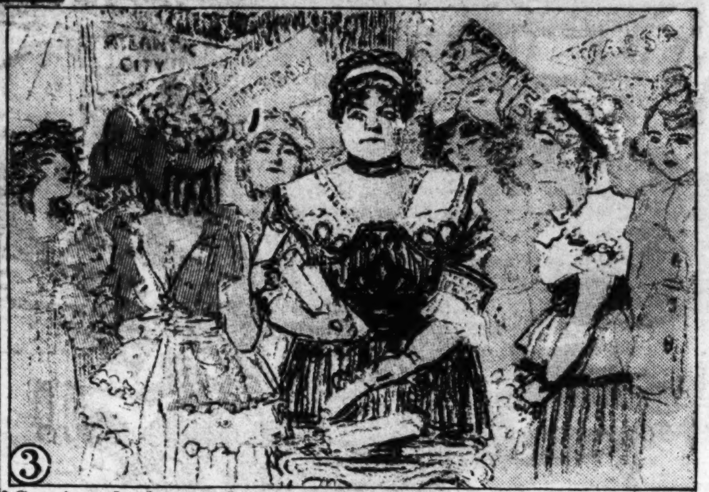
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



"The Dragnets of Fate," in which Wallace Blair, Governor-elect and reformer, meets and falls in love with Gracia, a homeless newsgirl of the slums. He protects her from the advances of a white slaver, who swears to get even by railroading Blair to Sing Sing.



Close-up of Blair being railroaded to Sing Sing, somewhat interfered with by Mrs. Simms, who discovered just then that there were two vacant seats right ahead for Frank and Nettie.



Gracia, who has in the meantime fallen heir to several millions, through the death of an uncle in Australia, spends a year at a fashionable boarding school and is here shown (second from the left) graduating with honors.

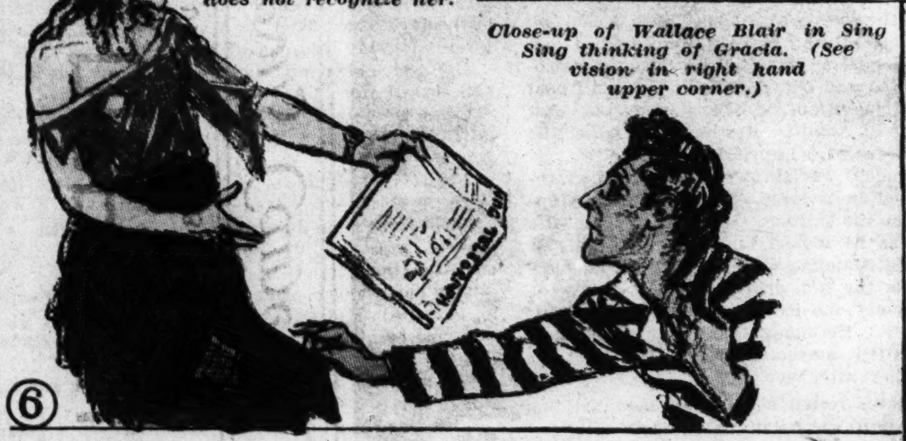
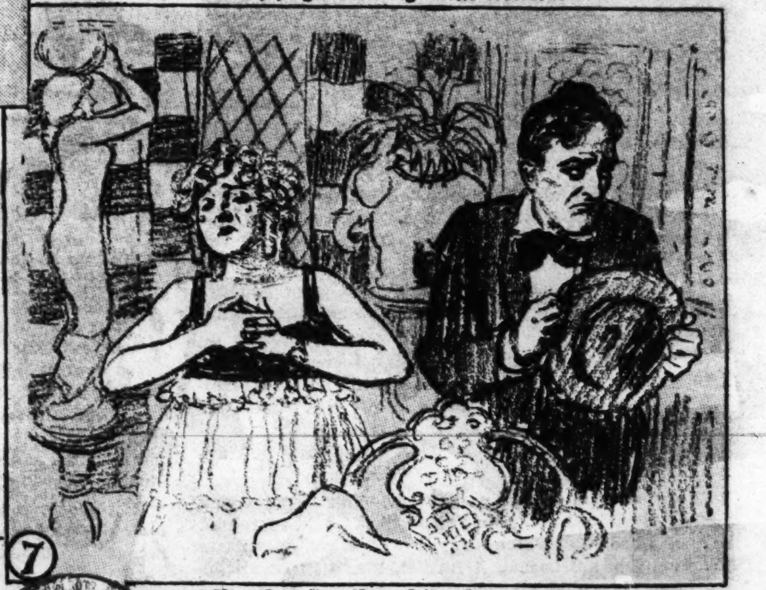
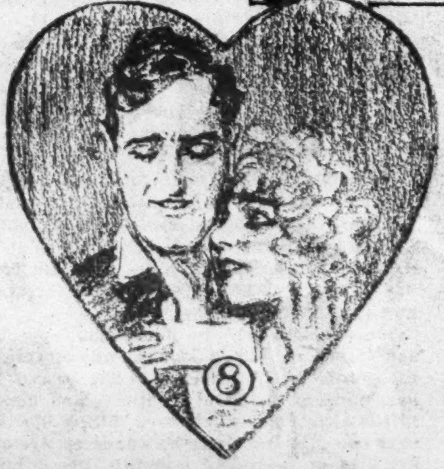
Gracia, who has become a leader in society and church circles, visits Sing Sing. She sees Wallace, who has become a drug fiend and does not recognize her.



Till she dons the newsgirl outfit which she wore on their first meeting and then Wallace remembers her. He is shown reaching out and touching her to make sure she is alive.



Shortly after the white slaver makes a deathbed confession, and Wallace is released from prison. Gracia, in her rich home in Fifth Avenue, sends for him—"You are a wealthy heiress, I am a poor pauper—I cannot ask you to share my poor future."



Next day Wallace receives an anonymous check for $10,000. No longer a beggar, he can ask Gracia to be his wife. Close-up of the lovers being passed by the Board of Censors.

How Famous Movie Stars Keep their Hair Beautiful

PROPER Shampooing is what makes beautiful hair. It brings out all the real life, lustre, natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars, theatrical people and discriminating women use

WATKINS
MULSIFIED
FOR SHAMPOOING

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product, cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL at any drug store, and a 50 cent bottle should last for months.

If your druggist does not have it, an original bottle will be mailed direct upon receipt of the price.

Splendid for Children.
